Resolution:—The officiating civil auditor, Fort William, has ruled that, during his absence in England on m.c., Mr. Hampton should be restricted to an allowance of Rs. 350 a month, being a moiety of his salary as a first class deputy collector, and should have no claim to any portion of the allowances received by him as superintendent of Abkarry and income tax assessor,* on the ground that, "as a general rule, public officers are restricted to one substantive appointment; but if they are nominated to others, these are regulated as local."

The Lieut. gov. of Bengal is of opinion that the allowance of Rs. 200 a month drawn by Mr. Hampton as Abkarry superintendent is not a personal allowance, but an allowance belonging to the office; and that it should therefore be reckoned as part of the substantive allowances of Mr. Hampton's appointment. With regard to the allowance of Rs. 250 a month drawn by Mr. Hampton in connection with the income tax, his Honour thinks it should not be included in the calculation of his absentee allowances, as it is of a temporary nature, and should be paid to the officer who acts for Mr. Hampton. His Honour, however, appears to have mistaken Mr. Hampton's position in respect to the income tax duties, as he speaks of him as an assessor, whereas his appointment is that of collector.

Mr. Hampton urges that he has a claim to the allowances of all three appointments.

The Gov. gen. in council observes that, with a view to a proper decision of this case, as well as all similar cases that may arise in future, it should be considered whether the offices are so combined that they naturally go together, and whether, on one man leaving on sick leave, a single successor can fill them all. If, for instance, a man were receiving 500, 300, and 200 rupees for doing the works of three offices, which, if he left, had to be separated and paid by 500, 400, and 300 rupees to three separate men, in such a case 500 should be looked upon as his salary, and the extra 500 as a bonus to him personally, as long as he was able to discharge the work and no longer. But if a good man by energy and method can show that three offices costing Rs. 1,200 can be done by one man at Rs. 1,000, and establish this so firmly that if he has to leave the arrangement can be continued permanently, then he has a fair right to his sick leave allowance, calculated with reference to the whole Rs. 1,000.

Mr. Hampton's case appears to H.E. in Council to be one of the last-mentioned class; nor does he consider Mr. Hampton's claim to be prejudiced by the circumstance of his appointment as income-tax collector not being precisely of the nature of appointments ordinarily looked upon as permanent appointments, seeing that it is likely to last as long as the income-tax is levied.

Separate Financial Reports

From R. Taylor, Esq., civil auditor, Punjab, to C. H. Lushington, Esq., Secretary to the Government of India, Fort William, dated Lahore, the 26th February, 1861.

SIR,—By order, Government India, Financial Department, dated 26th January, 1861, all local accountants and civil auditors were directed, after consultation, to submit separate reports as to the effect the changes of system directed by the Supreme Government would have on their respective establishments. Although I have debated the matter with the officiating accountant, there are some points which appear to me doubtful, and so prevent my giving any decided opinion.

For although Section XXIV. of the budget and audit committee's report details the returns to be made by the civil paymaster in the Resource Department, and section XXVII. those to be furnished by the deputy auditor-general, nothing is said touching those to be furnished by the civil paymaster on account of the duties now discharged by the civil auditor. If the returns now furnished by the civil auditor be still required from the civil paymaster, it is evident that the change will not lessen the labour of the establishment, or facilitate its reduction, while the effect of any alteration is shown in my report to the civil finance commission, of which I annex an extract.

Another point of doubt is touching the Resource Department. The copies of the sanctioned budget estimates to be sent to the civil paymaster under section XXI. include, of course, receipts as well as disbursements, but these will in no way enable the civil paymaster to check the district monthly estimates. Is the civil paymaster not expected to check these? If he be, copies of the sanctioned estimates of each district would be required, and a "kistbunde," and a strong establishment. But now, I apprehend, there is no such check, for the clerk, part of whose duty the charge of the Resource Department in the accountant's office is, could not alone perform this work, though he had nothing else to do. I suppose, then, that the civil paymaster will accept the district monthly estimates unless some entry be particularly noteworthy, but hope to be favoured with further instructions on this point.

Supposing, then, such detailed check be not required, it is my intention to keep the Resource Department in my own hands, until personal acquaintance with the work shall show clearly what assistance is needed, and then to report; but a writer on forty rupees will be now required for the correspondence.

My other doubts may be briefly stated:—

Section 22.—"Abstracts of cash requirements in the Military Department to be sent to the civil paymaster at the three presidencies." Then how will the civil paymaster of the Punjab be informed of the demands which may be made on him?

Who are the "civil authorities" who can call for the data on which the cash requirements of the Military Department are founded?

Section 41.—"The deputy auditor-general will send an annual abstract of cash requirements." This will be the sole point in which he will be connected with the Resource Department.

I have, &c.,

To the Civil Auditor, Punjab.—Financial Department.

SIR,—I am directed to acknowledge the receipt of your letter, No. 1,125, dated the 26th ult., with its enclosure, soliciting orders on certain points connected with the new system of audit and accounts, and in reply to communicate the following orders.

2. You are informed, with reference to paragraph 2 of your letter, that all the returns now furnished by you as civil auditor will be required to be furnished under the new system.

3. In reply to your 3rd paragraph, I am to state that it will be sufficient for you to accept the district monthly estimates, unless some entry be particularly noteworthy.

4. With reference to the 4th paragraph, I am to observe that the additional writer can be allowed only on a corresponding reduction being made in the establishment of the accountant's office.

5. Adverting to paragraph 5, the Gov. gen. in Council directs me to state that the cash requirements of the military department will be communicated to you and all the other civil paymasters by the Military Financial Department, in the form to be prescribed by the audit board, as mentioned in my letter to the address of the Finance Department, No. 2,236, dated the 1st inst., and that the civil paymasters will be at liberty to call for such statements of requirements, if they are not duly forwarded by the Military Finance Department. Also that your right in supposing that the deputy auditors-general will have no concern with the resource department, except in respect to furnishing the two annual statements of cash requirements required to be sent with the budget estimates, and on the 1st October in each year.—I have, &c.

From Lieut. col. W. Mayhew, adjt. gen. of the army, to the Off. Sec. to the Govt. of India, Military Dept., dated Camp Kurrlee, April 6, 1860.

SIR,—I am directed by the C. in C. to request you will be good enough to draw the attention of the Govt. to the fact that military officers in civil employ occasionally obtain leave of absence from the civil authorities without declaring the regulation under which the leave is taken, whereas those in military employ are, without exception, obliged on the first occasion of taking leave, to elect either the old or the new rules.

The C. in C. is of opinion that all officers in civil or military employ should be put on the same footing in respect to leave whether in or out of India.

The Military Finance Commission and the Finance Department.

Fort William, March 4.—No. 171.—From references which have come before Government there is manifestly a confusion in the minds of some officers between the Military Finance Commission and the now existing Military Finance Department.

The Gov. gen. in Council desires again to call to the attention of all departments* concerned the position and functions of the Military Finance Department, as detailed in the resolutions of Government, dated 6th July and 16th November.

Telegraph Messages.

Extract from the Proceedings of the Govt. of India, in the Financial Dept., under date March 8.

Financial Resolution, dated 27th idem.

Resolution.—On a reconsideration of the subject, H.E. the Gov. gen. in Council resolves that the orders passed in this department on the 27th ult., approving of the proposal of the Budget and Audit Committee, for the abolition of the system of cash payment for service messages by electric telegraph be suspended, and that the said system be reverted to until the issue of further orders from this department.

Court Martial.

ASSISTANT COMMISSARY F. ROSE, PUBLIC WORKS DEPARTMENT.

Adj. gen.'s Office, Simla, March 5.—At a General Court Martial assembled at Agra, on Feb. 5, Deputy Asst. Commissary Francis Rose, of the Department of Public Works, was arraigned on the following charge:—

Charge.—That he, Francis Rose, on Nov. 13, 1860, at Agra, he being then and there a warrant officer serving in India at a distance of upwards of one hundred and twenty English miles from the presidency of Fort William, did feloniously kill and slay one Kulloo.

Finding.—Guilty.

(Signed) E. DARVALL, Col., President.

Approved and Confirmed,

(Signed) HUGH ROSE, Gen.,
C. in C. in India.

Umballah, Feb. 21, 1861.

Recommendation.—The Court begs to recommend the prisoner, Deputy Asst. Commissary F. Rose, to the favourable consideration of H.E. the C. in C. on the following grounds:—

That, although the prisoner caused the death of the native Kulloo, he did so most unintentionally; that the blow struck would not, except under extraordinary circumstances, have resulted in death.

That the prisoner has borne an unblemished character for forty years, and that his kindness to natives generally is undoubted; his life having been saved at the outbreak of the mutinies by the natives themselves.

(Signed) E. DARVALL, Col., President.

REMARKS BY H.E. THE C. IN C.

In consequence of the recommendation of the Court, founded on the prisoner's character for humanity and benevolence towards natives, and the fact that the fatal result was accidental and would not have been fatal had not the deceased laboured under an organic disease; and taking into consideration the length of imprisonment which the prisoner has already undergone, I remit one-half of the imprisonment awarded to him.

Sale of Tea Plantations.

Feb. 15.—The foll. Govt. tea plantations and factories in East Gurhwal and Kumaon are offered for sale at the upset prices specified. Tenders will be received by W. Jameson, Esquire, Superintendent of the Botanical Gardens at Saharanpore, until Oct. 1, 1861, and the highest offer above the upset price will be accepted.

1. "Paoree," in East Gurhwal, about 100 miles from the Plains. It is about 350 acres in extent, of which 130 acres are under cultivation, and the remainder waste; but the greater portion of it fitted for tea cultivation.

There are on the estate two slated houses, a large slated tea factory, godowns, &c., and the stock and block of the factory are complete for tea operations. The yield last season was 13,000 lbs. of tea and 200 maunds of seed.

The estate will be sold in fee simple, free of all demand on account of land revenue at an upset price of one lac of rupees.

2. "Bhurtpore," in Kumaon, close to Bheemtal, ten miles from the Plains, twelve miles from the sanatorium of Nynce Tal, and thirty miles from Almora.

It is 331 acres in extent, but only 31 are under cultivation, and a very small portion of the remainder is fitted for tea cultivation.

There are on the estate a slated house, factory, godown, &c. The stock and block of the factory are complete and in full working order.

The yield last season was 1,450 lbs. of tea and 170 maunds of seed.

This estate will be sold in fee simple, free of all demand on account of land revenue, at an upset price of Rs. 20,000.

The plantations will be transferred to the purchasers on Dec. 1, 1861, on or before which date the purchase money must be paid at the general treasury in Calcutta.

The Mounted Corps of the Army.—Reductions.

Fort William, March 5.—No. 172.—The following resolution is published for general information and guidance:—

Military Department, March 5.—Resolution.—H.E. the Gov. gen. in Council has under his consideration the letters and reports in which the Military Finance Commission discuss the question as to the number of horses which it is necessary to keep up for the permanent establishment of the mounted corps of the army.

Owing to the number of men who are in hospital, or on duty which does not allow them to turn out of parade, or who are otherwise incapacitated from attendance, the number of horses required to mount every available man in a dragoon regiment is always considerably below the number of men borne as effective on the returns, and, if a regiment has to proceed on active service, the difference is of course increased when there are large numbers of horses superfluous to the actual requirements of the regiment, and requiring attendance in stables.

For this reason, as well as from considerations of economy, the proportion of horses allowed to a mounted corps in England is always considerably below the effective strength of the men. The reasons which have of late years rendered it necessary to import horses in unusually large numbers no longer exist. The ordinary sources of supply are amply sufficient for the ordinary wants of the Indian army, and H.E. the Gov. gen. in Council has therefore resolved that a similar rule to that which obtains in England shall be acted on in India with regard to the proportion of horses to men allowed to all mounted branches to the service.

It appears that some months ago H.E. Lieut. gen. Sir William Mansfield, with the concurrence of the Government of Bombay, ordered the establishment of horses for European cavalry in that presidency to be reduced to 10 per cent. below the effective strength of the men as an experimental measure. H.E. the Gov. gen. in Council has lately had the results of this experiment before him, and finds that the reports of Lieut. col. Shute, commanding her Majesty's 6th Inniskilling dragoons, and Lieut. col. Seagar, commanding her Majesty's 8th hussars, two experienced officers of her Majesty's service, are so entirely favourable as to the results of the experiment in their respective regiments, that H.E. the C. in C. at Bombay has recommended a still further reduction, and that the proportion of horses be in future fixed at 15 per cent. below the effective strength of men in every mounted corps, whether European or native cavalry.

H.E. the Gov. gen. in Council has resolved that this proportion be fixed for the future, as the established strength of horses in time of peace in the cavalry of the regular service, whether European or native, in India, with this further restriction, that whatever the effective strength of men, the total strength of horses shall not exceed five hundred horses per regiment of British cavalry, one hundred and seventy-five per troop of horse artillery, and one hundred and twenty per battery of royal artillery, and one hundred and five per battery of Indian artillery.

H.E. the C. in C. in India, and the Governments of Madras and Bombay, will be requested to carry out the reduction to the extent proposed by weeding out and disposing of the least efficient horses, corresponding reductions being also made in the number of syces and other attendants.

Ordered that copies of this resolution be sent to the Governments of Madras and Bombay for information and guidance, and to the departments noted in the margin.*

The Military Finance Department will call for returns showing the total number of horses fit for duty at present kept up with all mounted corps, and at the various stud depots and remount agencies, how many will be reduced under the present orders, and what arrangements will require to be made for an adequate provision of horses to supply probable casualties during the next two years.

Leave to the Uncovenanted.

March 15.—From C. H. Lushington, Esq., Secy. to the Govt. of India. Financial Department, to the Civil Auditor, Punjab, Fort William, March 15, 1861.

Sir,—I am directed to acknowledge the receipt of your letter, No. 1,105, dated 16th ultimo, inquiring whether preparatory leave can be allowed to an uncovenanted servant, who wishes to proceed to England on private affairs leave, under Section VIII. of the Uncovenanted Leave Rules.

2. In reply, I am desired to inform you that as the provisions of Clause 2 of Section VIII. require the computation of absence from the date of quitting post to that of return thereto, no preparatory leave can be allowed to an uncovenanted servant when he takes leave of absence under the above section.—I have, &c.,

Secy. to the Govt. of India.

Organisation of Moveable Columns.

No. 247. of 1861.—Resolution.—In the letters noted in the margin, the Military Finance Commission submitted to Government several arrangements respecting the organisation of the moveable columns.†

* Adjutant general, quartermaster general, commissary general, superintendent of studs, Military Finance Department.

† Military Finance Commission, No. 2,153, dated August 10, 1860. Ditto, No. 2,499, dated September 14, 1860. Paragraphs 30-35.

In paragraphs 18 to 23 of the letter from the Military department, to the Adjutant general of the army, No. 782, of the 18th October, 1860, annexed to this resolution, Government expressed its concurrence generally in the views of the commission, and in paragraphs 20 and 21 enjoined arrangements by which the greater efficiency of the moveable columns was insured.

It is now resolved to carry into effect the several arrangements proposed, and it is accordingly directed that strength and composition of the columns in the three presidencies shall, for the present, be organised as follows:—

BENGAL.

9 batteries of artillery field pieces, 54.
9 battalions of European infantry, 7,650 non-commissioned rank and file.
6 squadrons of European cavalry, 840 non-commissioned rank and file.
12 battalions native infantry, 8,490 non-commissioned rank and file.
6 squadrons native cavalry, 780 non-commissioned rank and file.

With seven days' supplies of all kinds for Europeans and two days' rations, &c., for native ranks as well as horses, together with spare ammunition at sixty rounds per man for infantry, and twenty rounds for cavalry, sick carriage, &c., being provided at five per cent. of the above strength.

MADRAS AND BOMBAY.

The total strength of the moveable columns at both these Presidencies is not together to exceed one-third of the strength fixed for the Bengal Presidency; but with such modifications in the strength of the different arms composing the columns, as from the local circumstances may appear necessary, supplies, ammunition, and sick carriage being in the same proportion as ordered for Bengal.

The C. in C. in India, and the C.s in C. of the Madras and the Bombay armies will, under the approval of the Government of India and of the Governments of Madras and Bombay, fix upon the stations at which these columns shall be kept up in the Presidencies of Bengal, Madras, and Bombay; and will likewise define the strength and composition of each column, and the arrangements necessary, in conformity with the views of the Govt. of India, for keeping them in a state of efficiency and in readiness for immediate movement. The Commissary-General will, in pursuance of this resolution, take immediate measures to reduce the establishments now maintained for moveable columns to the scale necessary for the strength above stated, and distribute them to the stations that H.E. the C. in C. may fix on, as those which, from the paucity of ordinary carriage or other circumstances most require such provision.

Ordered that a copy of the above resolution be transmitted to the govts. and authorities named in the margin,* for information, with a request that the reductions may be promptly carried out, and the expenditure to be incurred for the moveable columns under this arrangement, as well as the stations to which they are distributed, early reported; the civil, political, and military conditions on which the several columns are formed being also stated.

The mil. finance dept. will issue to the departments under its control such subsidiary orders respecting the financial arrangements involved in the above resolution as may be necessary, and will suggest any for which the authority of the Govt. of India may be required.

Extract from a letter from the sec. to the Govt. of India, mil. dept., to the adjt. gen. of the army, No. 782, dated Oct. 18, 1860.

18. The letter No. 2,153 of the 10th of August last, on the subject of moveable columns, alluded to in paragraph 30, was communicated to you with my letter No. 714, of the 20th August, 1860. To some extent the views of the Commander-in-Chief on the moveable columns have been conveyed in your letter No. 1,446a, of the 8th September last.

19. The commission proceed, in paragraphs 30 to 35 inclusive, to enter particularly into the subject of moveable columns, and the total strength at which they might be maintained in the three Presidencies. The Governor-General begs to know whether the Commander-in-Chief has any objection to offer to the scheme of the commission in regard to moveable columns in Bengal in particular, and also in regard to those in Madras and Bombay, the Governments of those Presidencies have already been addressed on this subject, and their attention to the practicability of reducing the moveable columns to the extent proposed by the Military Finance Commission will further be specially desired.

20. In connection with this fact of the subject, I am directed to state, for the information of the C. in C., that it has been suggested by the commission that, in order to enable commanding officers and others to become personally acquainted with the actual requirements of moveable columns, with the arrangements for their equipments, their carriage, and the necessary supplies of all description, and to ensure the active and intelligent co-operation of all the parties concerned, whether belonging to regiments of which the columns are composed, or departments employed in their equipment and march, a practice may be forthwith established of ordering out each moveable column occasionally for the purpose of exercise, that in times of tranquillity they may become so accustomed to move, that, when required to turn out under the sudden call of duty to quell any disturbance, every one may know his place and clearly comprehend what he has to do, and that confusion and disorder may thereby be avoided.

21. The Gov. gen. in Council considers this to be a most useful suggestion, and one well calculated to ensure the efficiency of the moveable columns.

22. H.E. in Council will be prepared to sanction the expense which must attend the exercise of the moveable columns and other incidental outlay; satisfied that the money so disbursed will far more than repay its value by the greatly increased efficiency of the available force, and the perfect readiness at all points for immediate calls of service, which will thus be acquired by the officers and men and the whole of the establishments attached to moveable columns.

23. Under this system the cattle establishment attached to moveable columns will possess all the advantages of a transport train or baggage corps with this essential superiority over any such train that commanding officers will have under their own constant observation the cattle on which they are to depend, and that the instruction of the drivers of the cattle will proceed simultaneously with that of the troops with which they are to be associated on service in the field.

H.E. the Gov. in Council directs that civil authorities do not in future interfere with the estates of the persons above described further than in securing their effects for delivery to the nearest military authority, in localities where no military officers reside, reporting their proceedings in such cases without delay, for the information of the mil. sec. to Govt.

The Late &amp; Future Commanders-in-Chief.

Fort St. George, March 22.—No. 103.—In directing the publication in gen. orders of the foll. minute by the Rt. Hon. the Gov. gen. of India relative to the resignation of Lieut. gen. Sir Patrick Grant, K.C.B., of the office of C. in C. of the Madras army, H.E. the Gov. in Council has much gratification in adding the expression of the high sense entertained by this Govt. of the valuable services rendered by Sir Patrick Grant during the entire period of his connection with it:—

Minute by the Rt. Hon. the Gov. Gen.

A letter has just been received from the Govt. of Madras, announcing that H.E. Lieut. gen. Sir Patrick Grant proposes to resign the command of the Madras army, and to proceed to England by the first steamer in March.

Sir Patrick Grant's duties, during the time that I have held the gov. of India, have not been confined to the Madras pres., but have, upon one memorable occasion, brought him into direct and most intimate relation with the Supreme Govt. in Calcutta, and as the services which by his ripe professional experience and his thorough knowledge of Bengal and of its army he was enabled to render to India, at that critical time, were very great. I am desirous that Sir Patrick Grant should not lay down his command without a distinct and cordial acknowledgment of those services being placed on the records of the Supreme Govt. The assistance which the Govt. of India received from him, from the time when, in June, 1857, it called upon him to assume the command vacant by Gen. Anson's death, to the time of Lord Clyde's arrival in India, will not be forgotten by any member of that gov't.

I do not speak of Sir Patrick Grant's discharge of his subsequent duties after his return to Madras, for these, of course, were not performed under the eye of the Governor general; but I cannot forbear to say that the earliest judicious and successful exertions made by him, in common with his colleagues, to reduce the military expenditure of that presidency, entitle him to the best thanks of the Governor gen. in Council. (Signed) CANNING.

Feb. 25, 1861.

No. 104.—The foll. extract from a mily. despatch from the Right hon. the Secy. of State for India to the Govt. is published in G.O.:—

Despatch dated Feb. 18, 1861, No. 31.

Her Majesty has been pleased to approve of Major General Sir James Hope Grant, K.C.B., being placed upon the staff of the army in India as a lieut. gen., with a view to his commanding the troops in Madras, in succession to Lieut. gen. Sir Patrick Grant, K.C.B.

2. The Act of the 16th and 17th Vict., cap. 95, directed that any person "hereafter appointed by her Majesty to be Commander in Chief of her forces in any presidency in India, shall, by virtue of such appointment, be also the C. in C. of the Company's forces under such presidency."

3. Consequent on this enactment, the warrant or commission hitherto issued from this office to a Commander in Chief is no longer necessary, and will be discontinued.

4. Due intimation will be conveyed to you in the proper department of the appointment of Lieut. general Sir Hope Grant to a seat at the council of the government of your presidency.

Batta to Uncovenanted Servants.

Fort St. George, Mar. 12.—In December, 1859, the Board of Revenue submitted, with their recommendation, a letter from the collector of Malabar, requesting that the rate of batta payable to uncovenanted servants of his establishment might be increased. The paper was referred for report to Mr. Pelly, who replies in the present letter. He supports the recommendation not only for Malabar but for all the districts; but the new scale of rates which he proposes differs somewhat from Mr. Grant's.

Mr. Pelly's rates are a modification of those proposed by Mr. Ricketts, being much simpler and somewhat lower. He gives a statement comparing the financial effect of all four sets of rates; viz., the present rates, and those proposed by Mr. Grant, Mr. Ricketts, and himself, on the assumption of certain servants being on circuit for a certain time. The result is, that under his own scale the payments would be 18½ per cent. above the present rates, 29¼ per cent. on Mr. Grant's, and 85½ by Mr. Ricketts's.

The ground of the recommendation that the existing rates of batta should be revised, is the increase in the hire of coolies and carts. Strictly speaking, this is not a valid reason, unless it can be shown that the existing rates are really insufficient for the necessary additional expenses of servants on circuit, and this has not been attempted. Yet considering the certain fact that prices and wages are very much higher now than when the rates were settled thirty-five years ago, considering also Mr. Ricketts' opinion, and the high rates actually drawn in other parts of India, as appears from his report, the Government think some increase may properly be allowed here. The subjoined scale, which is somewhat simpler even than Mr. Pelly's, will, in their opinion, be suitable and sufficient, and the Government directs its adoption in place of the existing scale:—

Below 8 Rupees pay	...	1 Anna daily.
100 and below 150	...	1-0 "
200 and below 250	...	1-8 "
250 and upwards at the rate fixed for Deputy Collectors.

The lowest rate will comprehend all of the Peon class, including dafayats, and the next rate would take in dafadars, muchis, &c. Up to a recent time peons and dafadars, and all other servants drawing less than Rs. 10 a month had no claim to batta.

The remaining rates are generally higher than the present rates, but to the highest class of all in the list there is a reduction. It seems to the Government, however, that the rate proposed for that class, viz. Rs. 1-8-0 daily, is ample. The rate for deputy-collectors of the third and fourth classes is only Rs. 2 a-day. The reason why the batta at present is so high for servants, from Rs. 200 to Rs. 250 pay, is that the same rate applied to all head sarishtadars up to Rs. 700 a-month. The rate is just double that next below it, which is certainly not reasonable, nor is it at all necessary when it applies, as in the scale given above in paragraph 8, to only a limited range of salary.

Mr. Pelly reverts to Mr. Ricketts' plan of giving higher rates to Christians, of whatever nation, than to Hindoos and Mussulmans, but he does not advocate it. It appears to Government also that it is inexpedient to establish such a difference. The ground of the proposal is that Hindoos and Mussulmans travelling in the districts can find accommodation at less cost than Christians. This is true to a certain extent, as respects Hindoos at least, but the Government believe the difference is not great, and they believe that the fairness of the distinction proposed would not be recognised, and that it would create discontent.

Mr. Pelly advocates, with Mr. Ricketts, the abrogation of the rule which prevents members of the Collector's Establishment from drawing batta for more than ten days' halt at one time and place. He argues that as there is no such restriction on covenant officers, there ought to be none also on their subordinates. The Government agree in his opinion, and accordingly direct that batta shall in future be drawn by uncovenanted officers for the whole period of their absence on duty from head-quarters.

It is not intended by this order to modify the rules as to the classes of servants entitled to batta, or the occasion on which they are so entitled. Thus Taluq servants will not be entitled to it, or peons of the Collectors' or Assistant, &c. Collectors' Offices, except when on circuit with the Kacheri.

The Judges of the Small Cause Court.

On the 21st January, Mr. G. E. Cowe, third judge of this Court, addressed the following letter to Government, dated from Dublin:—

I have the honour to request that you will submit to the Right Hon. the Governor in Council, my respectful remonstrance against the order of the late appointments conferred on Mr. Maurice Cross, second judge, and Mr. Runganadum Shastry, acting second judge of the Small Cause Court.

It will be seen that in the case of the former gentleman, I have been permanently superseded, and in the event of my return to Madras during Mr. Runganadum's tenure of office, I must take my seat as third judge, in a position inferior to his.

I venture to hope that these appointments have been made without the Government being aware of their effect upon an old servant, absent at the time from ill-health, contracted in their service, and I humbly pray for a reconsideration of the subject, when, if my claims are considered substantial, I respectfully suggest that the order of the appointments may be altered, by nominating me to the second seat, which may be done without offence to Mr. Cross, who did not solicit the office, and who is but young in the service.

On this letter the following order was passed on the 9th inst.:—

In the above letter, Mr. Cowe, third judge of the Madras Court of Small Causes, remonstrates against the appointments of Mr. M. Cross to be second judge, and Runganadum Shastry to be acting second judge of the Court, as involving his supersession. He prays that the arrangement may be reconsidered, and that he may be nominated second judge.

2. H.E. the Governor in Council observes that the practice in respect to the present Court of Small Causes, has been to style the two junior judges second and third judge respectively.

3. H.E. considers this practice to be incorrect and inconvenient. It is not that followed in other courts where the salaries, powers, and functions of the judges are precisely on an equality. Thus, the judges of the Court of Sudder and Foujdaree Adawlut are termed simply judges without distinction of first, second, or third judge. The same is the case with the two puisne judges of the Supreme Court in Calcutta—and was the case in Madras when there were two puisne judges in the Supreme Court there.

4. The Government direct that, for the future, the practice observed in the courts above referred to, be followed in the Madras Court of Small Causes. According to this, the Court will be considered as consisting of three judges—the senior judge on a higher rate of salary, and with, in some degree, special functions, and two judges who will in all respects—rank, as well as salary, functions and power—be on a footing of strict equality. Each will henceforth be known as judge simply, but neither as second nor third. When the two judges have to act together, the senior in date of appointment will have precedence.

5. This will remedy the grievance of which Mr. Cowe complains, and this order will be communicated to him in reply to his letter under date 21st January last.

Repair of Standards and Colours.

March 13.—No. 24.—The G. O. C. C., No. 57, dated 28th August, 1854, is cancelled, and the following is to be substituted for para. 14, page 427 of the general regulations—order books to be corrected accordingly.

14. When standards or colours require to be replaced, a report of their state and of the time they have been in use, is to be made by commanding officers to the Adjutant general of the army, accompanied by indents in duplicate of the prescribed form. The indents if sanctioned will be countersigned by the adjutant general and passed on to the commissary general at the Presidency.

When the above articles require to be repaired, should the regiment be at or near to a station where there is a commissariat department, the officer commanding will forward the colours to the commissariat officer, who will cause the required repairs to be executed, and report particulars to the commissary general at the Presidency.

When stationed at a distance from a commissariat department, with local appliances at command, officers commanding will have the necessary repairs executed on the spot, forwarding a contingent bill to the clothing agent, through the commissary general at the Presidency, for sanction.

When the requisite repairs cannot be executed locally, a report of their nature and extent is to be made by commanding officers to the Adjutant general of the army, who, in the event of such repairs being sanctioned, will notify the same to the officer commanding, who will then forward the colours to the commissary general at the Presidency, report the circumstance to the superintendent and agent for army clothing, and transmit at the same time a copy of the Adjutant general's letter sanctioning the measure.

Materials provided and workmanship executed at the Presidency to be subject to the examination and approval of the superintendent and agent for army clothing.

Amendment of the Stamp Act—Policies.

The following copy of a letter from the Government of India is published for general information and guidance:—

From W. Grey, Esq., Secretary to the Government of India, to Messrs. Jardine, Skinner, and Co., dated Fort William, March 2, 1861.

Gentlemen.—With reference to your letters dated Nov. 29 and Dec. 1 last, I am directed to inform you that it is the intention of Government to introduce, with as little delay as possible, a Bill to amend the present Stamp Law, Act XXXVI. of 1860, and that the points adverted to in your communications will be carefully and attentively considered.

2. With regard to these points as they are affected by the present law, I am desired to observe as follows:—

1st. With regard to policies of marine assurance, it is not necessary, so far as Government is concerned, that the duplicate and triplicate of a policy of insurance, viewing them as copies of the original, should be stamped, but as the law stands it is requisite that the original policy should bear the stamp of full value, and that the duplicate and triplicate, if stamped at all, should bear the same.

2ndly. With regard to letters of cover, I am directed to state that if the clause proposed in your letter is inserted, so as to make the letter null and void, if a policy is not taken out before the vessel sails, the Government will not desire to enforce payment of stamp duty on the letters of cover, but it will be for the parties concerned to consider whether risk of loss may not be incurred by omitting to stamp documents which the law requires to be stamped.

3rdly. With respect to the use of adhesive stamps, I am to explain that, as the law at present stands, the use of adhesive stamps can only be permitted upon those documents in regard to which the use of such stamps is expressly authorised by the law. The extended use of adhesive stamps has been urged upon the Government from other quarters, and the question will be fully considered on the amendment of the Stamp Act.—I have, &c., W. GREY, Secy. to the Govt. of India.

EXPEDITION AGAINST THE KOOKIES.

From W. S. Seton-Karr, Esq., Secretary to the Govt. of Bengal, to the Officiating Commisr. of the Chittagong division (No. 492A, dated March 4, 1861).

SIR,—I am directed to acknowledge the receipt of your letters, as noted in the margin,* and to convey to you the orders and observations of the Lieut. gov. on the late expedition against the Kookies.

2. The various enclosures from Capt. Raban, in comd. of the expedition, and from Capt. Magrath, superint. of hill tribes, have been carefully considered. The Lieut. gov. will be glad to receive the memorandum promised by Capt. Raban in his enclosure to your letter No. 2A, dated 10th ult., to the address of Capt. Pughie, with regard to the future protection of the frontier.

3. The march of the military police through a country quite unknown, and difficult in the most extreme degree, which has been safely and successfully conducted, reflects the highest credit on Capt. Raban, and on all the officers and men of the mil. police under him, as well as on Capt. Magrath, the superint. of hill tribes. The Lieut. gov. desires that his cordial thanks and approbation may be communicated to all concerned. The Lieut. gov. does not doubt the moral effect which will be produced by this penetration through the heart of hills and jungles heretofore regarded as inaccessible, to Rutten Poa's place of residence; by the complete destruction of his village and stores; by the dispersion, with the loss of all their baggage and property, of the tribe which was coming to join him; as well as by the exemplary punishment, by Jemadar Moosuddy Khan, of the 1st mil. police batt., and a small party of that batt. under him, of the body of Kookies attacked whilst returning from their murderous incursion into Independent Tipperah. He trusts that these operations, thus ably conducted, will have the permanent good effect of inducing these savages to abstain from further incursions into the plains, by teaching them that they are no longer beyond the reach of punishment.

4. The Lieut. gov. observes that the want of an organized and resolute body of Coolies, and the cowardice of the friendly Kookies engaged as allies, made it impossible for Capt. Raban to extend his march to a greater distance into the hills; but he is satisfied that all that could be attempted, with prudence, under the circumstances, was attempted, whilst nothing was attempted which has not been thoroughly well performed.

5. The conduct of the jemadar, Moosuddy Khan, whose successful attack has been reported separately by Capt. Fagan to the inspector of police battalions, is very praiseworthy. The Lieut. gov.'s special commendation may be communicated to this native officer, who well merits the promotion with which it is intended, on the first opportunity, to reward him.

6. You are requested to convey to the Kalindee Rance, and to the two other persons mentioned in the 26th paragraph of Captain Magrath's letter of 8th February, the thanks of Government for the aid afforded by them in the supply of carriage; and you will express to the Poang the disappointment of the Lieutenant-Governor at his failure to render sufficient assistance in the matter of coolies. The Lieutenant-Governor is of opinion that it will be advisable, before any similar future expeditions are undertaken, to give great attention beforehand to the selection and organization, under petty officers, of a reliable body of coolies, which have been shown to be, for the interior of these hills, the only means of carriage.

7. Any spies or captives taken in the expedition should be detained for the present and kindly treated; but you are empowered to exchange them for any of our villagers carried away by the Kookies, or to employ them as a means of communication with their tribe, should you think it advisable to do so.

8. The Lieut. gov. is convinced, from Capt. Raban's reports, that any further operations, on an extended scale, would have been impracticable during the present season, and he therefore approves of that officer's having returned to Chittagong. He desires, however, that Capt. Raban will provide defensively for the security of the country bordering on the hills in such manner as he may think advisable. Strong posts should be maintained at such positions in the plains as may appear suitable. What is to be done now is to defend the frontier from further incursions as well as we can with the means at our disposal. Capt. Raban should, for the present, remain at Chittagong in com. of the force, as recommended by the inspector of police battalions, in his letter to Govt. dated the 23rd ult., No. 89. The Sikh detachment can also remain on the frontier for the present, being moved to Comillah; but the detachment of the Kamroop regt. may be now dispensed with, and may return to its station.

9. You have been already addressed, in my letter dated the 25th ult., No. 44A, as to the propriety of rigorously enforcing certain sections of the Arms' Act; and should you think it advisable, in communication with Capt. Raban, further measures may be adopted for supplying fire-arms to the police and shikaries in villages on the frontier, with a view to their being able to defend themselves and their property. You are aware that it is the policy of the Government to employ the bordering hill chiefs to check the approaches of the more remote and savage tribes. Capt. Magrath's constant attention must be turned to this object.

10. You have already been advised, in a letter of the 9th ult., No. 331A, of the course to be pursued towards the Rajah of Tipperah. The Lieut. gov. would wish to have as much further information as may be available regarding the asserted complicity of the various Chukma Dewans, noticed in the 16th para. of Capt. Raban's letter of the 14th. The evidence on which their complicity has been assumed should be more explicitly stated.

11. The Lieut. gov. desires me to convey to you his thanks for the attention you have given to the arrangements connected with this successful expedition, and his full approval of all your proceedings in connection with it.

12. Copies of this letter are enclosed for communication to Capt. Raban and Capt. Magrath respectively, and a copy has also been furnished to the Inspector of Police Battalions.

THINKING FOR THE NATIVES.

MR. JOHN DICKINSON, Honorary Secretary to the India Reform Society, has published a clumsily-constructed pamphlet to prove that the present famine in the North-West Provinces is chiefly owing to the presumption of the governing classes in "thinking for the natives." At the same time, he boasts of a far greater display of presumption on his own part, and on that of "a few earnest friends," in taking upon themselves to think for the Government. According to this exceedingly self-satisfied gentleman, whatever ameliorations have of late years been introduced into the administration of India are mainly due to the agitation organised by himself, with the aid of the aforesaid handful of "earnest friends." "I gladly admit," he complacently remarks, "that we have got something done," and this "something" he appears to define as the "decided progress and improvement in the state of public opinion" that has taken place since 1850. To condescend to details, India is indebted to Mr. John Dickinson and the Reform Society for "the admirable proclamation of Lord Stanley; Lord Canning's recent admission of the right of adoption; his arrangement with the Talookdars of Oude; his appointment of honorary magistrates; and the declared intention of the Secretary of State for India to introduce Bills for reforming the Judicial Administration, for opening the Covenanted Civil Service, and for establishing Local Legislative Councils in which natives shall take their place." Few of our readers, we imagine, were previously aware of the circumference of the wheel set in motion by this very small fly. So swiftly did it revolve, and so dense was the dust thrown up in its rapid career, that we confidently hope to be pardoned if we too overlooked the minute animal adjusting its wings while clinging to a fellow. "Aloue I did it, boy!" If the Volskians were "fluttered," it was not the mutiny that did it, but the urgent remonstrances of Mr. John Dickinson and his "few earnest friends." Still, the country and the House of Commons are only half roused from their habitual indifference as to questions relating to India. They do not ask for Reform, though the results of their inveterate apathy thus far have been "Wars, Pestilence, Pauperisation, the Practice of Torture, Financial Deficits, Rebellion, Famine," and there are worse calamities yet to follow. The prevention of the awful catastrophe impending over our Indian empire is, unfortunately, beyond Mr. John Dickinson's power. "I can do no more," he sorrowfully observes, but then suddenly raising his drooped head, he proudly exclaims, "I have done my duty to India!" But as he declines to think any more for the Government, what is to become of the unhappy natives? Is it not probable that the authorities will revert to their pernicious habit of "thinking for the natives," from which such dire consequences have ensued in times not long past, and in our own day this most disastrous famine? As we have already stated, on the authority of Mr. John Dickinson, the dreadful calamity now ravaging the usually fertile Doab has been mainly caused by the abominable presumption of the Government in thinking for its subjects. Lord Cornwallis, we are told, was the first "thinker for the natives," and "his panacea was a limitation of the Government demand for land-tax," and in that spirit he made the perpetual settlement of Lower Bengal. "Twenty years afterwards arose a new school of 'thinkers for the natives,'" "and this time it was the North-West Provinces that felt the scourge." The Talookdars were "rooted out"—a grievous blunder, we freely admit, but we suspect that the motive was rather political than philanthropical. The North-West settlement, whatever pretext might be put forth, was the fruit of thinking for ourselves rather than for the natives, its real object being the subversion of the landed aristocracy. Then, again, the "want of water, which was the immediate cause of famine in the North-West Provinces," is traced to the "mistake of assuming that the natives can never be trusted to think for themselves." It was thus that the great tanks, constructed many a year before the foundation of the Anglo-Indian empire, have been allowed to fall to decay, and "become sources of disease instead of fertility." It is true, other works of irrigation have been commenced, but on defective principles, and, in short, it is "enough to sicken any intelligent man to see the way in which the Government of India is carried on by 'thinkers for the natives.'" It has done what it ought not to have done, and has left undone what it ought to have done. What, then, is the remedy for this sad state of things? Luckily we have an answer furnished by Mr. John Dickinson himself previous to abdicating his monopoly of thinking aright for the natives of India:—

"1st. To renounce our exclusive claim to 'think for the natives,' and admit them to a leading share in the civil administration of their own country, for which they are so well qualified that we cannot conduct it successfully without them.

"2nd. To reduce the land-tax in the North-West Provinces, and establish the people's proprietary right to the land.

"3rd. To adopt a definite policy for public works, on the basis proposed by Colonel Strachey.

"4th. To urge the Indian minister to introduce, and help him to carry, the three measures he has promised: for the reform of the judicial system; for opening the Covenanted Civil Service to the Natives; and for establishing Local Legislative Councils in the different presidencies."

Great is the India Reform Society, and Mr. John Dickinson is its prophet. In 1852 he predicted, he says, what came to pass in 1857. Let no one, therefore, fail to pay heed to his present words, for they are also his last. His work is over. He has done his duty, and can do no more. By thinking for the natives the Government produced a mutiny and a famine. By thinking for the Government Mr. John Dickinson has rendered rebellion madness, and drought an impossibility. Shall he not have a statue?

THE EAST INDIA IRRIGATION COMPANY.

SOME fatality must surely attend all attempts to undertake great public works in India by means of private capital and enterprise. If official statements were ever entitled to much credit, one would be justified in supposing that nothing was more anxiously desired by Government than the settlement of Europeans in India. Ever and anon the Secretary of State, or some other member of Parliament reasonably regarded as an exponent of his views, assures the House of Commons and the country at large that the development of the vast natural wealth of our Indian possessions is the object of the highest solicitude to the responsible authorities, and that every possible encouragement will be gladly afforded to every feasible scheme suggested for that purpose. To reclaim waste lands and increase the fertility of the soil already brought under cultivation is everywhere considered a work worthy of all commendation, and nowhere more so than in the parched and thirsty plains of Asia. The vast outlay and the slow returns thence accruing render the construction of canals, whether for the transport of goods or for irrigation, a task beyond the means of private individuals, and even hazardous for a wealthy company. Notwithstanding, however, the many obvious objections to embarking money on such undertakings, a number of respectable gentlemen were found willing to essay the adventure. Under the style and title of the "East India Irrigation and Canal Company," they banded themselves together for the avowed purpose of making two ears of corn ripen where scarce one was reaped before, and of converting unproductive jungle into fertile fields. But previous to subscribing their own money and inviting the co-operation of the public, they resolved to make assurance doubly sure by obtaining the direct support of the Government. A correspondence was accordingly opened with the Secretary of State for India, who readily promised all that was asked of him provided certain conditions were acceded to. These were that the works should be constructed to the satisfaction of the local Government; that no charge should be made for the land required for those works until there was a clear profit of five per cent., but that its full value should then be paid by instalments; and that "the prices chargeable for water supplied for irrigation or for other purposes, and the tolls, rates, and fares chargeable for navigation of the company's canals, and for the conveyance of passengers, animals, and goods thereon, shall be fixed by an Act of the Indian Legislature before the works are commenced, and that all water supplied for irrigation shall be sold to the Government alone." These conditions being fulfilled, the whole profits of the works were to belong to the company. It will be seen that the only real encouragement afforded by the Government was in facilitating the purchase of land. It is not denied that this extension of the period of payment would have been advantageous to the company, but it was a boon that positively cost nothing to the Government. The land could not be removed, or destroyed. Under the worst contingency a large number of peasants would have been fed and clothed for some years, and the revenue both directly and indirectly benefited. On the other hand the company were constrained to obey all the whims and caprices of the local authorities, and when all was finished their chance of profits depended entirely upon what the Government might think proper to pay them for the use of their water. On the whole, the company were not called upon to feel much gratitude for the liberal patronage extended to them, but probably they were willing to be thankful for small mercies under the idea that a comparative certainty is always a desirable appendage to speculative projects. It now appears that they had no cause whatever to thank the Secretary of State for his support of their scheme. Incredible as it may appear, Sir Charles Wood asserts that the price at which water was to be purchased was not only to be fixed by Act (that is, by the purchaser), but was to be "subject to arrangement from time to time." The profits to be enjoyed by the company were to be derived from the sale of water thus regulated for the advantage of one party to the transaction. Whatever benefit might accrue to the irrigated lands, whatever increased revenue might flow into the public treasury, mattered not to the company who had produced this result. They must rest contented with what the Governor-General might consider "a reasonable profit." The cultivator who availed himself of the fruits of their industry and intelligence would, of course, be liable to a higher assessment upon his fertilised lands, but "the proceeds of such assessment were to be received by the Government as revenue." Thus the Government, in the first place, exacted the full value of the land employed in the construction of the canals; then they purchased at their own rates all use and control of the water; and finally sold by retail, for their own benefit and at their own price, what they had appropriated on such highly advantageous terms. And this is to be regarded as encouragement to private enterprise! It would have been mere insult and mockery to propose such an arrangement in the first instance; but to put such a gloss upon the original contract after capital has been raised and great expenses incurred upon the strength and obvious interpretation of that contract is scarcely worthy of a pettifogging attorney, but utterly unworthy of an honourable and high-minded statesman. To prevent any misapprehension we subjoin Sir Charles Wood's very words—at least those addressed by his Under Secretary to the Secretary of the company on the 26th of last month:—

"Sir Charles Wood's proposal was—That the company were to sell water for irrigation purposes to the Government alone. That the price at which that water was to be purchased by the Government was to be fixed by Act and subject to arrangement from time to time. But that it was to be so fixed, at first, at such a sum as, after negotiation between the company and Lord Canning, might be esteemed sufficient to afford the company a reasonable profit. This was, in truth, the basis of the whole scheme, and the whole profits derived by the company from that sale so regulated, were to be enjoyed by the company.

"But when the water had been thus sold to Government, it was not Sir C. Wood's intention that the company should have any further concern in its distribution or derive any additional profit therefrom. Whatever benefit the land might derive from the application of the water after the company's profits had been drawn from it in the shape of proceeds of sale to Government, was to belong to the cultivator, subject to such increased assessment or such rate per acre irrigated as Government might find itself warranted in imposing, and the proceeds of such assessment were to be received by the Government as revenue."

How is this statement to be reconciled with the letter dated June 2nd, 1860, in which it was expressly promised, "that the whole profits of the works shall belong to the company." The promise is kept, indeed, to the ear, but not to the sense. The company shall have "the whole profits," only the Government will take care that there shall not be any. Monopolising the water at a price to be fixed before the works are commenced, and therefore regulated according to the estimated capital—always considerably less than the capital actually expended—this liberal Government will reserve to itself all the advantages likely to result from the capital of this unfortunate company. Some fat and mealy chestnuts will no doubt be extracted from the fire—what matter, then, if the cat's paw be singed in the operation? When the giant and the dwarf went forth together on a career of adventure, we know who received the blows and who took all the honour and glory. Very similar appears to be the relative position of this company and the Indian Government. The one is to find the water, the other is to gather in the harvest—a pleasant, if not very equitable, division of duties. The Government cannot lose, and may gain to a large amount—the company can scarcely gain anything, and may possibly lose all. Is it thus Sir Charles Wood proposes to develop the resources of the country and promote the introduction of British capital and energy? We fear he will hardly have a second opportunity of affording such encouragement.

IMPERIAL PARLIAMENT.

INDIGO CONTRACTS.

Mr. LAYARD asked the Secretary of State for India whether a Bill had been introduced into the Legislative Council of India to enforce contracts for the delivery of agricultural produce? He expressed pleasure at seeing the right hon. gentleman (Sir C. Wood) in his place. He believed the question to which he drew the attention of the House was one of extreme importance, and if he was correctly informed, our countrymen in India were guilty of the most reprehensible conduct. Last year there was an outbreak in Bengal in consequence of the proceedings relative to the question of indigo cultivation in that presidency. A Bill was then introduced into the Indian Legislature, which rendered the breach of contract in the cultivation of indigo punishable by fine or three months' imprisonment. The cultivation of indigo was promoted by the system of advances, and the effect of this system enabled the planters to act in the most oppressive manner towards the ryots, who were the owners of the soil. An inquiry had been made into the subject, and 4,000 answers were obtained from different witnesses who were qualified to give correct information, who had made a report, from the perusal of which he had risen with mingled feelings of horror, indignation, and dismay which he could not express. The law in question was entrusted to young magistrates in many cases, and it armed the planter with a power which they exercised most extensively, and the consequence was that numbers of the unfortunate ryots were imprisoned or fined for a failure in the fulfilment of their contracts. The hon. member then read extracts from the statements of Mr. John Peter Grant, Lieutenant-general of India, and other resident authorities, to show that the result of the system was to inflict the grossest injustice, and he contended that unless some alteration took place there were grounds for apprehending an outbreak in Southern Bengal. In regard to this Act there was great want of faith towards the natives, for when it was first passed it was with the distinct understanding that it was to continue only for six months. However, it was reintroduced last March, and he strongly condemned this policy, which had only for its object the benefit of a few planters in Southern Bengal, and was calculated to render this country hateful to the inhabitants.

Mr. VANSITTART asked the Secretary of State for India whether his attention had been drawn to the report of the Indigo Commission, with the minutes of evidence taken before them, and appendix, dated Calcutta, April 27th, 1860; and, if so, whether he had taken any steps to carry out the recommendations contained therein? He said he had gone carefully through this report, and contended that the planters were exonerated from the charges brought against them. In his opinion the conduct of Mr. Grant was most objectionable, for he threw the whole weight of his authority into the scale against the planters. He said that in many cases the ryots were a money-getting body, and were in many cases absentees, and they induced their fellow-ryots to act in such a manner that the planters were unable to meet their liabilities, and their properties were sold. He could not see the policy of acting in a hostile manner towards the planters in India, to whom the zemindars and ryots were indebted for much improvement, and this country in a considerable degree for the maintenance of its power in that country. He referred to the testimony of several competent authorities in India to show that the planters were the friends of improvement and progress, and that instead of being open to censure they were entitled to the greatest praise.

Mr. KINNAIRD asked the Secretary of State for India whether he had received a copy of the correspondence regarding the cultivation of indigo between the Government of India and the Government of Bengal, which took place between July and November, 1860; also of the correspondence connected with the issue of the Indigo Proclamation, dated September, 1860; and, whether he had any objection to lay the same on the table? He defended the statements of the hon. member (Mr. Layard), and he expressed a hope that the House and the Government would not blind themselves to the emergency that had arisen in India in reference to the question. The facts stated by his hon. friend (Mr. Layard) could be proved, and it could be shown that the cultivation of indigo was impolitic and oppressive. He trusted the papers for which he asked would be produced, and that justice would be done to the unfortunate ryots.

Sir J. ELPHINSTONE referred to the debates on the subject in the Indian Legislative Council, to show that the statements of the hon. member for Southwark (Mr. Layard) were not justified by facts. He also passed a eulogium on the planters, who, he argued, were not inferior to any other body of her Majesty's subjects.

Mr. H. SEYMOUR said that the greatest injury would be inflicted on India and this country by the expulsion of the planters; and for that reason he felt bound to differ with his hon. friend (Mr. Layard).

Sir C. WOOD said that the majority of the papers applied for were already on the table of the House. He agreed in what had been said in praise of the planters, but at the same time he agreed that there was truth in the statement of the hon. member for Southwark. He did not approve of the renewal of the Act in question, and he did not think there should be special legislation in regard to indigo, the forced cultivation of which was impolitic. He condemned the principle of contracts in regard to the cultivation of indigo, and believed that in enforcing that system great injustice was inflicted; bedridden, blind, and deaf ryots having been imprisoned for breach of contract, which, from their condition, they could not fulfil. He believed a very serious crisis had arisen in Lower Bengal, and he regretted extremely the introduction of the Bill alluded to into the Legislative Council of India, as he considered it a great mistake, no case having been made out to justify the Legislature in interfering in regard to the cultivation of indigo in India.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—APRIL 22.

THE ARMY IN INDIA.

In reply to a question from Mr. BENTINCK, Sir C. WOOD said it would not be expedient at present to produce the communications he had made to the Governor-general with respect to carrying out the amalgamation of the royal and local armies, by giving effect to the warrant for the formation of a staff corps in India. The Governor-general had power, in concert with the Commander-in-chief, to modify the details of the measures contained in the communications from England, and it was desirable that those measures should not be announced until they had assumed that authentic shape in which they would stand after receiving the corrections which the Governor-general was empowered to make. He should then, however, have no objection to produce all the papers on the subject.

Sir M. FARQUHAR wished to know what was the object of the committee now sitting in Calcutta on the amalgamation scheme—whether it was for settling the details or for the purpose of introducing modifications. If the latter, would the modifications be sent home for the approbation of the Government before being adopted in India?

Sir C. WOOD did not quite understand the necessity for the appointment of a committee at all, but the Governor-general had appointed a number of officers for the purpose of looking into the details of the scheme, and ascertaining the wishes of their brother officers upon certain points. He hoped this inquiry would not lead to any great delay. The Governor-general had power to modify the scheme, and to carry it into effect without waiting for the approbation of the Government in England.

Captain JERVIS inquired when the Calcutta committee were likely to make their report, and whether their report, when made, would be published?

Sir C. WOOD had no information upon these points. He only knew that a committee had been appointed, and that they had already made one report.

THE FAMINE IN INDIA.

Mr. H. BAILLIE asked the Secretary of State for India whether any previous steps were taken by the Government of India with a view to meeting the distress arising from the expected famine; whether there is now any general organisation of the means at the disposal of Government for that purpose; whether the Government stimulated subscriptions by offering to contribute a sum equal to that which was subscribed; and whether it is intended to leave without assistance all who cannot be provided for by these means if they should prove insufficient?

Sir C. WOOD: I am not in a position to give more than a general answer to the questions put by the hon. gentleman. The attention of the Government of India was called to the probable effects of the drought in that country, and measures were taken on their part to obviate the evils resulting therefrom. Work has been provided to a considerable extent, and also, in some districts, contributions have been offered in addition to the subscriptions. I cannot, however, give any explanation as to the precise mode in which the measures have been directed for that purpose. I know that measures have been taken on a very large scale, in some shape or another, and that the estimate of the sum to be given in relief by the Government is of very considerable amount.

GREAT INDIAN PENINSULA RAILWAY.

The directors state in their report that a further portion of 53½ miles of the company's railway was opened for traffic on the 28th of January last, making a total of 350½ miles being worked. The new sections consist of 22 miles from Shapur to Kussarah, at the foot of the Thull Ghât in the Concan, and of 31½ miles Egutpoora, at the summit of the same Ghât, to Nassick, in the Decan. These form, with the exception of the break of nine miles upon the Thull Ghât, a continuous line of railway of 107 miles from Bombay, in the direction of the important cotton fields of Berar, which it is confidently expected will be brought into still closer connection with the railway in the course of the approaching summer by the opening of an additional 86½ miles from Nassick to Chalesgaun, on the eastern border of Kandeish. Since the opening to Nassick, in January, the general traffic of the line shows a marked improvement. The receipts for the four weeks ended the 17th of March were on 350½ miles £5,207, £5,405, £5,545, and £5,659, against £3,895, £3,965, £3,365, and £3,659, on 277 miles for the corresponding weeks of 1860, showing an average increase of £2. 4s. per mile per week, being on an average receipt of £15. 12s. 8d. per mile per week against an average of £13. 8s. per mile per week in the corresponding four weeks of 1860. The gross receipts for the half year ending the 31st of December last amounted, on an average of 297½ miles, to £95,244, or £320 per mile, and for the corresponding half of 1859 on an average of 213½ miles to £80,008, or £375 per mile, showing an increase of £15,235 in the receipts, and a decrease of £55 per mile. The total expenditure amounted to £59,708, or £201 per mile, against £46,706, or £219 per mile, showing an increase of £13,002 in the expenditure, and a decrease of £18 per mile, leaving the net profit on the working £35,536 against £33,302, or an increase of £2,234 in favour of the past half-year. The sum of £35,536 will be available as net profit to be carried to the credit of the company's interest account with the Government. The very rapid progress that has been made in the last six months on the Bhore Ghât works by Messrs. Adamson and Clowser affords the strongest assurance that this, the most difficult and important portion of the railway, will be completed by April next year. In the minute on Indian railways, recently published by the Government, it is assumed that the undertakings of this company already sanctioned will cost £13,938,250, and that the capital provided is £6,254,459; and it is therefore suggested that the company should proceed with such works only as it may be inexpedient to suspend, except on the gravest emergency. The directors estimate that the whole of the company's lines to Jubbulpore and Nagpore, in the north-east, and to the junction at Moodgul with the Madras Railway, in the south-east, will not exceed £11,000,000. On this estimate the directors consider themselves justified in placing entire reliance, as it is based on the past experience of the works already completed. To meet this expenditure the company has paid into the Government Treasury £6,805,432, while it has unpaid calls of £12 per share on 141,527 shares (£8 paid), or £1,698,324, making together £8,503,756. Independent of the above, the borrowing powers of the company remain to be exercised to the extent of £2,162,910, making an available capital of £10,666,666. Deducting £968,000, the estimated cost of the line from Sholapore to Moodgul, which has not been contracted for or commenced, reduces the estimate for the whole of the works undertaken to £10,132,000, leaving a surplus capital of £534,666. The capital account shows a total receipt of £6,710,232, and a total expenditure of £6,019,711, leaving a balance of £690,521 available.

BOOKS.

Ten Weeks in Japan. By George Smith, D.D., Bishop of Victoria (Hong Kong). Longmans and Co.

This is by far the most complete and interesting account of Japan that has yet appeared. It must not be supposed that because Dr. Smith was actually resident in that island for no longer a period than ten weeks, his views of the manners and customs of its inhabitants are necessarily imperfect and superficial. So far from this being the case, he enjoyed advantages for forming a correct opinion on all that he witnessed, which could fall to the lot of but few travellers in a foreign land. His intimate knowledge of the Chinese language was naturally of immense service, and at Nagasaki he had the good fortune to be domiciled with the Rev. C. M. Williams, a missionary from the Protestant Episcopal Church of the United States, who served as an efficient and intelligent interpreter in their frequent intercourse with all classes of the Japanese. The building appropriated as the dwelling of these reverend divines was, oddly enough, a Buddhist temple belonging to the So-fu-ki monastery, and placed under the care of a good-humoured and friendly monk. But the idols had been removed, and on the whole their quarters appear to have been sufficiently comfortable. One great merit of Dr. Smith's excellent work is its freedom from the highly-coloured descriptions of Japanese excellences with which the European public was startled immediately after Lord Elgin's Treaty of Commerce. Instead of being enraptured and dazzled by the unexpected proficiency of those long secluded islanders, he declares the first impression to be—

"A sense of tawdriness and want of finish in the products of native industry and skill; a feeling that if here there are no commonly observable signs of extreme destitution and want, there are also, on the other hand, no generally prevailing indications of great wealth, or luxurious and expensive tastes. The forms of misery, too, are not wholly absent from the scene; and the newly-arrived European stranger has to banish from his mind some of the more highly-coloured views and overdrawn pictures which have enlisted his prepossessions in favour of the Japanese race. Cutaneous eruptions, loathsome sores, and a multitude of bodily ailments disfiguring the personal appearance, and bearing the hereditary taint of parental disease, are frequently observable in the streets. And yet there is something peculiarly striking in the universal neatness of their private dwellings and the graceful appearance of their dress. The fine, loose, flowing robe and capacious dependent sleeves which form their ordinary outer dress, each individual bearing on his breast and shoulders the neatly emblazoned figures of his family armorial bearings, give a semblance of dignity to their exterior bearing and address, as they pass onward and exchange the frequent salutation of a low formal bow and mutual greeting."

As an illustration of the exaggerated notions that have been entertained respecting the imitative faculty of the Japanese, Dr. Smith describes the appearance of the Emperor steam-yacht, presented only two years ago to the Tycoon of Japan in the name of Queen Victoria. It was predicted at the time that this screw-steamer would be the first of a long line of descendants fully worthy of the beautiful and elegant original. Not only has this prediction remained unfulfilled, but the yacht itself has been allowed to degenerate into a mere dingy steamboat:—

"Except in general form and dimensions it was at first difficult to recognise the smart little vessel formerly lying in the harbour of Hong Kong, and kept by her commander, Capt. Ward, in a first-rate condition of neatness and beauty. After mounting the side of the yacht we were conducted to a forward cabin and invited to take tea with the native captain and a youth wearing a sword, who spoke a little English. A chronometer of foreign manufacture lay on the table. The machinery of the engine seemed to my unpractised eye to be the portion of the vessel which was best cared for and preserved in neat and cleanly order. The after-cabin was in a wretched state of dirt and confusion. Luggage and lumber lay scattered about. The green velvet chairs were now soiled and shabby; the glittering frames of satinwood were covered with accumulated filth; the gilt ornaments were indented and bruised; and the panels of plated mirror glass were tarnished and dull. All looked slovenly and uncomfortable—a perfect contrast to the elegant little craft which attracted so many admiring visitors at Hong Kong. The after-cabin was appropriated to some local official, whose baggage and numerous trunks lay scattered about the unswept and carpetless floor."

The lower orders of Japanese are pronounced friendly to foreigners; but the Government, and, above all, the feudal aristocracy, are, at heart, as closely wedded as ever to the traditional policy of exclusion. This love of isolation appears to Dr. Smith not altogether unreasonable:—

"Proud," he says, "in the national traditions of their invincibility by foreign invaders, and enjoying the advantage of one continuous line of natural barriers and defences in the fogs and mists which prevail at all seasons on their coasts, and the tornadoes and typhoons which have wrecked every hostile fleet, assailing their native shores, they have never bowed the neck to a foreign yoke, and continue to shut themselves up in the fancied security and impregnability of their insular position. It is among the great princes and the members of the imperial administration that this jealous exclusiveness more particularly prevails. They remember the former civil wars which convulsed the nation; and they bear in mind that European nations bore their part in aggravating the mischief of civil discord. They know, too, that the ignorance of the multitude is the only foundation on which the continued stability of their own absolute power and feudal despotism can be based. Extorting from the cultivators of the land the greater portion of their agricultural produce, and wringing from the peasantry the hard earnings of their daily toil in order to support the numerous and costly army of their own idle and insolent retainers, the vassal princes of the empire make common cause with the Imperial Court, and join in riveting more firmly the chains of oligarchical tyranny on the lower classes of the population. Hence arises a sense of insecurity, a dislike of foreign intercourse, a fear of revolutionary ideas, and a continued persistence in the policy of restriction. The known advantages of foreign commerce are outweighed in the view of most of the Japanese rulers by a consideration of the perils caused thereby to the continuance of their political and social system."

We had marked several passages for extract relating to the political system, the religion, and the habits of the Japanese, but which we are constrained to omit from want of space. We shall, therefore, conclude this hasty notice of Dr. Smith's entertaining as well as instructive work with the following sketch of the character of the people:—

"The general impression left on my mind by our native visitors and neighbours was that they are a friendly race of people, accessible, frank, manly, energetic, and polite; not very truthful, and the reverse of temperate, if our views of temperance be formed after the standard of Asiatic and not of European habits. That they are inordinately addicted to drinking sake, and that this alcoholic drink produces the speedy effect of intoxication, is undoubtedly true. It is also not less true that the intoxicating effects of their sake continue only for a few hours, and wear off more rapidly than the effects of drunkenness among Europeans. While under its effects they are excited to foolish acts and words; if far gone in intoxication they become disorderly, riotous, and noisy, reeling in their walk and stammering in their speech. The strangest phenomenon consists in the fact that even during the same day they may partially regain a state of sobriety, and that the physical effects are not generally so permanently abiding as in western countries."

COLONEL HUYSE, of the Bengal Artillery, has established a sort of Military Institute at Meerut, under the name of a Temperance Hall. Games of all kinds, and a monthly quadrille party, are the chief attractions; tea, coffee, biscuit, tobacco, and soda water, are supplied at cheap rates. The Hall has divested the Canteen and Bazaar of their attractions.

COOLIE EMIGRATION.—The number of Indian coolies sent to the Mauritius in 1860 was 13,286, of whom 7,030 were from Calcutta, 4,303 from Madras, and 1,953 from Bombay. The cost of importing each male adult, which was from Calcutta, 7l. 10s. 9d. in 1859, rose to 9l. 18s. 10d. in 1860, owing to high freights. The ratio of mortality per cent. was—Calcutta, 4.14; Madras, .60, and Bombay .70. Of the forty ships which conveyed the emigrants only five were placed in quarantine. The departures from the colony were 2,883 in 1860, a decrease on the previous year. The total emigration from India to the close of the year was 212,913, of whom 61,150 were females. Several coolies having fulfilled their engagements are now working on their own account and are what they cannot be in their own country—proprietors of land. The average rate of wages for new immigrants was Rs. 5.8 per month, with food, and as high as Rs. 50 for mechanics. 927 coolies' children were receiving instruction in Government schools, and 219 orphans were cared for in an asylum. The supply of labour in 1860 was below the requisition of the colony by 23,000.

ORIENTAL BANK.—The annual report of the Oriental Bank Corporation states the net profit for 1860 to have been £214,757. The dividend and bonus of seven per cent. for the half-year ending 30th of June, already paid, have absorbed £88,200 of that amount, leaving £126,557 for present distribution. This sum it is now proposed to appropriate to the payment of a dividend of five per cent. for the half-year ending 31st of December, 1860, and a bonus of four per cent., which together will require £113,400, and leave a balance of £13,157 to be carried forward.

MAPS OF INDIA & CHINA.

MAP of INDIA; showing the British Territories subdivided into Collectorate, and the position and boundary of each Native State; chiefly compiled from Trigonometrical Surveys, executed by order of the Honourable Court of Directors of the East India Company. On six sheets—Size, 5 ft. 6 in. high; 5 ft. 8 in. wide. 22; or, on cloth, in a case, 22. 12s. 6d.; or, with rollers and varnished, 28. 3s.

The object kept in view in compiling this map has been to render it available to the greatest possible extent for popular use. For this purpose the names of all stations, civil and military, are inserted, as well as those of all towns and places of note likely to be looked for. To make clear the subdivisions of the whole of the country, both British and native, the limits of the various districts and collectorates, with their names, are distinctly indicated. The railways and telegraphs are laid down, and the trunk roads conspicuously coloured. The newly-acquired district in Burmah is included. To avoid, however, the confusion consequent upon over-crowding, and make the map clear and easy for reference, the names of many small villages, and places of no present importance, have been omitted, and thus a very wide measure of comprehensiveness has been attained, while needless diffusiveness has been avoided.

A GENERAL MAP of INDIA; compiled chiefly from Surveys executed by order of the Honourable East India Company, with the railways and telegraphs. On six sheets—Size, 5 ft. 3 in. wide; 5 ft. 4 in. high. 22; or, on cloth, in a case, 22. 12s. 6d.; or, with rollers and varnished, 28. 3s.

MAP of the ROUTES in INDIA; with Tables of Distances between the principal Towns and Military Stations. On one sheet—Size 2 ft. 3 in. wide; 2 ft. 9 in. high. 9s.; or, on cloth, in a case, 12s.

In this map are given the whole of the military and civil stations, together with the principal towns, the villages being omitted, so as to make the stations more prominent. The colouring defines the boundaries of the three Presidencies, and shows also the railways and telegraphs.

MAP of the PUNJAB and SIKH TERRITORY. On one sheet, 5s.; or, on cloth, in a case, 6s.

MAP of CHINA, from the most Authentic Sources of Information. One large sheet—Size, 2 ft. 7 in. wide; 2 ft. 2 in. high. 8s.; or, on cloth, in a case, 11s.

MAP of the BURMAN EMPIRE, showing the Annexed District of Pegu. One sheet, 3s. 6d.; or, on cloth, in a case, 5s.

A MAP of the WESTERN PROVINCES of HINDOOSTAN, the PUNJAB, CABOOL, SINDE, BHAWULPORE, &c., including all the States between Candahar and Allahabad. On four sheets—Size, 4 ft. 4 in. wide; 4 ft. 2 in. high. 30s.; or, on cloth, in a case, 22; rollers, and varnished, 22. 10s.

MAP of ARABIA, from all the most recent Authorities, by order of the Court of Directors of the East India Company. Size, 3 ft. 3 in. high; 4 ft. 3 in. wide. On cloth, in a case, 21. 5s.

LE SOMMIER ELASTIQUE PORTATIF.

—HEAL and SON have patented a method of making a Spring Mattress portable. The great objection to the usual Spring Mattress is its being so heavy and cumbersome. The "Sommier Elastique Portatif" is made in three separate parts; and, when joined together, has all the elasticity of the best Spring Mattress. As it has no stuffing of wool or horse-hair it cannot harbour moth, to which the usual Spring Mattress is very liable; the prices, also, are much below those of the best Spring Mattresses, viz:—

3 ft. wide by 6 ft. 4 in. long.....	£2 5 0
3 ft. 6 in. " " .....	2 10 0
4 ft. " " .....	2 15 0
4 ft. 6 in. " " .....	3 0 0
5 ft. " " .....	3 5 0
5 ft. 6 in. " " .....	3 10 0

The "Sommier Elastique Portatif," therefore, combines the advantages of elasticity, durability, cleanliness, portability, and cheapness.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.—STRENGTH RESTORED.—At this season many persons suffer from prostration of strength, arising in general from some disturbance of the digestion. In such cases the alternative properties of Holloway's Pills exert the happiest effects in renewing digestive vigour. It is wonderful to witness how the pale and emaciated gain colour and strength under a course of these purifying Pills. They stimulate the appetite, augment the secretion of gastric juice, regulate the liver, cleanse the kidneys, and act as gentle yet efficient aperients without griping, weakening, or inconveniencing the system. In a vast majority of cases of debility arising from no perceptible cause, Holloway's Pills, judiciously taken, slowly and certainly restore order, and the invalid soon becomes stout and strong.

PRICHARD'S AROMATIC STEEL PILLS stand unequalled for restoring vigour to weak and relaxed constitutions, and have been proved beyond all doubt to be the best medicine ever offered to the public. ## SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

WE are in receipt of our ordinary files of papers bearing date, from Calcutta, April the 3rd, and from Bombay, April the 12th. The famine in the North West Provinces is becoming daily more destructive of human life. Delhi is losing its population as if by pestilence, and thousands have been positively starved to death in the surrounding districts. The resources of the European residents are quite unavailing to relieve such wide-spread misery, although their exertions have been most praiseworthy. In Calcutta alone upwards of £17,000 have been subscribed, in Bombay £15,000, and in Madras nearly £5,000. The total amount contributed by private charity throughout India is close upon £50,000, which has been doubled by the Government. Nearly the whole of this very considerable sum has been given by Europeans, the natives standing aloof and allowing their fellow-countrymen to perish without making an effort to assist them. At Shahgunge a melancholy loss of life occurred through the eagerness of the crowd to enter the courtyard where food was being distributed.

"Some eight hundred"—writes an eye-witness to the Delhi Gazette—"had been admitted, when a host of strong healthy men, women, and children, made a sudden rush, and heaps of them fell at the entrance and choked it up. To keep back those who were still pushing forward, and extricate the fallen, was no easy matter. It was some five minutes' hard work to stop ingress, and a minute or two more were occupied in extricating those who had fallen. It was found that out of some twenty-five who had fallen underneath the others, fifteen were dead; a few others were restored with difficulty, the rest came round easily. Strange to say out of those who died, not one appeared to have been in a state of destitution or physical weakness. One young girl of about fifteen years, had ornaments on her ears, hands, and feet, and one of about nineteen years an infant of six months at her breast. The others were boys of from eight to twenty years of age, apparently strong and healthy, and one and all residents of Agra.

The system which has answered so well in the Punjab and in Oude of investing the native gentry with magisterial powers has been extended to the North-West Provinces, with every prospect of proving equally beneficial.

Of the justice and sound policy of such a measure there cannot be a doubt, though it is exactly reversing the system hitherto pursued.

The new Penal Code, instead of coming into operation on the 1st of May, as was originally proposed, will not take effect before the commencement of the ensuing year. Simultaneously will be published the Criminal Procedure Act at present under consideration.

In another part of this journal is given the Amalgamation Scheme submitted by the Secretary of State for India to the Governor-general in Council. A Commission of experienced officers was appointed by the Viceroy to examine the details, and their report has already been forwarded to this country. It may therefore be expected that the revised and amended scheme will very shortly appear in the Gazette. According to the Englishman, the Governor-general has recommended that, in order to induce officers to retire from the service, the gratuity pension should be augmented from £50 to £100. This liberality is founded on prudence, and would meet with its reward in the increased number of retiring officers.

The local papers comment with Anglo-Indian petulance on the dismissal of Mr. Frederick Hutchinson from the office of Collector of Bombay. The reason assigned is that the Government complain of the amount of remissions of valuation in cases of encroachment where the land has been occupied for more than twenty years, and Mr. Hutchinson's explanations have not been deemed satisfactory. His friends, however, assert that those remissions have been going on under several Collectors prior to his appointment to that post, and that Government ought to have discovered what was amiss many years ago. The defence does not seem a very sound one. If Mr. Hutchinson has acted wrong, it is no excuse that others have likewise done so, nor is past impunity a reason for condoning the offence. Sir George Clerk is not the man to act harsh or hastily, and the public may rest assured that he has good grounds for the decision at which he has now arrived.

A barbarous murder is reported from Calcutta. Prince Kurub-ud-deen, grandson of Tippoo Sahib, has been brutally done to death by his own servants, in the hope of carrying off his valuable plate and a large sum of money which he kept in an iron chest. In this the miscreants were disappointed, chiefly through their own blundering. They have all been arrested, and placed in confinement.

The Sikkim expedition has been completely successful, and the troops were returning to their former stations in the plains.

THE FAMINE AT DELHI.

Every circumstance has tended to aggravate the present visitation. The city and district can scarcely be said to have recovered in any fair degree from the effects of the insurrection in the retributive measures of pillage, fire and confiscation which awaited the inhabitants at the end of 1857. Besides retail trade to the amount of perhaps 50 lakhs per annum having been extinguished with the Mogul emperor and his family, as week after week of the last autumn passed by with less and less hope of rain, and prices fell at last to 8 seers of wheat per rupee, actual disease and emaciation from poor living began to spread with terrible rapidity. The people generally seemed to cherish no hope that a large measure of relief could proceed from the representatives of the nation towards whom they had been so immediately and so lately antagonistic. Hence many laid themselves down literally to die in the apathy of want and despair. The city streets and suburban roads became more and more crowded with ragged vagrants, and the swelling numbers of those prostrate and half dead on the sides of the ways betokened that the worst was coming. Much indirect relief was daily afforded by benevolent natives and society generally. Finally, when the original Poor-house of Delhi was found to be stocked to overflowing, and when it was known that all ordinary resources would be soon expended, successful measures were speedily organised for obtaining and applying general and extensive relief. In Togluckabad the commissioner fed some four thousand famished human beings, who tore at their food with a fierceness and an abandonment of all distinction of age, sex, or caste, which belied imposture. We could record the morning walks through the city of the Rev. James Smith, and subsequently of the Rev. Thomas Evans, filling cart-loads of exhausted creatures and conveying them to the asylums. Many respectable people have got rid of their wretched lives by flinging themselves down wells. The depopulation of the district proceeds apace, and exceeds that of the city and suburbs. The peasant clings as long as he can to his home. Mr. Brunton, late chief engineer of the Punjab Railway, who has been appointed to superintend relief works on a large and remunerative scale, proceeded to Togluckabad in February last. In December there were 300 able-bodied men and women; on the 6th of February 150 had decamped, 40 had perished of hunger, and 40 only could lift a basket of earth from the ground. The rest were too weak to move. At a village called Arungpore, in former times overlooking a fine lake and the scene of thriving plenty, of 200 inhabitants, 80 only could lift hand and foot to work. When told there was work for the able and food for the weak they looked upon it as a release of their community from gradual but certain extinction. The neighbouring country is a vast desert, the vivid patches of green near the scattered wells serving to show more sadly the barrenness around. In the district of Bullbugh no less than 2,800 men, women and children have died of sheer want. In the Southern Pergunnah, where the distress is quite as bad, the same number at least must have perished. Close upon five thousand have emigrated from Bullbugh, and certainly that number must have left other parts in search of labour and food. All this bespeaks a fearful extent of human suffering. Where there is no irrigation, numbers of wayfarers and travellers must have perished uncaared for. A marked contrast is presented by the Northern Pergunnah through the length of which runs the Jumna canal. Here but two deaths occurred, and these possibly in isolated villages. The Zemindars at present prices are amassing fortunes. The high rate of food has resulted from the want of the full complement of rain for two consecutive seasons. At this moment we ought to see the reapers in the fields, all chance of rain absent, and the garners replenishing. Whereas there are clouds over head and every appearance of inclement rain which, if mingled, as is not uncommon at this season, with wind and hail, will do damage to the little there is to reap.

Messrs. Brandreth and F. Cooper, the commissioner and deputy-commissioner of the district, have been equal to the crisis. They have endeavoured to convey assistance into the most retired places, associating in the good work all classes and grades of society. The native community, besides donations, subscribe nearly 1,200 rupees per month. Near the tomb of Nizamodeen, a famous resort of saintly pilgrimage, is the residence of Mirza Elihu Buksh, the last representative of the house of Timur. The Mirza, who himself contributed a donation of Rs. 500 and Rs. 60 per month, superintends personally the distribution of Rs. 20 worth of food a day to the descendants of families dependent for centuries on the fortunes of his house. The members of the Baptist Mission Society also each personally superintend, in various out-places, crowds fed with sums varying from Rs. 10 to Rs. 20 a day. So at Merowlie, famous for the Kootab Minar, a distribution of Rs. 30 has been made to some fifteen hundred. Nor are forgotten the numbers of decent people who suffer and make no sign; who prefer and will meet death rather than exposure; who have known comfort and affluence in former days. These are supplied with one meal a day at their homes, and receive it with grateful hearts. There was no point on which the native gentry of influence were more anxious than the preservation of the purdahshines. The principle laid down and strictly followed is that no one shall go away even half fed. Half-starved people die as surely, though at slightly prolonged periods, as those wholly starved. Hundreds of people who have gone in famished have, after two or three days' feeding, been drafted thankfully to work. The appearance of the poor children is most deplorable. It was at one time considered possible to secure a number of deserted children and orphans, and transport them to various founding asylums under the superintendence of the clergy of various Christian persuasions. But the idea was, upon consideration, abandoned. It was felt to be impolitic to link any measure, and especially one which, however charitable in itself, might be open to misconstruction by the designing or suspicious native, to the general scheme of relief, and so mar the moral effect of the large-minded charity of the Christian public, and alienate what little there is of the scarcely awakened sympathy of the people.

Foreseeing the difficulty that may hereafter ensue from demoralising a people by indiscriminate feeding in total idleness what may turn out to be a sturdy beggar population, every rupee of the local funds has been expended on all varieties of works that can feed those fit to labour, and conduce to the healthiness and welfare of the community at large. Wells are being sunk or repaired in every village in which they are required, care being taken that no village shall be without one well at least. Old bunds and tanks are being built up and excavated. The zeal and will with which all the neighbourhood turn out to the works is remarkable, and, it is to be hoped, will be well repaid by the benefit which they have learnt by tradition these structures conferred on their ancestors, and which they confidently anticipate are to gladden them once more. And it will be satisfactory for the benevolent public to have testimony to the fact that when some hope has been expressed by occasional visitors to distant places where the humane work is going on that no cheating or embezzlement was taking place, one and all have met with an energetic denial of the possibility of such an outrage in such a duty. The supervision exercised is the best available. Asiatic officials, who think ordinary peculation, and worse, fair pickings of the office to which they are attached, will hardly embezzle part of remittances for an object which they themselves have been the first to commiserate and subscribe for. Meanwhile, aid on a gigantic scale is afforded. Some nineteen thousand who must have died are being fed at the rate of twelve hundred rupees per day. As much as thirty-six thousand rupees a month have been, and will have to be distributed for the next six months, and yet such confidence is there in public liberality that no fears are entertained that even if more is wanted it will not be forthcoming. Should the drought last one year more, as Col. Baird Smith considers more than problematical, and should all local funds have been exhausted, there is still the earth-work of the Punjab Railway, in the event of the line being sanctioned, which will afford relief to thousands. The works of the East Indian Railway immediately opposite the palace employ, and will employ for years, a mass of labourers. The propinquity of engineering constructions of such magnitude affords the best solace for the future, even under the melancholy anticipation of continued drought.

But there is a scheme on foot for reviving the once imperial system of bund irrigation in large undulating tracts of country around old Delhi, which will, if carried out in its integrity, effectually remove the jeopardy into which a drought of a couple of years can fling the lives and property of hundreds of thousands. "Has India," writes Mr. Brunton, "been always in such a position that a year's scanty crop could produce such terrible results? Certainly not. It is undeniable that irrigation was the foundation of the vast riches of India in ancient times. The mineral resources could not have produced it. To the fruits of the soil alone must be attributed its former splendour. To prove this we need only to examine the vicinity of Delhi. The capacious intelligence of former rulers appreciated the uncertainty of the periodical supply of rain, and devised methods of distributing and husbanding, by canals and bunds, the rain that did fall. That these devices answered the most casual observer cannot fail to detect as he passes over the country, sees the positive proofs of former overflowing prosperity, and listens to the traditions of the village people." Mr. Brunton is occupied in closely examining the remains of the ancient system of irrigation, and he is of opinion that there are very numerous places about the hills which surround Delhi where water might be stored, which at present falls uselessly into the Jumna. All his investigations have convinced him that a largely increased revenue to the State can most undoubtedly accrue by simply restoring the country to its former condition—to say nothing of the improvement derivable from the application of the resources of modern science in developing the crude, though grand, ideas of ancient times.—Friend of India.

RAILWAY PROGRESS.

At the very time when the rapid completion of the existing lines of railway is a matter of the most vital importance the companies are approaching the limits of their guaranteed capital, and find it difficult to raise even that. At this moment almost every open railway in India is passing through a crisis. The great lines are worked in detached sections, or are gradually stretching out from the centres of commerce into districts which can yield but little trade, and which must prove a dead loss until the great termini beyond are reached and through traffic is rendered possible. So long as the East Indian Railway ran from terminus to terminus, as from Howrah to Ranegunge, the profits equalled nearly eight per cent. But when the main line broke off near Burdwan and passed for miles through a thinly peopled country till it reached the Ganges at Rajmahal, the profits were sensibly affected. The percentage of working expenditure rose with every new section that was opened. And when the Ganges was reached it was found that the river now flowed a mile from the town and would not be tempted to disgorge its traffic into railway trucks. So on the broken section of one hundred and twenty-three miles from Allahabad to Cawnpore. Native merchants would not transfer their goods from carts to trucks at Cawnpore, only to re-transfer them to carts at the Allahabad station and again to boats on the river. So on the great Bombay line. The traffic was most promising up to the foot of the Ghauts, but every mile beyond caused a heavy loss to the company, and will continue to do so until the final termini of Jubbulpore and Nagpore on the one side and Moodgul on the other are reached, and the Thul and Bhore Ghaut inclines are finished. We see no cause for either wonder or regret that the profits of Indian rail ways at this stage should be diminishing. It must be so. But we see a new reason for increased energy in pushing on the unproductive ends of the broken lines until they reach their final resting place and unite the great marts and cities of India in rapid communication with each other. To rest for want of money while the rail-ways of India all end in a jungle or a desert is not merely to sink uselessly the capital hitherto expended, but to eat away surely the profits from the really paying portions of the lines. Every new mile that is now opened is an additional argument for hurrying on the remainder, if at the present stage every mile is opened at a loss. We say nothing of the new motives for the rapid completion of our railway system; of its effect in lessening our military expenditure and improving our military administration; of its preventing famine by equalising markets and prices in the most distant and obscure districts; and of its enabling India effectually to supersede other countries as the supplier of the markets of England with cotton, wool, tobacco, and sugar by saving in the expense of their present transit to the coast at least a penny a pound.

The reports of the East Indian Railway from Calcutta to Benares by Mr. Turnbull, and from Benares to Delhi by Mr. Sibley, with information up to the close of 1860, enable us to estimate to within a few months the various periods at which the most important sections of the great Calcutta and Delhi line will be opened to the public. The East Indian Railway Company began operations just ten years ago on a line, which, when completed, will be longer than the famous Trunk Railway of Canada, extending for 1,338 miles to Delhi with a branch to Jubbulpore. There can be little doubt that the whole will be finished in 1865, or within fifteen years from the turning of the first sod, an achievement which, when we remember the bloody interludes of the Sonthal and Sepoy rebellions, the distance from the country whence all supplies of material and skilled labour had to be brought, and the toil in a tropical climate, the engineers may regard as a triumph. Starting from Calcutta we find that on the branch to Raneegunge the small extension of eight miles to the collieries on the Singarron River will be open at the end of this year, while the larger extension of twenty-two miles to the collieries on the Burrakur has hardly been commenced. Returning to the main line, now open for 203 miles to Rajmahal, the works are already so far advanced to Bhagulpore, 264 miles from Calcutta, that the section, over which an engine could even now run, will be opened at the close of the rainy season. Here the company will attract the Ganges traffic which the fickleness of the river has prevented them from doing at Rajmahal. In January next the way will be clear through the great rock tunnel to Monghyr, and in June, 1862, to Patna and Buxar. Mr. Turnbull promises the opening of the line to Benares on the same date, but as that will depend on the completion of the great Soane Bridge and on "an immediate delivery of all the iron-work for the three great bridges," we shall be content if it is possible for us to breakfast early in Calcutta and sleep in Benares, 540 miles off, on the same day, by the beginning of 1863. Mr. Turnbull's evidence on the subject of arched brick roofing for houses is valuable, after having built so many in this style for European workmen:—

"Timber is so expensive that the brick vaults are cheaper than the timber roofing; there is no question as to their superiority in point of durability, and the houses are comfortable and well ventilated, and have, on the whole, rather a pleasing appearance. I am inclined to recommend an extended use of brick arching, not only for dwelling-houses, but also for other buildings, wherever it can be done with economy. There is no novelty in this construction in India, where many well-known buildings, both public and private, ancient and modern, afford permanent examples of the advantages of arched roofing."

The Great Imambara at Lucknow is the most striking instance of this.

As a broken section, the 122 miles open from Allahabad to Cawnpore have hitherto been worked at a disadvantage. Yet Mr. Cecil Stephenson, the agent, estimates the net profit on the traffic of 1860 at  $3\frac{1}{2}$  per cent. In the first year that it was open to the public Captain Hodgson, the Government engineer, reckoned it at  $5\frac{1}{2}$  per cent. The line, too, depends on wood fuel. To carry a goods train from Howrah to Raneegunge Rs. 15 worth of coal is required. But to accomplish the same from Allahabad to Cawnpore, nearly the same distance, Rs. 24 worth of wood is needed, while coal may fall in price and wood must rise. The nearest coal yet found available for the North-West locomotives is in Rewah Singrowlie, a hundred miles distant from the railway. When the through line is completed, the Bengal collieries will supply all the North-West, till the Jubbulpore Branch is opened out. The last link to be riveted in the whole iron chain will probably be that from Benares to Allahabad. In the Benares district there are fifty miles of main line and six and a quarter of branch, with stations at Gubmer, Dildarnuggur, Zemeeniah, Sekuldeah, Mogul Serai junction, and Benares itself. Nothing has been settled regarding the last. No permanent way materials have yet been received. Going on through the Mirzapore district for ninety-two miles we find that the contractors, Messrs. Hunt and Emsley, finished their work nine months ago. The great Tonse Bridge will be ready to receive the girders in July, 1862. The greater Jumna Bridge at Allahabad has three of its piers finished and five almost completed; six remain yet to be sunk. But on the other side of the open line between Allahabad and Cawnpore all is activity. The line will be open from Cawnpore to Etawah in June, with Blowpore, Roora, Jheeruk, Pophoond, Uchulda, Burtina, Jswantnuggur, Badan, and Etawah as stations. Agra will be in communication with Allahabad in February, 1862, by means of a branch of thirteen miles from the main line. The stations are Shekoabad, Ferozabad, Toondla Junction and Agra. The design for the last was approved of by the Local Government a year ago, but has not yet been sanctioned by the Supreme Government. The activity thus far may be gathered from the fact that since the beginning of 1859, 186 miles of rails have been sent from Calcutta. Returning to the main line, we pass from the Toondla Junction,  $41\frac{1}{2}$  miles, to Allyghur, and find the works nearly stopped by the emigration of the able-bodied labourers to native States where food is cheap. In the section for 82 miles from Allyghur to Delhi, where the famine is most severely felt, the works give employment to some 15,000 famine-stricken people. As not more than half of the earth and brick-work has been finished, Mr. Stephenson does not commit himself to any date for the completion of the line from Agra to Delhi. The result is, the railway engineers promise, and we have no reason to doubt it, that we shall be able to go by railway from Calcutta to Benares at the end of 1862, and from Allahabad to Agra in February 1862.

Hitherto education and intelligence have been confined to a narrow circle around the Presidency cities. The spread of the iron pathway into the districts of Upper and Central India, and on the skirts of great native States, must carry the blessings of enlightenment, and convey a new sense of the power of England where they have hitherto been unknown. The merchant who can send his goods from Agra to Calcutta in a couple of days, the sturdy agriculturist of the Bhurtpore Principality who can reach Calcutta more speedily than he can go to Agra, will have a force brought to bear on him as subtle and irresistible as it will be certain and ultimately beneficial in its efficacy. Some intelligence is required to see anything remarkable in the telegraph; none to appreciate the wonders of the railway. Two things, however, are still required to make the railway an efficient civiliser—that Lord Canning should use his influence to induce such chiefs as Sindia, Holkar, and the Nizam to commence small lines of their own, and that fourth-class trains, running at a third of the present third-class fares and at only ten miles an hour, should lead to the disuse of all native modes of conveyance.—Friend of India.

MISCELLANEOUS.

MURDER OF ONE OF THE MYSORE PRINCES.—A most barbarous and brutal murder was perpetrated about ten o'clock on Sunday evening, March 31st, the victim being Prince Kootood-deen, one of the Mysore family of State pensioners, at his house facing the Nimuk Mohal Ghât in Garden Reach. The murdered man appears to have been in the habit of sleeping on a charpoy in the north-east corner of his verandah, which is on the north side of the house. Two bearers slept at a short distance in the same verandah, and the moonshee in the room immediately below. At about eleven o'clock Inspector Vardon was informed by one of these bearers that the Prince had had a fit of apoplexy, and was bleeding profusely from the nose. He accompanied the bearer to the house, and the moment he ascended the steps to the verandah, was met by the moonshee, who told him it was no case of sickness, but one of murder. The unfortunate man was lying dead on his back on the floor, and his mangled remains presented an appalling sight. He seems to have been sleeping on his face and to have had several severe blows dealt him on the back of his neck first, with a kitchen chopper. He would then appear to have turned round and to have received similar blows on his face. His upper and lower jaw, his teeth, his lips, his tongue, his nose, were all brutally and mercilessly hacked with a blunt and heavy butcher's chopper. The instrument was found under his body, which was stretched at full length, with a small silver desert knife by its side. Two of the windows of the house were found open, to encourage the idea that the deed was that of outsiders. Very fortunately, however, the inspector had come at once to the spot and did not hesitate to secure the two bearers and the moonshee. The durzee and the mallee have since been arrested, and from the confessions of some of these men, there remains no doubt but that the moonshee and durzee were the principals, and all the others more or less concerned in the atrocious murder. The exciting motive was plunder, as the deceased Nawab was of retired and peculiar habits, living alone, save with his five servants, in a house elegantly furnished, but receiving no visitors, scarcely even the members of his own family; and there were but two occupied houses in the immediate vicinity, while it was known that the deceased kept much plate in the house, and a very large sum of money in an iron chest, the key of which was always upon his person. The whole affair was as clumsily as it was brutally executed; for the plunder must have been secured had the ruffians not in their hurry broken the key in the lock of the chest; and they would have had abundance of time to wash their own faces and clothes, and dispose of the body, and abscond, had they not, by a refinement of caution, with a view to mislead the police, given information of their master having had a fit of apoplexy! The Darogah was on the spot shortly after the inspector, and between one and two o'clock a.m. Mr. Fagan, the police magistrate, and a medical gentleman, an inmate with him, were summoned to attend the Sooruthal. By half-past ten o'clock yesterday the culprits had all been arrested, the whole circumstances of the murder had been discovered; and it had been ascertained that the miscreants had wholly failed in securing any portion of the plunder, the desire of which had instigated them to their brutal crime. The deceased was one of the sons of Prince Moheeoodeen, the only one of Tipoo's sons who was legitimate. This Prince Moheeoodeen committed suicide in Calcutta not long after the arrival of the Mysore family from Vellore. Some reports had reached Government that he had purchased a number of swift horses, and made arrangements for escaping from Calcutta. His only son was also named Tipoo, who died leaving but one son, the murdered prince, to represent the male descendants of Tipoo on the side of legitimacy.

THE DELHI FAMILY.—The state prisoners of the Delhi family at Montmeim having petitioned for an increase of the allowance made to them, namely, Rs. 30 per month for the ex-king and Rs. 10 to each of his sons, they not being able to live so luxuriously as they could wish on that stipend, Lord Canning has declined to make any increase.

AN INDIGO ECLOGUE.—MONDOL—SUNTOSH.

MONDOL.
Dic Mihi, tu Suntosh, why thus sub shade of a palm tree,
Stretch'd by the side of thy plough, thou smoking liest so calmly?
Freed from the thrall of the yoke, thy bullocks around thee are grazing, Whilst thou on the smoke from thy hookah art lazily gazing.
Oh tu fortunate puer! pray why do I not see Indigo cœrulean, gore-stained, in bundles around thee?
Where is the savage ameen of the factory, where is his ma-ter, Impiger, iracundus, and bringing all sorts of disaster?
Where is the head sircar, "gaudens cognomine Luckesh," Forcing rupees down thy throat in advance, and eager for bucksheesh?
Where is the man with the chain to measure the factory beegah?
Why do thy carts stand empty, and why, no longer so meagre,
Bony, and thin as of old, do thy cattle at liberty curro,
Hic et ubique, wherever they please through the indigo furrow?
Delicias domini, qui sharp to the neighbouring thannah
Formerly sent any strays in a very summary manner.
Oh, Suntosh felix! qui tibi has granted the favour
Thus to repose on the turf, and smoking free from all labour Tegmine sub palm tree silverstrem ludere tom tom?
SUNTOSH.
Oh, Mondole! Deus nobis hæc otia fecit!
Scarce can I tell thee his name, for, in truth, vox faucibus hæsit,
That is to say, I was dumb for the time with wonder and pleasure,
When at the thannah I heard that in future only at leisure,
Or not at all, if he chose, the ryot his indigo need sow.
Now no longer I work so hard, no longer now I feed low,
Now no longer I drive on the road my hackery creaking, Laden with bundles of plant, the nearest factory seeking;
Trembling in fear of my life, for well I knew the gomasta
Sternly would gaze on the load, and cry, "come, get along faster!"
Then came a cut with the whip, and, as I would wince with a shudder, "Out of the way, you soor! hum toom koop mariga gudda!"
Now no longer they cut my trees and mangoes at pleasure,
Giving me just what they please in return, a one-sided measure,
Now no more do the factory peons walk off with their booty,
Steal wherever they can, and call it a matter of duty.
Now no longer I wait at the door of the planter's cutcherry Trembling, expecting a fine for repair of roadway or ferry;
All is altered now, we do whatever we like most,
Free from all fear of the Sahib, who, though he is trying his utmost,
Can't get the indigo sown for which we hold the advances,
Merrily spending the same in tom-toms, marriage, and dances.
Now no longer we bother our heads about keeping a contract,
Or about paying our jumma, for what care we for a Rent Act?
Do we not know no judges would dare to give a decision
Not in our favour; ek dum, omnes would send a petition, Praying the Allipore Bhudda, the lover of Brahminee races,
First to send a reproof, and then turn them out of their places.
MONDOL.
Dic Mihi then, Suntosh, his name, that now and for ever
I may worship that Bhudda, whenever I bathe in the river.
Is it the rubicund Lord of Baraset? is it the "gory"

Sahib, with eyes made of glass, the thoro-paced friend of the mission?
Or, is it great Sir-Karr, the head of the mighty Commission?

SUNTOSH.

If, Mondol, you wish to know this mirror of glory,
Pacifier of worlds! why, pause, while I tell thee the story,
Et Mihi Musa, precor give words to sing of his praises!
Arma virumque cano, qui first on the indigo ryot
Showered the blessings of peace, and made all Nud-dea quiet;
Magniloquens, justus, profundus, mighty in dodges,
Kind as the dove to it's mate to him who cunningly loiges
Tales of oppression and wrong against the indigo planters,
Dear to the soul of Latour and all the clerical rangers.
Yes! 'tis he of Bengal who holds the political rudder Called John Peter by name, but by us the Allipore Bhudda.
Long may his shadow remain to protect the indigo ryot,
And on his fortunate head bestow the blessings of quiet,
Riches, and peace. And, now, oh Mondol, I pray thee,
Bend at the shrine of that man, not yearly or monthly, but daily;
Painted aloft on the walls of my hut are the mystical letters
J. P. G., the name of the man who struck off our fetters, Lifted our heads from the dust, and gave us the denomination—
Capitalists to be called! with a right to a voice in the nation.
Thus, Mondole, puer, I lie, 'neath a palm-tree at leisure,
Singing the praise of my god, and only work at my pleasure.

MONDOL.

Ehen, me miserum! that I such a state of serenity
Aught should say to disturb, but really I pity your greenness;
Much would I give, Suntosh, to add my congratulation,
And to worship with you the man whose zeal for regeneration
Made you a capitalist! But, alas! a change o'er your dreaming Quickly is coming, for one, who, though not his equal in scheming, Envies J. P. his place at the helm, has brought in a motion
(So they call it, I think), and, with an eye to promotion, Ambiguus verbis, has framed a horrid severe Act
By which ryots and others will have to keep to their contract,
Whatever that may be, whether indigo, sugar, or cotton;
And though he does not care to deny that the system is rotten,
Still he thinks that a course like that to position will lead on,
Et certamen adest J. P. cum Cecile Beadon.
Now, no more, Suntosh, can you receive your advances,
Promise to sow, and then go and spend the money in dances;
Now, no longer at ease will you rejoice in your slumbers,
Or, reclining in shade, silvestres ludere numbers.

SUNTOSH.

Oh, Miserum, Miserum! I scarce can utter with sorrow,
Dark is the light of the day, and darker that of to-morrow,
Ite meæ, felix quondam pecus, ite capellæ!
Non ego vos can keep, for food I shall have to sell ye!
Carmina nulla canam, I now must work for my dinner,
Now, my cattle each day will soon get thinner and thinner;
Now, my wife no longer will wear her musical bundle,
And no longer the ring from the nose of my daughter will dangle.
But 'tis vain to lament o'er the woe that cometh to-morrow,
Let us then smoke and sleep, and try to banish our sorrow.
Nunc tamen hic poteras requiescere (where is your hurry?)
Fronde super viridi: sunt nobis all sorts of curry!
So lay aside thy shoes, put down thy iron-bound lattee;
Est Mui bahut dholl and rice ac est mihi multa chapattee
So let us haste to the hut, and drown our sorrow in dances.—Englishman.

FURLOUGH has been granted to the whole of the Bengal Native Army to the extent of ten per cent. of the effective strength of corps. In Punjab regiments recently returned from China leave will be granted to the extent of forty per cent. Leave of absence is to be given with a strict regard to the priority of claims, and the period is to be limited with reference to the distance of the men's homes and the nature of their business, so as to admit of as general a participation in the indulgence as possible.

TRAINING INSTITUTION.—A gentleman in England has provided Mr. Leupolt, of the Church Mission, with a sum of £5,000, to establish a Hindi Vernacular Training Institution at Benares. Were the Grant-in-Aid rules at all liberal, numerous institutions of this kind would be established by the English public.

ALLAHABAD VOLUNTEERS.—The 1st Company of the Allahabad Volunteer Rifles consists of 90 men. They have elected the following officers:—As Captains—Messrs. Smyth and Campbell. As Lieutenants—Messrs. Hastings, Carter, Gower, and Carmichael. As Ensigns—Messrs. Seymour, Sim, Pritchard and Aburrow. The 2nd Company is known as "Mr. Thornhill's."

MAP OF CASHMERE.—At the last meeting of the Asiatic Society a paper by Captain Montgomerie, on the extension of survey operations in Kashmir, Ladak, &c., and the conquest of Gilgit, was read. The map, reduced from the original to a scale of quarter inch to the mile, represents an area of twenty-four thousand miles, embracing all the territories of the Kashmir Maharaja that lie on the Hindustan side of the great Himalayan range; that is, from the Ravee to the Jhelum, and from the plains of the Punjab to the glaciers of the Nanga Parbat, 26,630 feet above the sea. The triangulation covers an area larger than that of England. The traces of ancient glaciers which Captain Montgomerie met with, prove that they must have been from twenty to thirty miles in length.

"BIBLIOTHECA INDICA."—The Bengal Asiatic Society have resolved to publish the following works in the new series of the "Bibliotheca Indica." "The Sankara Dig Vijaya," by Madhuv Acharjea, one of the authorities, for a deeply interesting period in Hindu history; and the "Karyadarsa," of Sre Dandi, the oldest rhetorical work of the Hindus. The literati of Germany have so often asked for an edition of the rare and ancient "Khanshetaki with Upanishad" with Sankara Nunda's Commentary, of which there is no MS. in Europe, that Prof. Cowell has prepared an edition of it.

LUCKNOW LIBRARY.—We (Friend of India) are glad to notice the success of the public library established in Lucknow by Sir R. Montgomery. There are now fifty-two subscribers, paying Rs. 200 a month. The library imports books and periodicals direct from England. The local museum has been associated with the library in the same building. As the number of Christian residents increases at the Mofussil stations such public libraries should take the place of the more private and less useful reading clubs. A library in each station might form the nucleus of a museum of local antiquities and of a literary society or institute. Papers and books once read might be lent to the corresponding soldiers' institute which, we trust, will be soon established in every large cantonment.

A MEDICAL VACANCY.—The appointment of surgeon to his excellency the Commander-in-Chief is vacant by the return of Dr. Vaughan to his own Presidency and appointment of marine surgeon at Bombay, which he left to accompany his excellency. We have not heard any medical officer mentioned for the vacant appointment.

GENERAL SERVICE.—The Amalgamation Commission have recommended that three years' service in Europe should count as two in India. Even this, however, will not tempt the Company's officers, as it would still impose upon them a hopeless length of service for pension; but if the Government will say five years in Europe to count as four in India, then we think that a large number of the Company's officers will at once elect for "general service."

COTTON.—At the last meeting of the Agricultural Society of India, specimens of cotton from Berar, the Andaman Islands, Jessore, Gonda, and the Calcutta Botanical Gardens, were exhibited. It was agreed to offer a prize of Rs. 500 for the best essay on the culture of cotton in India from foreign seed. There have been thirty applicants for the seed; ploughs and gins are furnished by the Cotton Supply Association. The Chief Commissioner of Oude has applied on behalf of Rajah Maun Singh, who proposes to cultivate one hundred acres with cotton. The Oude crop from the American seed furnished last season, generally speaking, failed owing to the lateness of the rains. Mr. Wingfield says:—"All that is needed to ensure an abundant supply of good cotton from improved seed, is for the parties interested in obtaining it to ensure the growers a market close at hand for their produce. The people of India very readily respond to the demands of the market, witness the enormous increase in the cultivation of linseed during the past ten years. If, then, the Association would send agents to buy up the produce, it would soon answer their expectations." Mr. Cope, of Umritsur, has been offered five rupees per maund for cotton raised from foreign seed, while the produce of the indigenous plant sells at three rupees. Cotton raised at Salem in Madras from Bourbon seed, which gained the Society's prize of Rs. 1,000, realised 7d. per lb., the Oopum cotton 5d., and that raised at Delhi from New Orleans seed 6½d. per lb. in England.

DUTY ON SALT.—By a Gazette Extraordinary, issued on the 20th of March, the Government raised the duty on salt imported by sea into Bengal to three rupees four annas per maund. The price of the country salt is raised in proportion. The Government of the North-West Provinces notify that from and after the 9th of March the customs duty on sugar exported will be one rupee per maund for clayed and refined, and six annas per maund for unclayed and unrefined. This is double the former rates. The notification is issued in anticipation of Mr. Harrington's Bill, and Government officers will be indemnified for collecting the increased duties till such time as the Bill passes into law. By such indirect taxation as this a considerable addition will be made to the revenue without a murmur.

H.M.'s 73RD REGIMENT has arrived from Dinapore at Raneeungee, and will embark within a few days on board the ships destined to take them to England, which expect to get away on the 6th April. When the 6th Dragoon Guards came down the other day from Raneeungee to embark for England, with an enormous quantity of regimental baggage, including all their saddlery, they had not, at the Howrah station, the slightest help from any department to move the impedimenta, and the men were obliged to do the work themselves, and get it down to the boats unaided. In this terrible weather native labour ought to be brought to bear in these matters, to save the valuable lives of our European soldiers.

DUTY ON OPIUM.—From the 1st of October next the pass duty on Malwa opium will be rupees seven hundred per chest. It is guaranteed this rate will not be increased for one year.

ILLUSTRIOUS MENDICANTS.—The rebel Feroze Shah and the exiled Nuwab of Furruckabad, it is said, have been heard of from Arabia, where they have become professional beggars.

DR. R. B. KINSEY succeeds to the medical charge of the Artillery at Dum-Dum, and of the Mysore Princes, in the room of Dr. Macpherson, appointed Secretary to the Principal Medical Inspector.

BRAIGADE COMMANDS.—There are now five brigade commands vacant in Bengal; and we understand that they are not to be filled up, but that the arrangements for the commands at the vacant stations are to be made in connection with the moveable columns, for the assembling of which a General Order appeared some days ago. These moveable columns will take their stand at some of the stations where brigadiers have hitherto held sway, and the officers commanding them will easily do the double work, thus effecting a serious saving in the military expenditure, without any loss of efficiency.

DARJEELING.—The criminals Amchoong and Jooram have been surrendered by the Sikhim Government, and escorted to Darjeeling. The special envoy and the troops, after a long march on the infamous road, halted in a place fourteen miles from Tumloong for stores. The villages are full with men, women, and children. The sirdars of these villages presented Mr. Eden with a bull and a few goats, and he, in return, has paid them Rs. 20. The bull and the goats are to be made over to the Commissariat Department. The special envoy has also made a present to the Soobah of that place who treated the Rinchinpong prisoners, Moonshee and others, with great kindness during their confinement there." Dr. Campbell some time since proposed, and the Bengal Government recommended, the extension of the line of telegraph from either Rajmahal or Peer Pointee to Darjeeling. As a permanent line, it is believed that the proposed extension could not be carried out under an expenditure of from one lac to one lac and a quarter; and although the connection of Darjeeling with the Presidency by telegraph at the present time would be convenient in a political point of view, the commercial importance of the line is not enough to justify the above expenditure in addition to the cost of maintenance and of working additional offices at a time when the Government is obliged to defer the consideration of other projects of greater importance. The Indian Government has therefore been constrained to withhold its sanction to the proposition.—Englishman.

SEETAPORE, March 16.—We had a slight shower here this afternoon, but barely sufficient to lay the dust. The heat is coming fast, and all are fitting up punkas and tatties. I fear the hot winds and the dust will be shortly unbearable. The head-quarters of H.M.'s 48th Foot are settled in the hungalows and messhouse built by the 90th Light Infantry. The 32nd N.I., Major Richardson's Irregular Cavalry, and a battery of Royal Artillery, are stationed here.

BUNDLECUND.—If Lord Canning does not know it, Sir Richmond Shakespeare does, for we have authority for saying that, so far as Bundlecund is concerned, the district officers have been incessant in their representations to the Resident at Indore of the utterly disaffected state of the population to British rule; of their undisguised sympathy for the rebels still at large; and of the folly and danger of relying too much upon their professions of loyalty. There are at this moment some of the greatest murderers of the mutiny notoriety sheltered in Central India, and who defy apprehension by the British. Burjore Singh, the Thakoor of Baliya in the Jalown district, and Dowlut Singh (second), Thakoor of Kutchwa Agar, are amongst them. They were the principal confederates of the Nana at the commencement of the mutiny, and when that miscreant went into Nepal, they, with a select band of desperadoes, commenced plundering and marauding on their own hook, levying black-mail from British villages—burning those which refused to submit, and otherwise driving terror into the people, whom they thus compelled to aid them on all occasions to escape capture and retribution. Their principal haunts were in the ravines of the Seinde and Powjah rivers, whence they frequently repelled the attacks of our troops, and where they at present appear to live in apparent safety. The Duttiah Rajah in particular, and the whole of the neighbouring villages of Holkar, are known to afford protection and support to these desperate outlaws, and the Deputy Commissioner of Orai, Capt. Ternan, has more than once reported the fact to Government, who have paid little heed to it. Eight months ago the family of Burjore Singh, consisting of his wife, two daughters, a son, and his mother, were, at the instance of the deputy commissioner, taken, after much trouble, at Duttiah, and made over to us. His wife and eldest daughter, however, poisoned themselves on the way to our cantonments; the son, a lad about fifteen or sixteen years old, was concealed in a corn safe, armed with a sword, with which he attempted to commit suicide, but was secured before he could inflict a mortal wound. The confinement of Burjore Singh's family greatly exasperated the inhabitants of his, and the villages of his confederates; and the other day certain zameendars came forward and furnished bail to the extent of Rs. 10,000 for their removal from custody; but the deputy commissioner, with considerable forethought and judgment, while making over the mother and daughter to them, retained the son, as a further security against the father renewing his late atrocities.—Oude Gazette.

LUCKNOW, April 2.—Dinners! dinners! dinners! are my theme. Nothing but dinners and meetings and speeches consequent upon the departure of the late chief commissioner, and the arrival of the new one, are the order of the day. First came a dinner given by the Prince Nawab Musoonodowlah to the chief commissioner, the civilians, and officers of the station. It was a very good dinner, very well and very quietly served, and as much like an English one as could be imagined. After the dinner, some native artists were introduced, who acted certain parts and imitated many animals. I have no doubt it was very good, but it was somewhat obscure and uninteresting to those not versed in native manners or unable to understand perfectly native boli. After these "theatricals," I suppose they should be called, came a very feeble and extremely uninteresting nautch. A very horribly ugly-looking girl, neither pretty nor elegant, nor attractive in any way, much swaddled with embroidered and tinselled robes, essayed to sing through her nose with the additional advantage of a bad cold. After suffering this, with its accompaniments of fiddlers and pipers, we were all invited up stairs into an elegantly furnished and brilliantly lighted room, to witness the fireworks and illuminations. These were most splendid, and it is impossible to speak too highly of them. The provoking part is, that the native artists keep all their skill for these displays of their own countrymen, and though the sab log may pay very extravagantly for such tamasha, they cannot obtain anything equal to what was seen on this occasion. The ground before the Nawab's house is surrounded by the debris of demolitions, and these unevennesses were taken advantage of to render the illuminations as picturesque as possible. To turn from this native dinner to one very much more important and interesting, let me describe that given by the Chief Commissioner to the Lucknow Volunteers. During the day, a splendid Whitworth Rifle, value 500 rupees, sighted to kill at 2,000 yards, the gift of Mr. Wingfield, had been shot for by 16 of the most expert marksmen of the corps. The shooting ground was enlivened by the presence of several ladies and officers from cantonments, and the prize adjudged to G. Nolan, Esq., executive engineer, who had made 15 out of 16 rounds, not bad shooting for a young corps. About 50 sat down to the dinner provided by the Chief Commissioner in the Chutter Munzil, which was most excellently and liberally supplied with all that the heart could wish for. The dinner was most successful, unique of its kind, being a more miscellaneous gathering than is usually seen in the Mofussil. The third and last dinner I have yet to detail was that given by the civil society to the Chief Commissioner. Nothing could exceed the elegance and brilliancy of the room, or the ornamentation of the table, to which, laid out in the form of a double great cross, about seventy gentlemen sat down.—Delhi Gazette.

NAGPORE.—No dissatisfaction or opposition is shown by the people in the collection of the Income-tax, and since the capture of nine rebels in February last in the Chanda district, nothing has been heard of them. But the place is now threatened by free-booters from Hyderabad, to prevent trouble from whom a reference has been made to the Nizam's minister.

THE BAREILLY BRIGADE COMMAND is filled up by the appointment to it of Colonel Holditch, C.B., deputy adjutant general H. M.'s forces at the Presidency, and who has just been brought upon the strength of the brigade staff. Brigadier T. F. Flemyng succeeds to the brigade command at Agra, in the room of Brigadier Showers, C.B., appointed to a divisional command, to succeed General Hearsey in the Presidency division.

FYZABAD, March 18.—Having nothing in the shape of news to communicate to you, and being at the same time tired with keeping a long silence, I have determined to write what may not be very interesting to the generality of your readers, yet I doubt not it will be new to many who do not know much of our Hindoo society. The subject I mean is the Hindoo custom of mourning observed in Oudh and other parts of India (but not in Bengal), by Hindoo ladies of rank and wealth, particularly of the Khettro and Chettry castes, after the demise of their lords or other respectable relatives, for a period of one year. But as this custom is observed very privately in the ladies' apartments or zenanahs, and the male sex are not at all admitted to see it, I think that by speaking of it publicly I may probably incur the displeasure of my countrywomen of the North-West Provinces, particularly of Oudh, where it is most prevalent. However, as I mean no ill by revealing it, I hope I shall be excused. The custom I allude to is called "shapa" in Hindoostanee, and seems to me to be of a recent origin, for no mention is made of it in any of our shasturs, or at least I do not know if there is any. The word "shapa" means (though not literally) a kind of mourning ceremony or tribute, observed or paid daily to the memory of a deceased man or his wife in company with her friends throughout a whole year, the time for the observance of the ceremony being generally in the afternoon, and the hall or room in which it is performed being generally the one (if convenient) in which the deceased had expired. It is as follows:—After the demise of her lord, and when the funeral ceremonies consequent on it are over—that is, some thirteen or fourteen days after the occurrence—the widow, accompanied by her friends and sisters of the neighbourhood, who come to console her, repair to her mourning hall or closet, previously fixed for the purpose, and furnished with carpets, jajins and musnud, beds, &c. When all the women of the neighbourhood take their seats, the afflicted lady of the house sits apart from them unostentatiously upon a sorry-looking mat, which is spread in front of her friends, and commences mourning. This consists in her (the widow) repeating verses, or measured rhymes, in praise of her late lord, and recapitulating, in a mournful tone of voice, all that has passed between him and herself since the day of their marriage, forgetting not even those minutest trifles which the memory of a woman only can retain. These verses are recited in rote, and without any assistance from books. When young, that is about the time of her marriage or after, a Khettry Chettry lady must learn this "shapa," as it is called, from the elder ladies of her house, and when she has once learnt it, it is scarcely ever that she forgets it. It is always kept fresh in her memory from the circumstance of her being called upon to assist in the mourning of her friends and sisters of the neighbourhood which is the custom of the country. But not to deviate from the subject—the widow, while repeating the shapa, sheds abundance of tears, and her friends seeing this cannot but do likewise. And while this shapa continues, which lasts not more than an hour or so, one of the women of the company keeps on beating a tom-tom in harmony with it, and when the grieved lady ceases reciting—ridiculous to say, all the audience at once commence singing, ringing and dancing in a frightful style, that is all the ladies, both young and old, composing the audience throw off their womanly dresses and assume those of men—some putting on caps, turbans, hats, chepkuns and coats, &c., &c., counterfeit rajahs, wuzeers, courtiers, and sahibs, while others having armed themselves with swords, bucklers, muskets, and spears make their exits and entrances as if in a theatre, or fight, or cross sword with each other in defence of, or on account of, an imaginary mistress or princess supposed to be eloped with, and of which some one of them acts the part, &c. Such and such things are daily performed in a "shapa" by Hindoo ladies, and those persons who have seen them by stealth affirm that the whole thing is an excellent and amusing sight to look upon, as far as regards the glittering ornaments, the showy dresses, the charming looks, and the fascinating gestures and motions of the several actresses. After all, "shapa" is a curious mixture of griefs and joys, tears and laughter, gravity and levity, and all other opposites that a woman's head can conceive. —Delhi Gazette.

DELHI, March 15.—Mr. Courtenay, the hotel-keeper, has turned up alive and well, after a prolonged absence. Where he has been, or what has happened to him I know not; I only know that he has returned to Delhi safe and sound, and ought to be very grateful for the interest taken in his fate, as well as for his preservation. The head quarters and right wing of H.M.'s 82nd left Shajehanpore on the 11th for Delhi. The left wing is expected on the 18th. Mr. Cooper, C. B., deputy commissioner of Delhi, heads the civil staff of the station in giving a farewell dinner to the 88th Connaught Rangers this evening. It is worthy of record that ice was made at Agra on the 7th of March! Indeed, the weather has been wonderfully cool of late, and it is now only that we are beginning to get whiffs of the hot winds during the day. Colonel Liptrott is expected to-day to take command of the 4th N.I. The gallant officer has passed the best part of his life in an irregular cavalry regiment. Distress in the district continues on the increase, but the European residents have come forward most liberally, and Government have ably supported them, in endeavouring to alleviate it. The paucity of native names is most marked, and ought to be taken as a proof of the utter selfishness of Asiatics. Fancy a native millionaire subscribing Rs. 300, while a European officer (Commissioner) cheerfully subscribes 1,000, and adds to it 500 per month. It is almost incredible, but the report now publishing will open the eyes of those who "stick up" for the natives of India, and, I hope, lead them to think better of their own countrymen when they see the contrast.

PESHAWUR, March 29.—The 3rd European Light Cavalry reached Nowshera on the 24th, and have since remained under canvas, pending a reply from head-quarters to Sir Sydney Cotton's application for their removal to Peshawur. A telegram was received the night before last which almost decides that the 7th Fusiliers, or a portion of them, are to occupy the barracks at Nowshera, and that the Light Cavalry is to come into those of the 98th in this station, the latter corps removing to the lines in possession of the Fusiliers. The projected move, which is said to have been recommended by the Lieutenant-governor and the Commander-in-Chief, awaits, it would seem, the final sanction of the Governor-general before it can be effected. The whole of the Fusiliers may be sent away, contrary to expectation, but the occurrence of a little affair in the vicinity of Kohat this moment warns us against the policy of leaving Peshawur with one European infantry regiment only, not quite up to the ordinary strength, and whose efficiency will be greatly impaired by the necessity of furnishing detachments to garrison the fort, and to occupy barrack-rooms in the artillery lines to protect the guns. The Kohat affair, which portends very nearly another of those Wuzerees fights which seem to have become quite chronic in this region, consisted of a raid which the hill men suddenly made upon some of the villagers at work in the fields, and resulted in several of the latter being butchered on the spot, while some half dozen wounded, fearfully cut and hacked, were brought in yesterday for medical attendance. —Delhi Gazette.

REWAH.—A band of budmashes from Lucknow have taken shelter in Rewah, and the authorities have been instructed to adopt necessary measures for their apprehension. The Maharaja has addressed a letter to her Majesty the Queen, expressing his gratitude for the jagheer bestowed on him by the British Government for his important services during the late mutiny. The Maharajah, in his recent interview with the Governor-general, expressed a wish that the political agent's office, now at Rewah, be removed to Nagode, as before the mutiny. His lordship replied that he would take the request into consideration.

ALLAHABAD, March 21.—You may remember that Mr. A. H. Cocks was deputed last cold season to investigate into the cases of parties who were supposed to be guilty of the murder of Mr. Tucker, late judge of Futtehpore, who was killed in June, 1857. Although Mr. Cocks was unable, through want of legal evidence, to bring home the crime to any party, yet he considered that the conduct of the Amlah attached to the local offices of Futtehpore in 1857, and who had subsequently been re-instated, was very reprehensible, inasmuch as they failed to render Mr. Tucker any assistance, and did all in their power to render futile the efforts made to arrive at the truth of the cases under investigation, and moreover attempted to screen those who were under trial. The Lieutenant-Governor has, therefore, directed the immediate dismissal of every man who was employed in any of the offices at Futtehpore at the time when the assault on Mr. Tucker took place; these men, moreover, are to be prohibited from future employment under Government. An example of this nature was certainly needed to show the natives that the Government is not to be trifled with. It cannot fail to have a very salutary effect. —Delhi Gazette.

MUSSOOREE, March 18.—I regret to have to chronicle a most sad accident which occurred here a day or two ago, or rather last Thursday night. A young gentleman, a great favourite with us all, of the name of Godfrey Thomas (son of Colonel Thomas, so well known for tea planting in the Dhoon), whilst riding down to Rajpore by the Mackinnon road, went over a frightful precipice two hundred feet deep, in the dark. His horse was found absolutely dashed to pieces, and though much injured himself about the head and face, fortunately no bones were broken. I hear hopes are entertained of his recovery, though really to look at the place where the occurrence took place is enough to make one's blood run cold, and wonder how on earth any man could have escaped immediate death. This unfortunate accident will, I hope, prove a warning to people fond of hard riding on these hills. A better horseman than Godfrey Thomas never put foot in stirrup. —Hurkaru.

JUMMOO.—General Van Cortlandt, deputy commissioner of Hissar, has been deputed to Cashmeer during the ensuing season, to act as official referee in cases in which European travellers are concerned. The trigonometric survey of Jummoo has commenced. Dr. J. Allen is here to prescribe for the Dewan Jowalashahai, who has been long ill. The late Maharajah Jowahan Singh's wives are expected here from Umritsur. At last his Highness Maharajah Runbeer Singh has been informed by his Excellency the Governor-general that he has no objection to the Maharajah's engaging the services of Europeans for the manufacture of liquors and for establishing telegraphic communication within his dominions. The Brigadier (Forrest) commanding the station of Sealkote lately asked Government for permission to enter Cashmere for purposes of sport and recreation. The Government has not complied with the Brigadier's request. The Negees of Sahaul have petitioned Government, stating that the Maharajah of Jummoo interferes with their trade. The matter is now before the Lieutenant-governor.

DISCONTINUANCE OF THE "JULOOS" ERA.—The Bengal Government has brought to the notice of the Supreme Government that the continuance of the era termed "Juloos," or reign of the Mogul Emperor or the King of Delhi, in the Persian table of corresponding dates, or almanacs published each year for the use of the courts and officials, may occasion inconvenience or be liable to misrepresentation. The Governor-general has directed that the insertion of the "Juloos" era may be discontinued and prohibited, and the year of her Majesty's reign substituted in all almanacs and tables of corresponding dates for future years, published under the authority of Government.

DEBROOGHUR.—The Naval Brigade at Debrooghur have been relieved by a reserve company of artillery from Shahjehanpore, and a company of the East Indian Regiment from Dacca is to move up to Debrooghur to support the artillery.

H. M.'s 72ND HIGHLANDERS have marched from Sehore to Mhow, and the 2nd regiment Central India Horse to Gwalior, to relieve the Mahratta Horse at Seepore. Her Majesty's 9th regiment have marched from Neemuch to Mhow, and the European detachment at Sehore has been withdrawn.

REDUCTION OF JAILS.—Nine jails have been lately abolished in the Punjab Division, and nine others are soon to be also given up; a saving of one lakh per annum being made by Government.

MAHARAJAH DHULPES SING, who is now in Calcutta, has profited, it appears, by the successful practice of his highness of Russapuglah, and has petitioned the Viceroy for payment of arrears of stipend from the time of his first detention, when it was temporarily fixed at Rs. 10,000 up to this time; with interest upon the difference of Rs. 10,000, which he has up to now received, and Rs. 21,000, which he asserts to have been the stipend offered him, and declined at that time as being beyond his wants.

TRAVELLING ALLOWANCE.—The Governor-general has sanctioned a maximum allowance of Rs. 12,000 per annum for the travelling allowance of the Lieutenant-governor of the Punjab.

MISCELLANEOUS.

DEATH OF MR. HAYLETT.—Our obituary column of to-day (April 2), contains the name of Mr. William Haylett, a gentleman who was formerly well known in the leading circles of Madras society, but who latterly, on account of infirm health, had lived in almost complete retirement. He belonged to a generation that is fast passing away, having seen Napoleon at St. Helena, and having often been a welcome guest at the residence of the ill-fated Queen Caroline. Mr. Haylett was originally in the Royal Navy, and was present at some of the naval engagements which took place in the early part of the present century. Subsequently he entered the Marine Service of the late East India Company, but ultimately retired from that employment to command a ship of his own, which was engaged in the China trade. On one of his voyages between China and Bombay, he had the good fortune to save a Portuguese man-of-war and the lives of her crew, for which conduct he received the honour of Knighthood from the King of Portugal—a distinction, however, of which he was very far from being proud. Latterly Mr. Haylett had been engaged in mercantile pursuits, in which he had amassed considerable wealth. He died on Thursday last, at the age of 64, sincerely regretted by the few friends whose society he sought during the latter years of his life, and whose kindness had prompted them to cheer the lonely days of an afflicted man.—Atlas.

RAILWAY EMPLOYERS.—The Madras papers publish some official correspondence on the subject of the supply of engine drivers and railway mechanics for the Madras railway. There are at present sixty-one men under training; twenty for engine drivers; sixteen for engine fitters and erectors; five for boiler smiths; sixteen for carriage fitters; and four for carriage examiners. Of these thirty-two are Europeans, twenty-five East Indians, one West Indian, two Africans, and one American. There are also six European and twenty East Indian apprentices. It is believed that the Madras railway will in future be almost independent of labour of this kind from England, and that India must become the nursery for future requirements. It is proposed to establish a "Home" for railway apprentices.

EARTHQUAKE.—We notice there has been a slight shock of earthquake in the Shevaroy hills. It took place on the 4th of March. A gentleman's cook explained to him that it was the "custom" for the earth to make such a rumbling noise once in twelve years. The cook's son said it was "too much hot and the earth got same like headache from too much quinine."

MADRAS UNIVERSITY.—Five Natives and one Eurasian have successfully passed the last examination by the Madras University for the degree of Bachelor of Arts.

DISTURBANCES IN ARRACAN.—The Arakan News states that the Hill tribes have recently attacked the peaceful villagers of the Kolodyne and Myoo, who are our subjects, and that Captain Leigh has been despatched against them at the head of a detachment of the local battalion. Thus the Kookees are no sooner quieted than other aboriginal tribes further east and south demand our attention. The population of the Hills behind Arracan is estimated at 36,000, consisting of four tribes—the Coumonij, Khians, and the Khuas, who are peacefully inclined; the Harrens and the Sendeos, who are bloodthirsty. It is believed that they formerly inhabited the whole province, but were driven into the Hills by the Mugs, who emigrated south-east from Thibet about the beginning of the 6th century.

CINCHONA PLANTATIONS.—From Dr. Macpherson's report on the Cinchona plantations in Java there seems every likelihood that the experiment will still succeed in Southern India, if properly set about. The first attempt of the Dutch in 1854 failed. They then appointed two eminent naturalists to experiment on the plantations, and to take what measures they thought necessary for success. These gentlemen analysed all the plants that died, and gradually discovered what chemical elements were detrimental to their growth. Now the Java cinchonas are said to yield more and better quinine than those of Peru and Bolivia. The Dutch officials were very jealous about giving Dr. Macpherson information, but he has since heard from the British Consul at Batavia that a formal application for plants from the Governor of Madras to the Governor-general of Netherlands India, is sure to be complied with. This will be a cheaper and far more satisfactory plan than another expedition to South America.

BOMBAY.

MISCELLANEOUS.

BOMBAY CAVALRY.—The Bombay Times gives details of the extent of reduction in the Bombay Cavalry, by converting it into light irregulars. It now stands thus:—3 Regiments Light Cavalry, 2 Poona Horse, 2 Guzerat Horse, 3 Southern Mahratta Horse, 4 Sind Horse, 14 corps, each 360 strong, or a total strength of 5,040 men, which is a reduction in actual strength of 1,847 men. The force, which cost £360,000 a-year, will now cost £217,000. The result of the conversion on Gen. Jacob's principles must be greatly increased efficiency. Let the Bombay papers publish equally full details of the native infantry force.

H.M.'s 95TH REGIMENT.—Lieut.-Col. the Hon. F. A. Thesiger will proceed to Europe by the first mail steamer in May. Lieut.-Col. Julius A. R. Raines, C.B., will assume the command of H.M.'s 95th Regiment. Lieut.-Col. G. C. Vialls, of the same regiment, has recently arrived at Poonah from England.

FATAL ACCIDENT FROM A TIGER AT NEEMUCH.—We regret to have to record the occurrence of a most melancholy accident that has occurred near Neemuch, in the death of Lieutenant Charles Newel Grant, of the 2nd European Light Infantry, who died on the 25th of March from the effects of wounds inflicted upon him by a tiger when out shooting. An officer, writing to us from Neemuch under date the 28th March, says:—"Universal and deserved sorrow has been felt at this station, owing to the untimely death of poor young Grant, of the 2nd Bombay Europeans, which occurred on the 25th instant as follows:—A party of officers, viz., Captain Baumgartner, young Hemsted, of the 2nd, Crawford, of the 13th N. I., and poor Grant, proceeded on a shooting expedition to Ruttunghur, thirty miles off. The first day they obtained khubbur of a tiger, which was shot without any accident happening. On Saturday forenoon they were again informed of the presence of a very large tiger some five miles from their camp, to which spot they proceeded, and coming up with the tiger each gave him a couple of barrels, wounding him very severely. The beast then made off for some short jungle; and after beating for him they found the brute again about four or five in the evening, when some shots were fired and he was again hit. He then turned to the right, where poor Grant was in advance of all, and on seeing him fired at him; the brute then seized him, the beaters bolted, and the tiger commenced to bite and claw poor Grant fearfully, carrying him off to some distance. The other officers were only aware of the occurrence by hearing Grant cry out to Baumgartner to come and kill the brute. The latter in the most plucky and brave manner ran to the spot, and found the tiger on the top of Grant crunching his arm. Baumgartner had only one barrel loaded (his shikaree had also bolted with his rifle); but like a fine fellow as he is, he went close up, and placing the muzzle just behind the animal's shoulder, fired, and seeing that even then the tiger would not relax his hold, drew his revolver and fired the five barrels into its head. Hemsted then came up and fired two shots into the savage beast's head, when it died; but before poor Grant could be extricated the brute's jaws had actually to be forced open. Poor Grant was then removed in a dooly into Neemuch, but unavoidably some twenty odd hours elapsed before his wounds could be dressed, owing to the distance he had to be carried. On reaching Neemuch Doctors Arnott and Wright were immediately in attendance, and did all that human skill could, but the poor fellow breathed his last on Tuesday afternoon, the 25th instant. Seldom has such a sad accident as this occurred. The bones of the poor fellow's left arm from the elbow up, were all broken into small pieces, and what added to his misery was that every time Baumgartner fired into the tiger he gave poor Grant a terrific crunch. All the wounds were of the most jagged description, deep claw-marks all over the poor fellow's back, deep claw-marks on his left side, a fearful bite on his left hip, and the flesh very much torn, and the brute's teeth had gone deep into his groin and left thigh; and from the depth the fangs entered his right ankle, it is supposed the brute must have dragged him off by it. Although so fearfully wounded, the poor fellow showed the greatest pluck and was in capital spirits. Great hopes were entertained of his life being spared. Grant was an immense favourite in his regiment, loved both by officers and men, and he leaves many a true friend to mourn over his premature grave. The tiger was of the largest size, measuring twelve feet in length."—Poona Observer.

CENTRAL INDIA COAL.—Mr. Haines, the chemical examiner to the Bombay Government, reports on the coal of the Nerbudda valley, and of Nagpore. Both deposit a very large proportion of ash, and are unfitted for coke. While Wales steam coal deposits 3 per cent. of ash, they leave about 18½. While 1 lb. of the former causes 8·07 lbs. of water to evaporate, 1 lb. of the Nerbudda coal causes 4·54, and of the Nagpore 5·42, to evaporate. The Central India coal seems to be inferior to that of Bengal.

LIEUT.-COL. C. W. TREMENEERE, Engineers, Superintending Engineer Southern Circle, proceeds immediately to Scinde to relieve Colonel H. B. Turner, Chief Engineer of that province. The latter officer is nominated as the successor of Colonel Walter Scott, Chief Engineer at the Presidency and ex officio Secretary to Government in the P. W. D., who resigns the service.

REDUCTION is the order of the day. Every place and every body seem to be affected by it. Sir George Clerk since his accession to the governorship of this presidency has caused considerable reductions in every branch of the service, military, civil, and naval. Local corps have been disbanded, appointments have been abolished, and reductions in establishments effected. The financial effect of these multifarious clippings has been, we understand, something like a saving of five lacs of rupees per annum. If the reductions continue for a little longer to be made at the same rate, our Indian accounts will begin to present a more cheerful appearance than they have done for some years past. The Supreme Government are also adopting the reduction principle. They have recently issued instructions to all the local Governments to reduce the cost of maintaining the several Hill stations and Sanatoria in the presidencies of Bengal, Madras, and Bombay, by making the persons who resort to them bear all the necessary expenses. This does not, however, apply to Sanatoria exclusively used for invalid soldiers and their families.—Bombay Gazette.

MR. JAMES MORRIS has resigned his post as First Assistant Registrar (uncovenanted) to the Sudder Adawlut; and Mr. Harrington succeeds him in the office.

THE LATE DR. BUIST.—By the next mail we (Friend of India, March 28) shall remit to Mr. Marshman, for the family of the late Dr. Buist, the sum of Rs. 3,502, of which Rs. 1,042 were collected in Allahabad and the rest in Calcutta. The late editor of the Bombay Gazette has collected Rs. 1,700, of which the greater portion has been remitted. Thus a total sum of Rs. 5,202 has been subscribed in India almost entirely by the personal friends and admirers of a man who was an honour to the Indian press, to Anglo-Indian philanthropy and science. But for an impression that Dr. Buist's widow was already comfortably provided for, and the demands made on the liberality of the public by the Syrian Christians and our own famine-stricken subjects, the sum collected would have been much larger. The money will be invested on behalf of Dr. Buist's two children. We have reason to believe that among Dr. Buist's papers are some valuable manuscripts which would be of interest to the public. If he has left materials for a new edition of his "Index to Books and Papers on the Physical Geography, Antiquities, and Statistics of India," or had advanced far in his projected work, "The Physical Geography of India," the MS. should be placed in competent hands, with a view to publication.

BOMBAY BRAHMIN.—The Indian Reformer, alluding to the attempts made by Brahmins in Bombay to prevent native Christians from using the public wells, says:—"Such a state of things would not be tolerated under any other Government in the world, whether civilised, semi-civilised, or barbarous. It cannot be doubted for a moment that England's best policy is to cherish that indigenous Christian community, which is rising in every part of the country, and which is destined, ere long, to leaven the whole of native society." Both Lord Elphinstone and the magistrates of Ahmednuggur, Poona, and Sattara condemned the Brahmins in strong terms, and threatened them with the enforcement of the law if they molested the Christians.

The Amalgamation.

INDIA-OFFICE, S.W., February, 1861.

Sir,—I am directed by the Secretary of State for India in Council to forward to you, confidentially, a copy of a despatch* which has been addressed to the Government of India, detailing the plan which has been proposed by H.M.'s Government for converting certain European regiments of H.M.'s Indian forces into regiments of the line.

The formation of a line regiment, representing the ———, to which you belong, will depend upon a majority of the non-commissioned officers and privates now serving with that regiment being willing to accept the conditions of general service, but it is desirable that you should report, as soon as possible, for the information of the Secretary of State for India, on the following points:—

1st. If the regiment to which you belong should be formed into a line regiment, whether you desire to continue your service in it, on the conditions proposed in paragraphs 13 to 16 of the enclosed despatch.

2nd. If the regiment to which you belong should not be formed into a line regiment, whether you would wish to join, on the same conditions of service, any other of the ——— regiments of your presidency which may be formed out of local regiments.

3rd. Whether, in either case you would prefer remaining, on your present conditions of service, in the local army.

You will be so good as to consider this communication as strictly confidential.

I am, sir, your obedient servant,
W. E. BAKER, Colonel.

India-office, London, Jan. 18, 1861.

Military.—No. 28.

To H.E. the Rt. Hon. the Gov. gen. of India in Council.

My Lord,—In my military despatch, No. 848, dated Sept. 5, paragraph 15, I communicated to you the intention of H.M.'s Government that "the European non-commissioned officers and soldiers who have enlisted for the Indian forces up to the present time will continue to serve in India during the term of their engagement on precisely the same conditions and with the same privileges in regard to pension as they now enjoy, and at the expiration of their contract period of service, they will, if fit, be permitted to re-enlist for general service, with the privilege of counting their past service for pension under the regulation of H.M.'s army." And in reiterating that pledge in my despatch, No. 414 of Oct. 31, I added that it is not contemplated by H.M.'s Government to transfer any soldier of H.M.'s Indian forces, without his own consent, to a regiment of the line.

2. At that time it was the intention of H.M.'s Government to retain for the present the existing designations of the European regiments of H.M.'s Indian army, to recruit such of them as are to be retained permanently with men raised for general service on the ordinary conditions of infantry and cavalry soldiers enlisted for H.M.'s line army, and when all the soldiers engaged for loyal service had been replaced by general service men, to complete the assimilation of these regiments with the regiments of infantry and cavalry, respectively, of the British service.

3. H.M.'s Government were anxious to preserve the proud recollections of distinguished service, which belong especially to the old regiments of each Presidency, and to incorporate to H.M.'s army those corps which have so greatly contributed to the acquisition and maintenance of H.M.'s dominions in the East.

4. They were not unaware that some difficulties might have been found from placing in the same regiment men under different conditions of service; but fully relying on the steady behavior of the men, they felt confident that by judicious conduct on the part of the officers any bad result might be avoided.

5. They were of opinion that, in this manner, the discontinuance of local force might gradually be effected with the least disturbance of the existing positions and relations of officers and men.

6. Objections, however, have been raised to this course on legal grounds, and H.M.'s Government have consequently determined on the adoption of the plan which I shall now proceed to explain to your lordship.

7. They are unwilling, by allowing the local corps to die out, which would be the necessary consequence of merely ceasing to fill up their numbers by recruits, that the names of such corps as the three older regiments of each Presidency should cease to be borne on the rolls of H.M.'s army, whilst they feel it to be indispensable that no man, except with his own consent, should have his present term of service altered.

8. The first object will be attained by maintaining these regiments as regiments of the line, the second by retaining in a local corps such men as prefer to continue their service only in India.

9. H.M. has been graciously pleased to sanction the necessary increase of the establishment of her army, and orders are transmitted herewith from H.R.H. the General C. in C. to H.E. the C. in C. in India, who will take the necessary measures for this purpose which depend on him.

* Dated Jan. 18, 1861, No. 28.

10. The plan which they have determined upon is as follows:—

To offer to the non-commissioned officers and men of the 1st Bengal fusiliers the usual bounty given to a man volunteering from one regiment to another if they were willing to accept service on the terms of H.M.'s line forces, and to form a regiment of the line from such volunteers, with the addition of such men of good character of the 4th and 6th regiments of Bengal European infantry as may volunteer to be transferred to it on similar terms, and with similar bounty.

The men who may not volunteer on these terms will be transferred to the 4th regiment of European infantry, which will remain a local corps.

To make to the non-commissioned officers and men of the 2nd Bengal fusiliers, and of the 3rd Bengal European infantry a similar offer to that made to the 1st Bengal fusiliers, and to pursue a similar course in forming from them two new regiments of the line.

11. The men of the 1st and 2nd Bengal fusiliers, and of the 3rd Bengal regiment of infantry who volunteer for line service will be kept in the regiments representing those to which they respectively belong, and those who volunteer from the 4th and 6th regiments must be divided, so as to equalise as far as possible the number in each of the three line regiments. If the numbers fall short of 850 in each regiment, the complement can be made up by men from regiments leaving India, or by recruits.

12. If the men declining these terms are more than enough to fill up the 4th Bengal European Regiment, the 6th Bengal European Regiment must likewise be retained as a local regiment.

13. It is necessary that the officers of these three general service regiments should be generally under the conditions of service of line officers, and that they should be permanently attached to their regiments. It is considered to be desirable that they should be taken from among the officers of the local armies, and, as far as possible, from the old regiments which will be respectively represented by the new ones.

14. By my despatch of this date, No. 27, you have been directed to place all the officers of the European and Native regular infantry and cavalry of each Presidency on general lists, and you will invite from these lists the number of officers required for the new line regiments to volunteer for general service in these regiments, on the same conditions as line officers, except that the system of purchase when it prevails in the army of the line will not be allowed in these regiments. The present and prospective advantages which officers derive from the military and orphan funds will be secured to them, and they will be allowed retiring pensions under the Indian regulations, counting their service in India in full, and one year for every two years of their future service out of India, in completion of the periods of service required under those regulations for the several grades of pension.

15. These officers will be formed into cadres, of the strength noted in the margin,* exclusive of regimental staff, and will be appointed by the C. in C. to do duty with the several new regiments, and they will eventually receive new commissions from her Majesty in those regiments bearing the same dates respectively as the commissions which they now hold. Such of them as may have belonged to the three older local regiments will be appointed respectively to the new regiments representing those to which they belonged. And it should be secured to them that they shall hold a position in the new regiments as far as possible the same as that which they held in the old ones.

16. Names of these officers will remain on the General List, printed in italics, to regulate the promotion of their juniors, in precisely the same way as if they had been transferred to the Staff Corps under the conditions detailed in my separate despatch on this subject.

17. The three older regiments in the Bengal Presidency will thus be converted into regiments of H.M.'s general army, and will be numbered and designated as follows:—

The 101st Regiment of Foot (or 1st Bengal Fusiliers).

The 107th Regiment of Foot.

They will be permitted to bear on their colours and appointments the honorary distinctions won by the regiments of the Indian army, which they will respectively represent.

18. In my despatch, No. 374, dated 9th October, you were directed to form into three regiments of European light cavalry the five existing regiments of that arm in the Bengal Presidency, and, assuming this consolidation to have been completed, measures will now be taken analogous to those above prescribed for the conversion of these regiments into three regiments of Light Dragoons of H.M.'s general army.

* 1 lieutenant-colonel, 2 majors, 12 captains, 14 lieutenants, 10 ensigns (including two companies at the depot). A colonel will be appointed hereafter to each regiment.

19. Such of the non-commissioned officers and men of each of the three regiments as may accept the offer of bounty on the conditions of general service, will form the basis of a new regiment of Dragoons, which will be made up hereafter to the complement of 500 sabres. The three regiments will be respectively designated as follows:—

20th (Light) Dragoons (now 2nd Bengal Eur. L.C.)
21st (Light) Dragoons (now 3rd Bengal European Light Cavalry).

20. The officers of the three regiments, having been placed on a general list under the instructions of my despatch of this date, No. 27, will be permitted to volunteer for general service in the regiments representing those to which they formerly belonged, and any vacancies that may then remain in the cadres of officers, calculated on the establishment of a dragoon regiment as per margin,† exclusive of regimental staff, will be filled up in the following manner:—

The 19th Light Dragoons by volunteers from the remaining officers of the Bengal cavalry.

The 20th and 21st Light Dragoons by volunteers from the officers of Madras and Bombay cavalry respectively.

21. The non-commissioned officers and men who may prefer the conditions of local service will be placed in the 4th Bengal European Light Cavalry, which will be re-formed for that purpose, with the officers who belonged to it, as a local regiment.

22. The measures for the conversion of the European regiments in the Madras and Bombay Presidencies into regiments of the line will be similar to those prescribed for adopting in Bengal, but with such modifications as circumstances render necessary.

23. At Madras, the non-commissioned officers and soldiers accepting the conditions of general service will be formed into three regiments of the line, which will be designated as follows:—

102nd Regiment of Foot (or Madras Fusiliers).
105th Regiment of Foot (or Madras Light Infantry).

108th Regiment of Foot, and they will bear on their colours and appointment, any honorary distinctions belonging to the old regiments which they will respectively represent.

The men who may not accept the offer of bounty will be placed in a separate corps for local service, which may be designated the Madras European Regiment.

25. To this corps officers of the three European regiments who may not volunteer for general service, and, if required, other officers from the general list will be appointed to do duty.

26. In the Bombay presidency the three new regiments of the line will be formed in the manner above described of volunteers from the three existing regiments of European infantry, including the German soldiers of the 3rd European regiment, who will also be permitted to volunteer, and will be designated respectively,—

The 103rd Regiment of Foot (or Bombay Fusiliers).
The 106th Regiment of Foot.
The 109th Regiment of Foot.

They will bear on their colours any honorary distinctions which have been won respectively by the 1st, 2nd, and 3rd Bombay European regiments.

27. The men who may not accept the offer of bounty will be placed in a separate corps for local service, which may be designated the Bombay European Regiment.

28. Officers will be provided for these regiments in the manner above described, with reference to Bengal and Madras, except that in the formation of a cadre of officers for the 109th Bombay Regiment of Foot, the claims of the Gremian officers whom, after receipt of my despatch No. 154 of the 5th September, the Government of Bombay may have thought it necessary to retain with the 3rd European Regiment, will be considered. Such of these officers as may desire it will receive commissions in their present grades in the 109th Foot.

The new regiments added, in the manner above described, to the establishment of H.M.'s army, will be available for general service, and will be twelve in number, as follows:—

19th Regiment of (Light) Dragoons.
20th Regiment of (Light) Dragoons.
21st Regiment of (Light) Dragoons.
101st Regt. of Foot (or 1st Bengal Fus.) Bengal.
102nd Regt. of Foot (or Madras Fusiliers) Madras.
103rd Regt. of Foot (or Bombay Fusiliers) Bombay.
104th Regt. of Foot (or 2nd Bengal Fus.) Bengal.
105th Regiment of Foot (or Madras Light Infantry) Madras.

106th Regiment of Foot, Bombay.
107th Regiment of Foot, Bengal.
108th Regiment of Foot, Madras.
109th Regiment of Foot, Bombay.

I have the honour to be, my lord,
Your lordship's most obedient, humble servant,
(Signed) CHAS. WOOD.

† 1 lieutenant-colonel, 2 majors, 9 captains, 9 lieutenants, 9 cornets (including one troop for the depot). A colonel will hereafter be appointed to each regiment.

H.M.'s 6th Dragoon Guards.

Military Dept., Fort William, March 20.—No. 251 of 1861.—After an eventful term of duty in India, H.M.'s 6th Dragoon Guards (Carabiniers) are on the eve of returning to England, and H.E. the Viceroy and Gov. gen. in Council embraces this opportunity of expressing his high appreciation of their services.

The regiment was at Meerut when the first outbreak of mutiny took place in 1857, and was one of the first required to take the field.

After twice meeting the mutineers on the banks of the Hindun, a portion of the regiment joined the field force proceeding to Delhi, and was conspicuous in the engagement at Bundlee-Ka-Sarai, which resulted in the firm possession by the British troops of the heights before Delhi.

During the siege the men of this regiment, among other important services, gave cheerful and valuable aid in working the heavy batteries.

In the operations in the Goorgoon District, at Narnool, in Rohilcund, in Oude, and in the pursuit of Tantia Topse through Rajpootana and Central India, in all of which detachments of the Carabiniers took part, the regiment established fresh claims to the thanks of Government.

The Viceroy and Gov. gen. in Council desires to assure Col. Custance, C.B., and the officers and men of this distinguished regiment, that their honourable services in the field, in a period of great public emergency, will always be remembered by the Government of India with the highest consideration.

Sir Patrick Grant.

MINUTE BY THE RT. HON. THE GOV. GEN.

A letter has just been received from the Government of Madras, announcing that H. E. Lieut. Gen. Sir Patrick Grant proposes to resign the command of the Madras army, and to proceed to England by the first steamer in March.

Sir Patrick Grant's duties, during the time that I have held the Government of India, have not been confined to the Madras Presidency, but have, upon one memorable occasion, brought him into direct and most intimate relation with the Supreme Government in Calcutta; and as the services which, by his fine professional experience and his thorough knowledge of Bengal and of its army, he was enabled to render to India, at that critical time, were very great, I am desirous that Sir P. Grant should not lay down his command without a distinct and cordial acknowledgment of those services being placed on the records of the Supreme Government. The assistance which the Government of India received from him, from the time when, in June 1857, it called upon him to assume the command vacant by General Anson's death, to the time of Lord Clyde's arrival in India, will not be forgotten by any member of that Government.

I do not speak of Sir Patrick Grant's discharge of his subsequent duties after his return to Madras, for those of course were not performed under the eye of the Gov. gen.; but I cannot forbear to say that the earliest, judicious, and successful exertions made by him, in common with his colleagues, to reduce the military expenditure of that presidency, entitle him to the best thanks of the Gov. gen. in Council.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

THE INDIAN BUDGET.

MR. GLADSTONE has forestalled Mr. Laing in the enunciation of his annual financial scheme, and is also fortunate in another respect—he has a surplus to deal with. Not so the Chancellor of the Indian Exchequer. Upon him falls the ungenial duty of equalising expenditure with income, in the face of all kinds of obstructions and a falling revenue. He has besides to do away with the false hopes held out by the Secretary of State for India, misled by the sketch estimate sent home for his guidance. Sir Charles Wood was under the impression that the reductions in 1860-61 would nearly equal those of the preceding year, or about three millions and a-half sterling. The figures he quoted were £3,300,000, whereas the actual decrease did not exceed half a million. Mr. Wilson, indeed, expected to reduce the expenditure by £1,700,000, but this included £1,250,000 to be saved by adopting the recommendations of the Military Finance Commission. That contingency, however, proved a disappointment, and the consequence was that the expenditure for 1860-61 amounted to £40,630,888, or £213,426 in excess of that of 1859-60. This increase, however, was partly due to compensations being granted to sufferers by the mutiny to the extent of £700,000, an accidental and non-recurrent charge. There was, therefore, a positive reduction of about £500,000. For the ensuing year the military expenditure will probably be reduced from £15,279,005 to £12,500,000, and the naval expenditure from £856,870 to £300,000; making a grand total of £3,335,875. But, on the other hand, the revenue is likely to fall considerably short of the estimate submitted by Sir Charles Wood to the British Parliament. The cash balances on the 1st of May are expected to amount to £11,500,000, from which £500,000 must be deducted for the payment of the Delhi and Lucknow prize-money. The Income-tax will certainly not justify the sanguine anticipations of the advocates of that measure. Instead of three and a-half millions it will not produce more than two, but the year 1861-62 will only benefit to the extent of £1,000,000. The license-tax, if brought into operation, is also estimated at £1,000,000, and the increase in opium and stamps is put down at £750,000. But against this must be set off the supercession of the Punjab trade taxes, worth about £214,000 a year, and the Madras Moturpha, say £108,000. It is likewise stated in the Englishman that the miscellaneous receipts of the past year were £400,000 in excess of the average, and cannot be calculated upon to the same extent for the financial year beginning on the first of this month. Another important consideration is the loss of revenue by famine, which is certainly underrated by the Friend of India at £500,000. The Government will be very fortunate if that calamity do not affect its revenue to a greater amount than three millions, but under the most favourable circumstances there will still remain a deficit of fully four millions. It is true, some further reductions may yet be made even in the military department, for it is proposed to maintain a native army of 120,000 men in addition to a constabulary force of 138,000. The European army is fixed at 70,000, which may be regarded as the minimum consistent with the preservation of external and internal tranquillity. But there cannot be the slightest occasion for so large a native force as 120,000 men. At least 20,000 may be struck off this muster, which at £25 a man—the annual cost of a sepoy—would give a saving of quite half a million sterling, besides diminishing the risk of a future struggle with the Sikhs. Considerable retrenchments are also being made in the Civil Department, but it is doubtful if these can be advantageously carried much farther. But no equal balance will be struck either this year or the next, and in 1864 Dr. Cumming has fixed the outburst of his “Coming Tribulation.” Still, it would have been satisfactory to have adjusted expenditure with income prior to that interesting event, but at present the chances are much against such a desirable consummation. The prospect is certainly not encouraging.

INDIAN MUTINY RELIEF FUND.

A FEW last words are yet to be written on the subject of this Fund. At the close of the year 1860 the balance in hand amounted in round numbers to £230,000, of which about £95,000 were invested in the New Three per Cents., and £128,000 in Four per Cent. East India Debentures. These several investments produce an annual income of £8,200, for the management of which an establishment is maintained at a cost of very nearly £1,400, including a salary of £200 a-year to a general officer as superintendent of the Fund. But what is there to superintend? What need is there for such an expensive system of administration? It is surely an unheard-of thing that one-sixth of the proceeds of an estate should be absorbed in the mere machinery for spending those proceeds. There are no charges for collection, no fresh inquiries to be made, no correspondence to be conducted, nothing, in short, to justify one-fourth part of this incidental outlay. At certain fixed periods, whether monthly or quarterly is of little consequence, settled allowances are to be paid to so many widows, and for the benefit of so many orphans. This can hardly be a very onerous task, and one might have supposed that the bankers who receive the dividends would, under all the circumstances of the case, have cheerfully agreed to undertake these simple and mechanical duties. But for what purpose was this large sum of money invested in Government Securities? It could not have been as a temporary arrangement, for in the troubled state of foreign affairs which has existed for so many months the Committee would hardly have selected a security, the realisation of which might have caused a loss of several thousand pounds. We are in some measure forced to conclude that it was rather the intention of the Committee to appropriate merely their annual income to the relief of the widows and orphans still upon their lists, and to reserve the capital for some grand purpose in the more or less remote future. Perchance they dreamed of founding an hospital, with their names carved in stone over the entrance, or of erecting some half-dozen churches in India, or of building a war-steamer to be presented to the nation. In any case it could not be otherwise than satisfactory to know that they were masters of a Fund amounting to nearly a quarter of a million sterling, and that even in the capacity of trustees they would become the object of very general, if not disinterested, respect and curiosity on the part of the public community. And yet how is this idea of permanence to be reconciled with General Tremeneheere's recent statement that the Fund was barely solvent? In the month of February last there was a balance of £230,000, producing an annual increase of £8,200, minus the £1,400 for expenses of management, and on the debtor side a certain number of cases receiving temporary relief, the continuance of which was limited to the current year, unless otherwise determined hereafter. But General Tremeneheere cannot possibly mean to assert that the capitalisation of the claims mentioned in the report would require anything like so large an amount as £230,000. It is perfectly incredible that he could have intended to convey any such meaning, though it is difficult to extract any other from his curt and not very courteous reply to the Honorary Secretary of the Famine Relief Fund. He owes it not only to himself, but to the entire body of contributors to the Fund, of which he is the salaried superintendent, to give fuller and more satisfactory explanations of the real state of the case. There is a very prevalent belief that, at the outside, one hundred thousand pounds will amply cover all the liabilities alluded to in the published and official report, and equally general is the desire that the surplus should be applied to the relief of our starving fellow-subjects in India. If the reasonable curiosity of the public on this matter be not promptly satisfied, the Committee and their superintendent will have only themselves to thank if an unfavourable, even though erroneous, impression be made by their defiant and contemptuous silence.

THE LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL.

THAT the Legislative Council of Calcutta is doomed to early extinction may fairly be inferred from the tenor of the recent discussion on that subject in the House of Lords. Though by no means disposed to become the panegyrist of that august conclave, we are compelled by a sense of justice to protest against the disparaging, and even insulting, epithets applied to it on that occasion. To incur the censure of a Lyveden may not, perhaps, be considered either a hardship or a disgrace, and some might even prefer his lordship's disapprobation to the most high-flown compliments that could pass “the barrier of his teeth.” But it is a different matter when a statesman so calm and moderate as Earl Grey—in spite of his numerous crotchets—permits himself to speak of a small body of high-placed officials as a “miserable farce.” It is neither wise nor gentlemanly to use abusive language. In rebuking even Satan, St. Michael controlled his tongue, and brought no railing accusation against him. But Lord Ellenborough, if less personal, was even louder in his denunciations than Earl Grey. The noble earl took shame to himself for having been instrumental in calling that council into being. Lord Broughton, he said, had displayed clearer foresight than himself, for he predicted the very evils that have since resulted from its existence. He then went on to ridicule its parliamentary pretensions, and declared that, as at present constituted, it threatened to discredit the Government, and endanger the stability of the empire. Earl Grey fully concurred in these views, and added that it was intolerable that the Chief Justice should lead the opposition. But why so? The Chief Justice is not the creature, or even servant, of the Local Government. He is appointed by the Crown, in like manner with the Viceroy himself, and is bound to act up to his convictions, whether in favour or otherwise of the measures propounded by his colleagues in the Council. No doubt, his hostility may greatly impede the legislative action of the Government, but if that action happen to be in a wrong direction, this impediment is scarcely to be regretted. The error lies in regarding this assembly of experienced officials as in any sense a representative body. Its business, as its name implies, is simply to make laws, and its most inveterate opponents will hardly deny that a very large number of excellent laws have been framed by it during the seven years it has been at work. The chief defect in the constitution of this Council is the publicity given to its discussions. Few men are proof against the temptation of making an oratorical display coram publico. Theoretically, nothing can be better than the organisation of the Calcutta Council. It consists of members of the different presidencies and sub-presidencies, well versed in public business, and thoroughly acquainted with the character of the peoples for whom they are called upon to legislate. These "potent, grave, and reverend signiors," if unbiassed and unexcited by the presence of reporters and a critical audience, would probably impart their local experiences to one another with brevity, conciseness, and good temper. If they happened to disagree on any point, mutual explanations, offered with placid courtesy, would speedily remove all grounds for variance, and the idea of splitting into two parties would never enter the head of any one. But there is no stumbling-block so dangerous in the path of a public man as rhetorical vanity. Instead of contenting themselves with the calm and severe duty of assisting the Viceroy in framing new laws and amending old ones, the members of the Council are striving to transform themselves into wordy debaters, whose triumph consists not in convincing their colleagues, but in defeating their opponents, and figuring next morning in the columns of the local papers. This is, after all, a pitiful ambition. If really anxious to be well thought of by their contemporaries, they would act far more wisely in seriously devoting themselves to the unimpassioned discharge of their legislative duties,—ignoring the presence of the representatives of the press and the casual go-be-mouches of Calcutta. Imagine a Cabinet Council conducted on this principle! What real work would ever be done? What definite policy would ever be discussed or carried out?

Banish the reporters, banish the public, and we should never again hear the proceedings of this assembly stigmatised in the British Parliament as "a miserable farce." The Government of India is essentially a despotism tempered by its responsibility to public opinion at home, and on no other principle can it be conducted with credit to itself and to the benefit of the people subjected to its sway.

IMPERIAL PARLIAMENT.

HOUSE OF LORDS.—APRIL 26.

LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL OF INDIA.

LORD LYVEDEN, in presenting a petition from the inhabitants and taxpayers of Calcutta and Bengal Proper, complaining of the system of Government in India, gave at the same time a brief summary of its contents. The petitioners, he said, complained that while financial embarrassment in India had stopped public works a considerable addition had been made to the Mysore grant, relative to which the Indian Government had refused to supply information; that the military expenditure was excessive, that the system of accounts was vicious, and that the whole of the Indian revenue was subject to the pleasure of the Secretary of State for India. The petitioners suggested also that the members of the Council of India should have seats in Parliament, and that the Legislative Council of India should be enlarged by the addition of qualified non-official members. Having interspersed his epitome of the petition with comments, Lord Lyveden condemned the Legislative Council, and concluded by asking when the measure of the Government relating to the Legislative Council of India would be introduced.

LORD DE GREY and RIXON could not exactly say when the Bill alluded to by Lord Lyveden would be introduced, but knew it to be in a forward state of preparation. He then briefly explained the reasons which had dictated the grant to the Mysore princes, and defended the Legislative Council from Lord Lyveden's strictures. As to the military expenditure, he allowed it was excessive; measures were, however, being taken for its reduction. He entirely concurred in the necessity of laying accurate accounts of Indian expenditure before Parliament, but he denied that the powers of the Secretary of State for India were so absolute as represented by the petitioners. As the Government were about to bring forward a measure in reference to the Legislative Council, he declined for the present to discuss that part of the petitioners' prayer.

THE DUKE OF AROLYL briefly explained the reasons which induced the Government of 1853 to bring forward the Act for altering the Legislative Council.

LORD ELLENBOROUGH felt satisfied that the continuance of the Legislative Council as at present constituted was inconsistent with the honour, the dignity, and the strength of the Government of India.

AFTER A FEW REMARKS FROM LORD CLANRICARDE,

LORD GREY said he could conceive nothing more hurtful to British power in India than the continuance of that miserable farce the Legislative Council.

LORD LYVEDEN having said a few words in reply, the subject was allowed to drop.

EAST INDIAN RAILWAY.

The report of the directors states that the progress made in the North-Western Provinces justifies the expectation that the main line from Calcutta to Delhi will be completed by the end of 1862. With regard to the Jubbulpore line, the plans and sections of which are quite ready for letting the works to contract, or for proceeding with them under the departmental system, it has been suggested by the Government of India, on financial grounds, whether it might not be desirable to postpone their active prosecution for the present, and the matter is now under the consideration of the Secretary of State for India.

The number of miles open in the Bengal division is 248, the average length of line at work during the half year being 200 miles. The permanent way and works have been maintained during the half-year at the cost of 6½d. per train mile. The working expenses have been 53·77 per cent., showing an increase of 9 per cent. over the previous half-year—the inevitable consequence of working a considerably extended mileage without a compensating increase in the traffic, that on the extension to Rajmahal being almost entirely confined to passengers. The Board have no doubt that as the traffic on the extension to Rajmahal develops itself, the working expenses will assume the ratio to the receipts which they have hitherto held. The total number of passengers carried during the year 1860 was 1,567,200, against 1,388,714 in 1859, or an increase of 178,486 passengers. The amount of permanent way materials, included in the traffic returns of the last half-year, was about 13 per cent. The gross traffic receipts for the half-year ended the 31st of December last amounted to £121,869, against £113,449 in the corresponding half of 1859, showing an increase of £8,420. The gross receipts for the year 1860 amounted to £244,810, against £233,055 in 1859, showing an increase of £11,755. The net traffic receipts since the opening of the line have been as follows:—In the year 1855, £31,253; in 1856, £57,060; in 1857, £82,771; in 1858, £89,148; in 1859, £128,534; and in 1860, £124,358. Those amounts have been duly paid over to the Government. In the North-Western Provinces 123 miles of railway are open for traffic. The permanent way and works have been maintained in good order at a cost of 7½d. per train mile. The working expenses have been 49·86 per cent. The number of passengers carried during the last half-year was 104,160, of which 1,244 were first-class passengers, 2,488 second class, and 100,428 third class. The amount of permanent way materials included in the traffic returns of the last half-year was about 20 per cent. The gross traffic receipts for the half year ended the 31st of December last have been £47,201, showing an increase of £10,104 over the corresponding half of 1859. For the first seven weeks of the present year the receipts amounted to £22,624, against £14,450 in the corresponding period of the preceding year on the same mileage. The net traffic receipts since the opening of the line for public traffic have been as follows:—For four months ending the 30th of June, 1859, £14,227; half-year ending the 31st of December, 1859, £17,935; half year ending the 30th of June, 1860, £22,014; and half-year ending the 31st of December, 1860, £23,695. Those sums have been paid to the Government of India. In their last report the Board stated that the cost of the main line would be £19,700,000, and it appears that the Government of India agree in this estimate. The total amount already subscribed and borrowed on debentures, including the balance of the capital raised for the Jubbulpore line, which is being temporarily applied to the main line, is £15,900,500, and it follows that the sum required to complete the line to Delhi is £3,799,500. Of this amount the Board are now engaged in raising under their borrowing powers £899,500, and the balance, or £2,900,000 will have to be provided for either in share capital or in debentures convertible into shares. It is calculated that probably two-thirds of this sum will be required by the end of 1862, and one-third during 1863. The company has Parliamentary powers to raise in share capital £20,000,000, and borrowing powers to the extent of £3,000,000, so that, assuming the main line to cost £19,700,000, there is an ample margin for the line to Jubbulpore. The directors state that it has been rather generally assumed that the amount of capital required for the completion of the present authorised system of Indian railway communication is in excess of the capital which the several railway companies have power to raise, while the fact is, the Board believe the whole system will be completed within the nominal capitals of the undertakings formed for the purpose. The Board certainly see no reason to doubt its being so with this company, nor do they entertain any question as to the position of their contemporaries.

The capital account to the 30th of October in India, and the 31st of December last in England, showed that £15,773,481 had been received, and £14,553,007 expended, including £171,778 on the Jubulpore line, leaving a balance of £1,220,475.

MISCELLANEOUS.

DR. DEALTRY'S SUCCESSOR.—The Rev. F. Gell has been just appointed Bishop of Madras. Mr. Gell, who has been for some time domestic chaplain to the Bishop of London, had achieved remarkable academical distinction. He was Bell's University Scholar in 1841, and Senior Optime in 1843. He was also Theological Examiner at Cambridge from 1855 to 1859, and Whitehall Preacher from 1858 to 1860. Mr. Gell has been warmly recommended both by the Archbishop of Canterbury and the Bishop of London.

SIR J. HOPE GRANT.—(Whitehall, April 29.)—The Queen has been pleased to give and grant unto Major-general Sir James Hope Grant, G.C.B., having the local rank of Lieut.-general in the East Indies and China, and late commanding H.M.'s land forces in China, H.M.'s Royal licence and permission that he may accept and wear the insignia of the Imperial Order of the Legion of Honour of the Second Class, which his Majesty the Emperor of the French hath been pleased to confer upon him for his distinguished services before the enemy during the late combined British and French operations in China.

THE INDIA MUSEUM, WHITEHALL-YARD.—In consequence of the removal of the Council and Government of India from the old India House, the valuable museum, which had for so many years existed there, has been removed to Fife House, Whitehall, where it is being arranged preparatory to its being thrown open to the public. Fife House adjoins the United Service Museum in Whitehall-yard, and was formerly the residence of Lord Liverpool. It is not, of course, well adapted for the purposes of a museum, but it may serve as a temporary depot for the extensive collection of silks and jewels, and metal wares, and other produce and manufactures which illustrate the wealth of our Indian empire. In the entrance hall there will be placed the marble statues of Wellington, Clive, Hastings, and other military men and statesmen, who have at one time or another distinguished themselves in the field, or in the council of India. The staircase will be hung with the pictures which were formerly in the possession of the East India Company. The library formerly occupied by Lord Liverpool is now filled with the mineral products of India; the dining-room is stored with raw products and manufactures in jewellery and Japan wares; the drawing-room has been fitted up with much care, in which will be displayed the silk and jewelled dresses of the East. A small room adjoining is filled with models of agricultural implements, and of the various craft for navigating the seas and rivers of India. The large collection of models, illustrating the manners and customs of the people, will be shown in a corridor adjoining. The six bed-rooms on the upper floor are filled with birds, which have been most carefully classified by Mr. Moore, and arranged very ingeniously, so as to take advantage, in the best manner, of the somewhat unfavourable light which the small and inconvenient rooms afford. The kitchen of the establishment is filled with antelopes, stags, leopards, and other large stuffed animals. A fine collection of the Elliot marbles, consisting of slabs, cornices, panels, and other portions of the sculptures from the ruins of Amrawutti are being arranged in the grounds of Fife House. These marbles have not yet been exhibited in this country, and they are remarkable for the extreme delicacy, minuteness, and finish. The subjects represented are connected with the worship of Buddha, and formed at one time portions of a magnificent temple, of which the ruins now alone remain to tell of the patient skill of its founders. The museum will probably not be open to the public for five or six weeks.—Observer.

APPOINTMENTS.—Downing-street, April 27.—The Queen has been pleased to appoint Perceval and A. Fletcher, Esqrs., to be Members of the Legislative Council of the Colony of Hong Kong; and Daniel William Blyth, Esq., to be Master Attendant of Galle, in the island of Ceylon.

ASSAM TEA COMPANY.—The annual meeting of the Assam Company was held on Friday, the 3rd, Mr. H. M. Kemshead in the chair, when the report recommending a dividend of 12 per cent., free of income-tax, was adopted. It was stated that the crop of the past season amounted to 880,154lb. of tea, showing an increase over 1859 of 69,474lb., and that the yield of the current season is estimated at 972,982lb. The produce of 1859 has been realised, except a very small quantity, and the net profit of the year is calculated to be £84,983. The average yield has been 1s. 8d. per lb., or less than in the preceding year. This result is attributable partly to the general prevalence of lower prices and partly to the larger proportion of inferior tea, arising from a want of care in the plucking and first stages of the manufacture. The latter defect is now believed to have been remedied. During the past season sixty-five additional poorahs of land have been brought under cultivation, making a total of 3,544 poorahs now being tilled. Satisfactory progress has been made in the plantations at Cachar, and it is stated that the gardens are maintained in a high state of cultivation. Their yield this season is expected to be 16,000lb. Machinery has been invented by two of the principal officers for effecting improvements in the preparation of tea and for rolling the leaf, both of which are expected to prove of great service in economising labour. An approximate valuation of the property of the company shows that it is worth about £485,243, while the paid-up capital is £193,337 only, so that a large proportion of the present value of their possessions has been created out of the current income.

BOOKS.

From Calcutta to Pekin. By J. H. Dunne, Capt. 99th Regt. Sampson, Low & Co.

Captain Dunne deprecates criticism on the ground that "these notes were not written with any intention of publishing them, but were merely entered in a book for the amusement of some relatives." He adds that he has not time "even to read them over, as they are going by the present mail to England." But why, then, did he not wait for the following mail? There does not appear to be any valid reason why this brief and meagre diary should be published in such hot haste, or, indeed, why it should be published at all. It is certainly not instructive. It imparts no information of the slightest value to any one, nor is it calculated to afford much amusement to general readers. At the same time we can fully understand that to his personal friends and comrades his good-humoured rattle may not be disagreeable. As a record of the military operations in China his journal is utterly useless, but as a sketch of military life it is not altogether devoid of merit, though it does not give one a very exalted notion of the professional zeal and earnestness of British officers. Novels, snipe shooting, and iced champagne appear to be the three things on which Captain Dunne and his friends mostly set their heart, and which occupied much more of their attention than the strategical combinations of their commanders, or the success of the Armstrong guns. This would, no doubt, be an unjust and erroneous view to take, but it is the only one suggested by Captain Dunne's narrative. Like many other amateur writers, he mistakes flippancy for vivacity, exaggeration for humour, and bad grammar for fluency. However, as he wrote only to please his relatives, he will probably not be disappointed if none but his relatives are pleased with what he has written.

History of the Siege of Delhi. By an Officer who served there A. and O. Black.

It is fortunate, perhaps, that this officer did not serve also at the Siege of Troy, or in spite of the Horatian canon we should have had that war set forth gemino ab ovo. He thus commences his narrative of the Siege of Delhi in 1857. "With Mahmud of Ghazni, A.D. 1001, and in the 391st year of the Hegira, the Mussulmans first entered India." It is only fair, however, to admit that he rapidly disposes of olden times, and brings Lord Dalhousie on the stage in the 7th page of his first chapter. Though somewhat late in the day his account of the feats of arms under the walls of Imperial Delhi is still full of genuine interest, especially for those who, like himself, took a personal part in those stirring events. His style is clear, simple, and vigorous, wholly free from exaggeration, but warming to a generous glow whenever some exceptionally brilliant deed is to be recorded. In some passages there is a startling resemblance to corresponding pages in the Rev. Cave Brown's standard History of the Mutiny in the Punjab; but we are inclined to suspect that in these instances the latter is indebted to our author's letters in the Times for the materials of his own story. As a taste of his quality we extract the following characteristic sketch of the redoubtable Nikhul Seyn:—

"About this time a stranger, of very striking appearance, was remarked visiting all our picquets, examining everything, and making most searching inquiries about their strength and history. His attire gave no clue to his rank; it evidently never cost the owner a thought. Moreover, in those anxious times every one went as he pleased; perhaps no two officers were dressed alike. It was soon made out that this was General Nicholson, whose person was not yet known in camp; and it was whispered at the same time that he was possessed of the most brilliant military genius. He was a man cast in a giant mould, with massive chest and powerful limbs, and an expression ardent and commanding, with a dash of roughness; features of stern beauty, a long black beard, and deep sonorous voice. There was something of immense strength, talent, and resolution in his whole gait and manner, and a power of ruling men on high occasions, that no one could escape noticing at once. His imperial air, which never left him, and which would have been thought arrogance in one of less imposing mien, sometimes gave offence to the more unbecoming, among his countrymen, but made him almost worshipped by the plant Asiatics. He seemed to disdain any other than a ruling part, speaking rarely in ordinary society. Such a man would have risen rapidly from the ranks of the legions to the throne of the Cæsars; but, in the service of the British, it was thought wonderful that he became a brigadier-general when, by a seniority, he could only have been a captain."

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

THE Calcutta Mail of the 10th of April is so far interesting that it brings Mr. Laing's triumphant refutation of the hasty charges made against him by the Great Western of Canada Railway Company. The correspondence on this subject between the Financial Minister and the Secretary of State for India will be found elsewhere, and completely dispels any suspicion that might possibly have been entertained prejudicial to Mr. Laing's character as an honest man and a gentleman.

The Budget has not yet been announced, but the details are believed to be in a forward state. It is also expected that the deficiency will be considerably less than has hitherto been anticipated.

Accounts from the Indigo districts are more favourable as regards the collection of rent. The appointment of a special commissioner appears to have convinced the ryots that Government was in earnest, and fully resolved to enforce the due payment of rent charges. In other respects the intelligence is far from satisfactory. The rains hold off and the ryots refuse to sow, so that between the unkindness of the elements and the refractoriness of man the cultivation of indigo for the present season wears a gloomy aspect, at least in Lower Bengal.

Small Cause Courts are being established in the Mofussil, and the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal has been directed to appoint judges versed equally in the native languages and in legal lore. As a handsome salary is attached to the office, an adequate supply of barristers will, no doubt, be forthcoming as soon as this new opening is properly understood by the English bar.

A deputation of the Oude talookdars was about to proceed to Calcutta to express to Lord Canning their gratitude for the liberal policy pursued by the Government since the pacification of that province. Considering the short time that has elapsed since the Viceroy's visit to Lucknow, this complimentary journey on the part of our recent enemies may seem somewhat superfluous, and it may even be thought by persons of a practical turn of mind that these magistrates would be better employed in attending to the proper management of their estates. Little weight, however, is due to the insinuation put forward by the Hurkaru that their real object is to communicate directly with their late sovereign. They are far too busily engaged in worshipping the sun above their heads to pay much attention to that which has set for ever. Besides, the advantages of a direct and open communication are the very last considerations likely to be entertained by Oriental conspirators.

The news from the famine districts is of no later date than that received by the last Bombay Mail; but it is certain that the utmost exertions must be made in this country to save from a painful and lingering death many thousands of our fellow subjects. On Friday last the committee at the Mansion-house remitted £10,000 to the Calcutta Relief Fund, making a total of £85,000 forwarded through that channel. Upwards of £100,000 have therefore been sent out for the immediate and temporary relief of the most destitute; but even this considerable sum will be inadequate to stay the ravages of disease engendered by insufficiency of food.

The chief news from China relates to the promulgation of an Imperial Edict establishing a Board for Foreign Affairs. Mr. Bruce was on the point of proceeding to Peking, but it was uncertain whether the Emperor would return to his capital or fix his residence permanently at Shensi.

The opening of the Yang-tse river to European trade as high as Hangkow has been officially notified, and consular agencies are to be established at Chinkiang, Kewkiang, and Hangkow, at which places, and also at Nankin, war vessels will be stationed for the protection of commerce. The frost had broken up at Tientsin, and the arrival of the long-expected mails from England had diffused great pleasure through the garrison.

THE EUROPEAN CENSUS IN INDIA.

Four days from this date, on the night of Sunday, April 7, the Registrar-gen. of England, at the head of a whole army of enumerators, will proceed to take stock of the Anglo-Saxon race, who are subjects of Queen Victoria, throughout the world. It is ten years since the last census showed the total population of the United Kingdom to be 27,721,921, or adding the inhabitants of the infant colonies, thirty millions. Then of British-born subjects in India only the European servants of the Company were included in the census, which showed a total of 39,361 persons, of whom 28,256 were males and 11,105 females, thus divided as to Presidency and occupation:—

The Royal regiments then in India were reckoned in the population of the United Kingdom. Ten years ago the "interlopers," the Europeans not in the service of the Company, who were laying the foundations of English enterprise and trade, working the printing press and propagating the truths of Christianity among the natives, were too despised to be thought worthy of enumeration. When an attempt was made the year after to ascertain their numbers, in common with the extent of the native population, all beyond the presidency towns were set down at the manifestly low figure of 317. In the evidence given before the Colonisation Committee in 1858, their strength in the Mofussil of Bengal alone was reckoned at 1,950, representing a population of above 6,000 persons. If we may take the lists in the Calcutta and Bombay Directories of heads of families considered respectable enough to be entered in a Directory, we have about 11,500 in the former city and 5,000 in the latter, almost all of them British-born subjects. But as England was without a census till 1801, and Adam Smith had to conjecture its population just as we now do that of China, so India has been without a proper census, native or European, till the present day. Certain returns have been published, by the Board of Trade in 1854, and by Parliament from time to time, on the motion of Colonel Sykes, giving the number of natives, but they are as untrustworthy as those of Europeans, falling, we believe, far below the truth. They gave to India in 1854, with an area of 1,465,322 square miles, a population of 180,367,148, of whom 131,990,901 belonged to British India, covering an area of 837,412 square miles.

And now the order has been given that on Sunday night next, or as soon after that time as possible, a census of all her Majesty's British-born subjects, whether official or non-official, shall be made. We consider this a fact more full of hope for Europeans in India than any event which has happened since the country was opened. We shall know our strength, how we are distributed, what power is in our hands, how far we regulate the commerce of the country, to what extent we are available for its military defence, what influence we have through our capital, our agencies for preaching Christianity, and our command of the printing press. The settlers are clamouring for self-government, for a share in the administration of the country, for the right to purchase its soil and security in entering into relations as capitalists with the natives. Nothing will so surely advance these ends as the irrefragable figures of a census, especially if the form of return used in England be adopted in India. The first column of the Householders' Return is to contain the name of every person present in each house on the night of Sunday, 7th April; the second the relation of each to the head of the family as wife, son, boarder, servant, &c.; the third the condition of each, as married or unmarried; the fourth the sex; the fifth the age last birthday; the sixth the rank, profession or occupation; the seventh the place of birth, and the last a statement if deaf and dumb or blind. It is the sixth column which will be most full of interest to Anglo-Indian settlers.

We trust the census returns will not be compiled as carelessly as statistical returns generally are in India. Mr. Grey, the Home Secretary, should see that there is at least accuracy if not fulness. He ought to have obtained the permission of Government to fix a date later than 7th April, so that the census might be made on the same day throughout all India. Another difficulty will arise from confining the census to British-born subjects instead of extending it to all Christians. This term, British-born subject, has not yet been legally defined. It includes all persons born in wedlock of a European British father down to his grandchildren. Does the privilege extend beyond the grandson? Mr. Ritchie, the Advocate-general, lately decided that from the beginning of this century—but not before—when India came under the dominion of the Crown, the most remote legitimate descendants of a European British father, of whatever race the mother may have been, are entitled to all the privileges of a British subject. This would include a large number of East Indians, not a few of whom have on different occasions successfully pleaded non-jurisdiction in the Mofussil Courts. Again, this phrase excludes European and American foreigners, of whom it is desirable to obtain a separate list. The effect of this legal distinction and doubt will be to render the census most inaccurate. The difficulty would have been avoided by an Act of the Legislative Council, which we have so often called for, directing a census of Christians of all classes and colours, and making those who refuse to give information subject, as in England, to a penalty of £5. The want of a fixed date, of a certainty as to what a British-born subject is, of a penalty for refusing information, and of really responsible enumerators, as in England, will go far to deprive the Indian part of the census of its value. —Friend of India.

DEATHS FROM WILD BEASTS.

Everybody is aware that wild beasts abound in the jungles of the Punjab, but we expect very few people entertain the remotest idea of the frightful number of human creatures, especially children, that are destroyed year after year by these animals. In the two past years no less than nine hundred and ninety-nine children were killed, principally by wolves, as will be seen by the subjoined abstract:—

Killed—Men .....	6	9
" Women .....	1	4
" Children .....	467	432
	474	445
Injured—Men .....	33	24
" Women .....	3	—
" Children .....	83	31
Total killed and injured	593	590

The greatest destruction of life occurs in the Umritsur division, where 347 children were killed during 1859, and 290 in 1860. In the Goojranwalla district 11 children were killed in 1859, and 23 and 70 respectively last year. These figures are perfectly astounding, and lead to the suspicion that the credit of this exceeding great slaughter is not altogether due to the animals to whom it is ascribed, notwithstanding the Commissioner of Umritsur, in reporting the slaughter by wild beasts of 160 male and 181 female infants in his division, says, "it is satisfactory that none of the children are of the race notoriously addicted to infanticide." The number of wild animals destroyed is not so considerable as one would expect, seeing that Government has paid in two years Rs. 14,386 as rewards for the destruction of 4,225, which includes a large proportion of cubs. The total number of each description of animal killed stands thus:— 1859.	1860.

Tigers .....	12	35
Leopards .....	192	163
Bears .....	187	350
Wolves .....	1174	2080
Hyenas .....	2	80

The wolves, we understand, do the greatest mischief. In the Lahore district 132 of them were slain last year, and no person hurt; while in Sealkote only 28 were destroyed, notwithstanding 135 children were killed in the district. Similar results are exhibited elsewhere, as for instance the comparison between the wolves and children in the Hissar division is as one child killed to 82 wolves. In the Cis-Sutlej states and the Umritsur division, the average is two children to about three wolves. Trans-Sutlej one child to three wolves. Lahore and Ferozepore 232 wolves, no children. Goojranwalla, in the same division, one to four, that is, 101 wolves, 23 children. In Mooltan division 622 wolves were destroyed and only one child, all of which clearly indicates that where the beasts are systematically hunted down, the destruction of human life is least. The greatest number of tigers were killed last year at Umballa, namely 13, and at Kangra the most leopards, 80. Bears also are found principally at Kangra, as out of 350 killed throughout the Punjab, 306 fell in this district. Wolves abound everywhere apparently, though judging from the number killed they should be scarcest at Peshawar.

The wolf is probably the most cruel, but most cowardly animal in existence, and a blundering stupid beast, devoid of the cunning which many wild animals display. He does not sneak up to his prey like a tiger or fox, and attempt to conceal himself up to the moment of his spring, but advances in the open, at a deliberate pace, until he arrives close to the object he has in view, when, if he experiences the least resistance, a blow on the head for instance, or a thump from a man's fist, he will immediately show his teeth and snarl, but at the same time turn tail and be off without inflicting injury.

We think this character of the animal is borne out by a comparison between the number of adults killed, and children; besides, we dare say the whole of the former were slain by tigers, leopards, and bears. It has been said that the comparative fewness of wolves killed is owing to the people not possessing fire-arms, but we are perfectly satisfied that a strong latie, loaded with iron at the end, would be found quite as effective as a rifle for the purpose. The reward paid for the slaughter of wolves seems to be about Rs. 2½ per head, which we should have imagined was sufficient temptation to induce shikarries to engage in the sport, but as it seems to be otherwise, the amount must decidedly be increased, for it will be a crying shame to the Punjab Government if the wholesale slaughter of the innocents is permitted to endure. We shall have a few words to say about wolf-traps on a future occasion, and in the mean time would draw attention to the annexed letter from the Judicial Commissioner in confirmation of our remarks:—

To R. H. Davies, Esq., Secretary to the Government, Punjab, and its Dependencies, dated Lahore, 16th March, 1861.

SIR.—I have the honour to submit, for the inspection of His Honour the Lieut.-Governor, the annual statement of wild beasts destroyed, and the number of human beings killed by them during 1860.

2. It is satisfactory to find that more wild animals were killed, while fewer human lives were lost last year than in the preceding. Still there is the lamentable fact that 432 children are reported to have been killed by wild animals.

3. It is remarkable that in the Hissar, Lahore, and Multan divisions, in which the greatest number of full-grown wolves were destroyed, there should have been so little loss of human life.

4. During the year under report, monthly returns were regularly submitted from all the districts which are mostly infested by wild animals, and various orders were issued by me on the subject. A wolf trap on the plan adopted in Germany was introduced into some of the districts, but unfortunately not a single wolf was entrapped. District officers were authorised to give licenses on plain paper, for the possession of arms to shikarrees, conditional on the presentation of a wolf's head once in two months, the usual pecuniary reward being paid at the same time. In the Umritsur Division, the employment of a few shikarrees with a head man, on fixed salaries, was sanctioned as an experiment, but no result has yet been reported.

5. It is clear, however, that much greater exertions must be made, more especially by the district officer in the Umritsur Division, in which no fewer than 299 children were killed. The Deputy Commissioner of Goorgaira has been most successful in causing the destruction of wolves, especially of full-grown animals; he and the Deputy-Commissioners of Jung, Lahore, Dera Ismael Khan, Shahpore, Hissar and Sirsa have been called upon to report what measures they adopt, and by whom the wolves are chiefly killed, for there can be no doubt that by the use of proper means, a much larger number of these animals, which are the greatest enemies to human life, might be destroyed.—I have, &c.,

MISCELLANEOUS.

GRATITUDE.—The Oude Gazette states that Rajah Maun Singh and seven others of the chief talookdars of the province are about to proceed to Calcutta as a deputation to present Lord Canning with an address expressive of their gratitude for his policy. The Travancore Prince has met with only one response from his brethren to his proposal to present her Majesty with a throne of gold.

DACOITY COMMISSION.—The correspondence on the subject of the Dacoity Commission results in a determination on the part of the Bengal Government to maintain that department. The expenditure amounts to Rs. 4,166 a month, or about half a lakh per annum. The Lieutenant-governor proposed to reduce the salary of the commissioner from 1,500 rupees to 1,000, and to confer the commissionerships of Bengal and Behar on uncovenanted officers. This with other savings will reduce the expenditure by Rs. 1,260 a month. The proposition is sanctioned by the Supreme Government. In the 24 pergunnahs the number of dacoities has decreased from 11 in 1852 to 5 in 1859; in Baraset from 39 to 5; in Howrah from 37 to 2; in Hooghly from 128 to 25; in Burdwan from 65 to 13; in Nuddea from 72 to 9; in Jessore from 33 to 4; in Bancoorah from 24 to 9. Mr. Jackson says he has lists of 5,000 notorious dacoits in these districts, and knows of the existence of five formidable gangs in Baraset. He considers the approver system the only one capable of reaching the dacoits, not excepting even the new police, and in this opinion the Lieutenant-governor concurs. If Mr. Grant would organise the new constabulary, any special Dacoity Commission would be unnecessary. Mr. J. H. Reilly, one of the most able of the Bengal Uncovenanted Service, has been appointed Dacoity Commissioner in Bengal, an office hitherto held only by the Covenanted Service.

THE HON. H. B. DEVEREUX is appointed magistrate and collector of the first grade in Patna, but will continue to officiate until further orders as junior secretary to the Board of Revenue. Mr. G. A. C. Plowden is to officiate as commissioner of Burdwan.

A NARROW ESCAPE.—The following is the most miraculous escape from a dreadful death we ever heard of. The most thrilling incident in the most startling romance can scarcely equal it, and yet it is true, perfectly true, and the hero is alive and doing well. On Thursday, March 14th, the two sons of Colonel Thomas, Godfrey and Frederick, left Mussoorie to ride down to Jeripani. It was dark when they started. The elder, Godfrey, a young man of about eighteen, insisted on taking the lower road, known as Mackinnon's, and his brother, rather than allow him to ride by himself on a dark night, agreed to come with him. The road is both difficult and dangerous, and Frederick Thomas's horse fell twice with him. Godfrey, a most dashing rider, then changed horses with him, and on they went again, Godfrey leading at a headlong gallop. The second fall had rather stunned Frederick, and he soon lost sight of his brother. Thinking, however, that he must have gone on, he rode slowly home to his mother's house, but his brother had not arrived. The whole family were fearfully alarmed, and though Frederick was too much hurt to do anything himself, another brother started off with men and torches to search for the lost one. Step by step for six long miles they traced, as they thought, the hoof marks of both horses right up to where the upper road turned off. A hope then sprang up in the minds of the anxious relatives that Godfrey might have taken the upper and longer road. The natives, too, said that he had passed on to Dehree, and a man was immediately sent off both to that place and Mussoorie. Daylight came, however, and no tidings. Unable to bear any longer inaction, the other brother, Frederick, started off again on the lower road. Six miles back he again followed the hoof marks, and there near the edge of a fearful precipice, or khud as they are here called, were the deep indentations made by the hoofs of a struggling horse. He crept forward to the brink and peered into the abyss. Far down beneath, more than a hundred feet, on a little ledge jutting out from the face of the nearly perpendicular rock, lay a human form, and that form was his brother. A faint sickness came over him, and had it not been for two men near him he would have fallen. As soon as he recovered he shouted to his brother, but with little hope of being answered. The answer came, however,—a low, feeble whistle: his brother was alive, ten hours after his fall. By this time the other brother and some friends had arrived, and they managed to get down to where Godfrey lay. One mass of bruises, faint with loss of blood, and a face scarcely to be recognised for outs, he still sat up and spoke to them. He knew them, too, addressed them by name calmly and collectedly. With some difficulty he was raised from his perilous position and carried home, where he still is, slowly, but, we are glad to say, surely recovering. The fresh track of a leopard was visible on the road above, and it appears that his startled horse in his headlong gallop went clean over the precipice at a bound. The merciful finger of Providence is wonderfully apparent throughout, but Godfrey Thomas owes no small share of his preservation to his horsemanship. With the natural instinct of a rider, he must have got his horse together as he felt him going, so as to keep his feet straight under him. Man and horse must have touched that ledge together, and the sudden shock on reaching it must have in good time unseated the rider, left him lying there, and hurled the animal still further downwards. The body of the horse was found literally smashed to pieces more than a hundred feet lower down. His rider had not a bone broken though so fearfully shaken. As we said, Godfrey Thomas is still alive, but it will be many a day ere the recollection of that fearful leap of a hundred feet sheer descent in the dark khud, and the long, lonely night passed on a ledge of loose stones, not four feet wide, without even a single shrub or stump to prevent his bruised body from rolling over to certain destruction, fades from his memory.—Englishman.

CHURRUCK POOJA.—The Bengal Government submitted to that of India, a short time since, a representation from the Calcutta Missionary Conference regarding the official recognition by the Government, as public holidays, of the days on which the Churruck Pooja is celebrated, and containing a suggestion by the Lieutenant-governor that the last day of the Hindoo year should be substituted as a public holiday in lieu of the days now annually allowed at the Churruck Pooja. It appeared to the Governor-general in Council that the holidays which are now observed in Calcutta must produce great inconvenience and interruption to public business. We should be glad to learn what has been the result, if any, of the action of the committee of the Chamber of Commerce, which we hope will bring about some effective reform in a matter of the highest commercial importance. To say nothing of the impolicy of a civilised Government lending its sanction to the disgusting orgies of the Churruck and other such Saturnalia, the idle indulgences and wasteful habits of these constantly recurring holidays are quite incompatible with Income-tax paying, and that vigorous competition in the markets of the world which is now the only hope for India.

THE ANDAMANES.—A correspondent furnishes the Englishman with an account of the Andamanese who were captured recently. Three young men were taken in a fight between a party of the savages and a body of sepoy and convicts at work in the jungle. Their ages were eighteen, twenty, and twenty-five. The sailors gave them the names of Friday Blair, Punch Blair, and Crusoe Blair. Punch was the most talkative and vivacious. They expressed no astonishment at any of the novelties they saw. A second lot captured consisted of an old man of forty or fifty and two other men, one about thirty and the other twenty. These were called respectively Toeless Blair, Tuesday Blair, and Jumble Blair. Two of them were wounded in the capture. Their demeanour in captivity is very gentle and tractable, but there has been one attempt at escape.

NEW POLICE FORCE.—The North West Gazette notifies, that as a preliminary to the introduction of a reformed system of Police, the Military, the Municipal, the Cantonment, the Ferry, and all other Police which have hitherto existed as separate bodies will, from the 1st March, 1861, be gradually incorporated with the new police force in the districts belonging to the Benares division. The native officers and men belonging to the bodies of police above-mentioned, who are best fitted for service in the reformed police, will be selected and drafted into the force, the rest being discharged.

RATE OF EXCHANGE.—The rate of exchange for Bills drawn in repayment of advances made by the several Governments in India for the service of the Royal Navy and for the public service in China in 1861-62 is fixed at two shillings the rupee. The same rate will apply to officers' family remittances and effects.

CHEQUE PAYMENTS.—Acting on the suggestion of the Military Finance Commission, the Governor-general directs that the system of paying by cheques be established as a general rule in all departments. In August 1858 the plan was sanctioned as an experiment in the case of executive engineers, who were instructed to draw cheques for all payments above twenty-five rupees on collectors against the amount of the credit assigned them by the chief engineer each month. The system is to be general henceforth. Instead of different military treasuries, there will be one cash chest in each cantonment. Aware of the craving for new expenditure on the introduction of any new system, the warning is distinctly given that the introduction of the system is not to be made a pretext for creating new offices or for increasing establishments. Thus in addition to an increase of convenience to the public, guards, writers, and peons may be dispensed with, and a large pecuniary saving effected.

INSECURITY OF LIFE.—A correspondent informs us that two men of H.M.'s 73rd, in Berhampore, have disappeared. An Artillery man was nearly killed by the people of a "quiet" village near Moorshedabad.

TUMLOONG.—The following is from a letter from the camp of the special envoy at Tumloong:—"The Hon. Mr. Eden came up to a site which the Rajah had selected for him near his house. Soon after arrival Mr. Eden received all the lamas, amlah, and sirdars, and strongly impressed upon them the necessity of at once adopting measures for the release of two prisoners who have been taken by the late dewan's relatives to Bhootan, and for the apprehension of six of the criminals who have taken refuge there. On the 11th of March the special envoy had an interview with the Rajah's son. It was intimated to Mr. Eden that the old Rajah wished his son to be recognised as the regnant power, and that a letter to this effect was on its way to the envoy. Mr. Eden therefore treated the Rajah's son as the Maharajah, and will in future write of him as such. Mr. Eden was accompanied by Captain Impey and some of the officers of the force, a guard of honour being furnished by the 6th Regiment. He was received with a salute of jingals, and on going upstairs the Rajah came to meet him, and after shaking hands and making the usual ceremonial interchanges, the Government officers were conducted to seats. The Rajah was attended by all the chief Lamas, Kajees, and other principal persons of the country. Incense was burnt, and tea, &c., served. The envoy stayed and conversed with the Rajah for some time and then withdrew. The whole appearance of the Rajah's house and furniture, the nature of the ceremonies, and the dress of the Rajah and his people were thoroughly Chinese. The Rajah made inquiries after the Queen and the Governor-general, and expressed his regret at the late rupture, and in the course of conversation intimated his intention of becoming a permanent resident in Sikkim. He said he had long wished to leave Tibet, but that his father had opposed it; that, as he was now charged with the Government of the country, he considered it his duty to remain amongst his people, and that he proposed to remove his capital to Yangong, Rinchinpoong, or some other site more central for trade and convenient for free intercourse with Darjeeling. He added that he had, in fact, commenced the erection of a house at Rinchinpoong for his own residence, when the late misunderstanding arose. The Rajah appeared to be fully impressed with the importance of encouraging trade between Tibet and Bengal, and under the advice of Cheebo Lama an entirely new state of things will now be inaugurated in Sikkim. The Rajah requested that all shortcomings in his mode of receiving the mission might be overlooked, as he had been trained for the priesthood, and had never anticipated being called upon to govern his country. The death of his elder brothers, however, left his father with no other direct heir. The Envoy said all that was necessary and becoming on the occasion, and pointed out as forcibly as he could that a thriving trade was the best defence against future misunderstandings, and that if the Rajah had all along remained in Sikkim, taking part himself in the Government instead of placing himself in the hands of Amlah at Choombi, the events which had led to our invasion of his country would never have occurred. After the Envoy's return the Rajah sent a deputation with presents of a large quantity of rice, two yaks, nine bullocks, goats, Indian corn, &c., for the Envoy, the officers, and men of the force. As our cattle had all died and the last bag of rice was consumed the day before, these supplies came in most opportunely, and will last until the coolies arrive from Darjeeling. Mr. Eden has insisted that before the new treaty is executed a fresh search shall be made for property, public and private, left behind at Rinchinpoong, and that fresh attempts shall be made to induce the Dalunkote Soobah to give up the criminals who have taken refuge in his territory. A few days ago the Rajah's men followed seven of these criminals into Bhootan, found where they all were, and induced them to come with them towards Sikkim. Before they arrived in Sikkim, Mumbah, Dr. Campbell's late servant, whose extraordinary flight after receiving a reward of Rs. 200 at Darjeeling has already been reported, came up with the Rajah of Damsang and released them; Mumbah sending an insolent message that if the envoy wanted the men he might come and fetch them, and that then Mr. Eden, and all with him should be cut up. The Sikkim Rajah has again sent some men of rank with a bribe to the Soobah, to induce him to give up these men. He has also seized the families of the Dewan's relatives until they are forthcoming. Mr. Eden determined to get some of the men, or at all events the khansamah and his son, who are prisoners in Bhootan, and he feels no doubt that he shall succeed in the course of this week. The Sikkim Government are quite in earnest in their desire to secure the fugitives. The Thibet Government has urged them to do all in their power to oblige us. The envoy is of opinion that the Dalunkote Soobah will not resist the influences now brought to bear on him. The men whom Mr. Eden sent to Bhootan to see whether there was any truth in the report of men and arms being collected in the neighbourhood of Dalunkote have returned, and said that there are only about sixty men of all kinds in the service of the Government there. An attempt was made to persuade them that there was a large force at Damsang; they therefore went in there secretly and found only twenty men. The special envoy has addressed the Dalunkote Soobah on the subject of the criminal refugees, and he is sure that the Soobah will see the expediency of a prompt compliance with the demands of the Sikkim Government. We shall soon be on our way back to Darjeeling, with all the objects of the expedition fully accomplished."

—Englishman.

LAND REVENUE ADMINISTRATION.—The Indian Field reviews the Land Revenue Administration Report of Bengal for 1859-60. The aggregate demand was Rs. 4,11,60,290, of which five-eighths per cent. was remitted, chiefly on account of losses from inundations on the coast. The demand last year was Rs. 4,09,08,684. The number of estates the property of Government was 7,432, or 73 less than in the previous year. Little progress seems to have been made in selling Government estates as directed a year and a half ago. The rules for the grant of waste lands in Darjeeling, in freehold, seem to have induced settlers to purchase. Land was sold at auction as high as Rs. 24 an acre, the up-set price being 10. Of previous grants 31 were commuted to freehold. Three new tea and coffee companies were formed during the year, with a capital of £60,000.

EXPORTS.—(Calcutta, April 10).—Business is perfectly paralysed under continued unfavourable advices from home. The intervention of native holidays as noticed in our list of 23rd ult., and the unexpected delay of the str. Simla from Madras which created great sensation here, had caused almost an entire cessation of business. In Indigo there has been no transa since the 22nd. Raw Silks and Corahs have also been without any business. Sugar has been in very moderate operation for shipment to England. Saltpetre has been neglected, so has been Rice for Europe. Linseed has been inactive. Rape is still without shipment. Jute alone has been in speculative demand. Hides have been in increased demand for home. All other minor staples are quite neglected.

IMPORTS.—(Calcutta, April 10).—Business has scarcely been resumed by the dealers since the expiration of the holidays. Sales of Grey Cottons since the resumption of business have been principally for local requirement and for Lower Bengal; but very little has been done for the Upper Provinces, owing to the difficulty in the transit by land and water, as is generally the case at this time of the year. Sales of 39 and 40 inches Grey Shirtings, 5 to 8 1/2 lbs., have since the holidays been submitted to lower prices, say 1 to 2 annas per piece.

Grey Madapollams and Jaconets have undergone no change. Mulls continue dull. White and Figured Shirtings have been in limited local request. Jaconets have engaged a little inquiry for the Upper Provinces, but without any improvement in price. Mulls have continued in limited local demand. Mule Twist has been in some inquiry, especially Nos. 40 and upwards, at an advance of 1 to 2 pie. All Coloured Cottons continue neglected. Metals have further fallen in value, and the demand is speculative.

MISCELLANEOUS.

CAPTAIN COLBORNE, of H.M.'s 60th Rifles, draws our (Friend of India) attention to what seems to be an act of gross injustice in his case. More than a year ago he was placed under arrest, at the representation of the Sub-Judge of Ootacamund, on the ground that he had broken his word by sending a less amount of property in lieu of a judgment debt than the Judge had expected. The disputed property still lies unsold, and the decision of a Court Martial on this and other charges has not yet been communicated. The proceedings have not been sent home to the Horse Guards, but, it is believed, are before the Supreme Court, owing to some legal irregularities. Whatever may be the decision, no officer ought to be kept under arrest for such a length of time.

MADRAS UNIVERSITY.—On the 20th of March the ceremony of conferring degrees on six successful candidates was gone through by the Senate of the University of Madras in the banquetting-hall. The Governor presided, and the Rev. A. Symonds delivered an address. The Senate were for the first time in academic costume, being thus in advance of their Calcutta brethren, whose sub-committee is still considering the grave question of gowns and hoods. There is a healthy rivalry in more important matters between the two Universities. Alluding to Lord Canning's eulogy of the Calcutta standard of study as being higher than that of Madras, the Madras Times expresses the local feeling when it says:—"The difference lies simply in the requisition by the former University of a small knowledge of several subjects, by the latter of a more thorough knowledge of fewer subjects." Having seen the examination papers of both Universities, we cannot agree with the writer, the Calcutta standard being higher in both the number of subjects and the difficulty of passing. But emulation of this kind is most healthy and an evidence of academic life and vigour.

FAMINE IN TRAVANCORE.—The Madras papers contain some particulars of the famine in Travancore. The cause of the famine is partly the failure of the rain last season. In October the caterpillars destroyed whole fields of young paddy. The death of the cattle from starvation entails vast loss upon the owners. Formerly, in average years, rice was 15 fanams per cotta, now it is 40 fanams. About 15,000 people are now being daily relieved by work or charity. In Kotar a poor girl was observed picking up skins of plantains from the street, and greedily devouring them. A boy, coming out of a neighbouring house, chased her away; when she was gone he returned to the place where the skins were and began to devour them eagerly himself. Through the exertions of Dr. Waring a hospital and feeding-house for the lowest caste of slaves have been established in Trevandrum by private subscription, and many lives have thus been saved. Mr. Maltby says there is no actual want of human food; the coast is open, the duties by land and sea have been suspended, and the bazaars are well supplied. The selling price of rice only covers the cost of carriage, and affords a fair profit to the importer. The selling price at Trevandrum is now Rs. 3 per maund of 82 lbs. The Rajah of Travancore has given Rs. 3,000 as a private contribution; the Elia Rajah Rs. 1,500; the First Prince Rs. 1,000; the Ranees Rs. 500; the Dewan Rs. 300; and the Coil Thumbooran Rs. 100.

GOVERNMENT HOUSE.—The Madras Times states as a rumour that Sir William Denison intends to recommend to the Home authorities the conversion of the Madras Government House into public offices and the purchase of Bishopdown at Ootacamund as a residence for the Governor.

BUDDHIST FESTIVAL IN BURMAH.—On the 23rd March there was an annual feast, or worship day, amongst the Buddhist population, and this year the gathering together was enormous from all parts of the province; for from the hour of three A.M. to three P.M. one could hardly squeeze himself through the crowd on the principal staircases ascending to the "Shoay Dagon." I estimate that at the very least some 70,000 or 80,000 persons must have visited the pagoda on that day. Not only from Henzadah, Prome, Pegu, Toun-goo, &c., &c., did the people come, but also from Moulmein, Martaban, Tavoy, &c. Indeed, scores of the poorer classes risked a land journey from Moulmein, to be present here on the appointed day—a journey lasting nearly a month, through hill and dale, forest and jungle. Once on the platform, and a scene burst upon one which I shall not for a long time forget. Thousands of Burmese, Karens, Teliens, &c., &c., men, women, and children, decked out in their gayest, gaudiest, and best of flaunting orange, red, and yellow silk, each with their individual offerings to "Gadama" of rice, coconut plantains, and innumerable other comestibles on which hundreds of pariah dogs luxuriated afterwards, were seen in the act of donation. Towards the afternoon, wrestling, games, po-hays, &c., closed the day. The Phoongies were in their greatest glee, for the gifts bestowed on them were abundant, and some of much value, such as carpets, almirahs, silk clothes, domestic utensils, and silver spittoons, &c.

SIR MARK CUBBON, in returning thanks by letter to the inhabitants of Bangalore for their valedictory address, entreats them to abandon the idea of erecting a statue to him, and to devote the money towards the establishment of a charitable institution. He says:—"I first entered Mysore near sixty years ago, when recently suffering all the calamities of war, and have ever since watched with deep interest its progress to its present state of peace and prosperity. I could have wished to be longer useful, but the failure of my health has rendered unavoidable the painful step to me of finally severing our connection."

RANGOON.—The Rangoon Gazette states that two of the Madras corps stationed at Rangoon are to be removed. The 24th regiment N.I. was to leave in H.M.'s Bengal steamer Arracan, and the 41st in the transport Sesostis for the Coast. Telegraphic communication between Rangoon and Calcutta has been established. There has been another dreadful fire in this town. A large number of huts has been destroyed. The Rangoon Volunteers and H.M.'s 68th regiment rendered prompt assistance in extinguishing the flames.

PROGRESS OF COCHIN.—In 1850 the port was visited by 421 vessels paying port dues with an aggregate of 33,841 tons, while the vessels exempt from port dues were about equal in number and tonnage. In 1860 the tonnage of vessels exempt was 64,776 tons, and port dues were levied on 652 vessels with a tonnage of 69,271 tons. Attention is being directed to Cochin as a station for the P. and O. steamers instead of Beypore when the railway is completed.

KIDNAPPING.—The Cochin Courier mentions a case of kidnapping which occurred during the stay of the Arab ship Sir Edward Parry in the port of Cochin. A Moplah passenger enticed a native boy of eleven years of age on board the vessel with a view to sell him as a slave in Arabia. The father missed his son, the ship was searched and the boy found. The Courier says: "The system of kidnapping natives of India to be sold in Muscat and Zanzibar is a monstrous evil which is assuming fearful proportions. Many painful instances have come to our knowledge where Arabs have contracted marriages with women on this coast with the deliberate intention of selling them into slavery at Zanzibar."

VILLAGE HEROES.—The district of Cuddapa has been much infested with gang robbers. Thirty gang robberies have taken place in one month, and a lawlessness has prevailed beyond the power of the mere police to subdue. Had such a state of things existed in England, the people themselves would have combined to assist the police in extinguishing the evil. Here, however, the people for a long time did nothing. Meantime the police authorities did their best to arouse the spirit of the villagers. The latter were told that they might take the lives of the marauders in self-defence; and a reward of fifty rupees was given to one man who had killed a gang robber. Thus the sleeping courage of the Hindoo was awakened; and at last he determined to strike a blow in defence of his property the next time it should be assailed. It seems that one of the most notorious organisers of gang robbers in the country was a man named Dungaram Reddy. As usual, the man was well-known to the police, but for a long time had escaped actual detection. He had even offered his services as a spy to the police, but they had been properly declined; and at the very moment when the event occurred which we are about to relate, a warrant was held against him. On the night of the 25th of March Dungaram Reddy headed a torch robbery in the village of Seedareddy Pully. The number of robbers is not stated, but as they approached the place, the villagers, as usual, withdrew into the fields with their women and children. Then, however, they determined to return, and make an effort to protect their grain and other property. They armed themselves with axes, swords, and clubs, and, surrounding the village on three sides, they boldly attacked the robbers. The latter were apparently armed in a similar manner, and an obstinate conflict appears to have ensued, of which, however, only the results are detailed. Dungaram Reddy, the leader of the gang, was killed by an old ryot with a long axe, whilst in the very act of rallying his followers. Another robber, who was armed with a heavy club and a sling, was killed by a weaver "with one blow of a long sword upon his neck." The other combats were equally remarkable, and carry us back to the days of David and the Philistines. A young ryot, armed with a club, attacked a robber named Kattubady. The latter struck his assailant on the thigh with a large stone. The ryot, however, managed to knock Kattubady down, upon which another villager came up and finished him off with a spear. A fourth robber was killed by "three blows with a large axe on the neck and back;" whilst a very powerful robber who was going to his assistance was brained by a ryot with one blow from a club. Such a story as this, when told of the mild Hindoo, seems perfectly startling. Mr. Hearn, who reported the matter to the Inspector-General, remarked, "I believe this instance of stout determination on the part of the villagers is almost unprecedented;" and he adds that "it has created a wonderful effect through this part of the country, and the death of Dungaram Reddy is regarded as a general blessing." The story, however, is not quite an isolated one, as another sample of unwonted gallantry was displayed by a Hindoo about the same time. "The robbers entered his house, and one presented a musket at him. He knocked up the musket, snatched the robber's dagger out of his girdle, and stabbed him twice with it, killing him on the spot." We are glad to see that the Madras Government, in accordance with the recommendation of Mr. Robinson, have granted a reward of fifty rupees to each of the seven gallant men who had displayed such courage against the gang robbers, with a silver bangle to the two who had most distinguished themselves. Public spirit such as this ought to be fostered to the utmost; and the gallantry manifested by the villagers of Seedareddy Pully will not only strike terror into the hearts of the robbers, but will provoke the admiration and imitation of the country at large. In Cuddapa it must tend to bring about a better understanding between the villagers and the police; whilst the rewards so judiciously granted by Government will do very much to promote that sentiment of loyalty towards the new regime which has hitherto been so wanting throughout the land.—Indian Statesman.

OPIMUM.—A correspondent of the Bombay Times says the excitement which prevails at Indore on the subject of the probable out-turn of opium in Bengal is beyond belief. More than one native merchant would pay a lakh of rupees to obtain twenty-four hours' earlier information than his brethren. Though the crop in Bengal will be unfavourable, the increased export from Malwa will raise the revenue from opium higher than it has ever been. A re-action must follow, but Mr. Leing will only be too thankful if with this assistance he can tide over 1862.

THE LATE M. LAMBERT.—The Bombay Gazette says Commodore Viscomte de Langle, with four French ships of war, is in the Red Sea ostensibly with the view of ascertaining the fate of Mons. H. Lambert, who acted for a time as Vice Consul for France at Aden, and whom the French Government believe to have been murdered by the Somalis or Arabs at Tajoora, in June, 1859. Brigadier Coghlan deputed Captain Playfair at the time to inquire into the circumstances, and he is under the impression that M. Lambert met with his death by drowning while attempting to escape from a stranded bugla. A Mr. Grey, of Aden, says he once met an Arab in a room, who, pointing to a dagger on the wall, declared that to be the weapon with which he had killed Lambert and his servant, and that he had murdered them in hatred towards the French, and in revenge for their treatment of Shermarki, the old Somali chief of Zeila. Mr. Grey accompanies the Commodore.

CHINESE OATHS.—A Chinaman was recently put into the witness box of the Bombay Supreme Court to give evidence, when the question was raised, how is an oath to be administered to a Chinaman. Mr. Anstey, who has spent some years in China, maintained that oaths were unknown there. The Chinaman said that his countrymen were always sworn in by breaking an earthen cup in token of the similar destruction that would overtake them if they told an untruth. In Hong-Kong and Singapore oaths are taken by burning a piece of paper on which are written words of imprecation and curse. Sir M. Sausse observed that breaking the cup was the usual mode, and it was accordingly followed.

CHINA.

Hong Kong, April 1.—The London Mail of February 11th arrived here on the 27th ult.

In our last Overland Summary mention was made of Mr. Alcock's recall to Yedo. He has since returned to that town, and been received with a salute of artillery. The recent fright appears to have drawn consuls and merchants closer together, and many mutual explanations have been gone into.

Passing from Japan to the Far North of China, there is not much to record for the past fortnight. The movements of the Emperor are still doubtful, and conflicting statements are current regarding his future intentions. By one rumour, which contains strong internal evidence of truth, he has been petitioned or advised to remove the Imperial Court and Government to Shensi, by which the humiliation of returning to his deflowered capital would be avoided, and the English ambassador, according to treaty, might reside in Peking, and welcome. This would be a thoroughly Chinese manner of turning the tables upon us, in that little matter at least. Another statement says that the Emperor will visit Peking shortly, meet the ambassador, and return to the Yehol for the summer. In the meantime, this inertness at a time when all the energies of the Manchu Government are needed, is causing the utmost uneasiness to every friend of the present dynasty. Mr. Wade, who is now in Peking, says that nothing but the Emperor's quick return will check the confusion into which everything is falling.

Turning our attention to Tien-tsin, where there is said to be considerable likelihood of our troops remaining for another year, we have little of importance to record. One letter says:—"Yesterday (March 12) a phenomenon was witnessed, which, though quite common here, was very extraordinary to us. The river in the morning was covered with ice a foot thick, with Chinamen going backwards and forwards upon it. At noon, there being a very high tide, it all broke up, and by the evening there was scarcely more than a few loose pieces floating down with the ebb. The Chinese all along have said that the ice would disappear quickly, but I never supposed it could have gone so suddenly. The weather now is beautiful, quite warm in the sun. I have allowed the fire to go out since breakfast, but shall light it again in the evening. Game is very abundant—teal, duck, and wild geese." A postscript dated the 14th says:—"Our mail has not arrived, though the French have theirs."

Another letter is as follows. The delay in the postal communication is really most disgraceful with such a well-appointed fleet as we have now in these waters:—

"Tien-tsin, 14th March, 1861.

"The ice at Taku commenced to show indications of breaking up on the 2nd inst., it then being unsafe to cross on it between the forts. On the 8th it was partially broken up at various parts of the river, and at noon on the 12th it suddenly began to crack, and move away in front of the town of Tien-tsin, and the river is now quite clear up to that point, though masses of ice are still floating past the town from portions of the river higher up, not yet navigable. This day at noon the first gunboat of the season arrived from Taku—the Drake, No. 78, and will take down the present mail to Maitau, from whence it will be sent on to Shanghai.

"The French received this forenoon their mails of the 12th January, but the English portion of the mail is not yet forthcoming. Throughout the winter the postal arrangements of our allies have been much superior to ours; as they have had their mails regularly from Chefoo, while it was only on the 3rd of the present month that the English army received any since the 19th December last, on which day the European mail of 10th October arrived. The English mail of 10th December was delivered in Tien-tsin, via Chefoo, on the 3rd; and on the 6th instant the mails of 26th October and 10th and 26th November came up from Chefoo; and yesterday was received the one of 26th December—so at last, with the exception of the 10th January from London, the army have received all their missing mails.

"The only news of importance from Peking is that the Emperor is to return for a short time to the capital at the end of the present month. He leaves his palace of Je-Ho, in Tartary, on the 24th of this month, and is expected to be seven days on the journey. This has been officially announced in the Peking Gazette—also an Imperial decree, characterising Sang-ko-lin-sin and his lieutenant-general as 'wanting in resource,' and requiring them by new deeds to regain the military character which they have lost by their unsuccessful operations against the Shantung insurrectionists, who now are a very formidable body, amounting to some 200,000. The immediate cause of this decree is a second defeat which Sang-ko-lin-sin has experienced at their hands.

"The troops at Tien-tsin, it is reported, will shortly be removed from their quarters in the town, and go into camp during the warm weather. The heavy mortality which prevailed during the winter has now a good deal abated. The weakly men are stated to have suffered from the cold a good deal, but that men than were really healthy have stood the climate well, and that altogether it is a more healthy one than the actual mortality would imply, the men who have died being those previously diseased.

"A general parade of all the troops in garrison took place a few days ago, to witness the presentation of the Victoria Cross to Lieut. Heathcote, of the 60th Rifles, for gallant conduct at Delhi. The Cross was presented to this officer by Brigadier Staveley, C.B., commanding the garrison, in the presence of the chief Chinese authorities of the city, who were invited to attend. Amongst them was Brigadier-General Shing Lung, who commanded the Great Northern Fort, at the entrance of the Peiho, during the action of the 21st August last. In this fort the magazine was exploded, he states, by a shell from one of the gunboats.

"The English and French embassies proceed to Peking in about ten days. Staff Surgeon Dr. Rennie, formerly of the Royal Artillery, has been appointed to the personal staff of his Excellency the Honourable F. Bruce, C.B., and proceeds to Peking with her Majesty's embassy.

"The troops in garrison at Tien-tsin consist of the 31st, 60th, and 67th Regiments; 1st Battalion Military Train; 10th Company Royal Engineers; Desborough's and Govan's Batteries of Royal Artillery (the latter Armstrong); and Fane's Sikh Cavalry. The French force consists of the 101st and 102nd Regiments, two batteries of Artillery, and a company of Engineers."

The news from Shanghai is very interesting. According to the latest accounts, the Yang-tze expedition had reached Hankow, and the river up to that point has been reported navigable to vessels drawing twenty feet of water. After the Langshan crossing all the dangers in navigation are at an end. The three ports selected by our people for trade are, Chin-kiang, Hew-kiang, and Hankow.

It is worth recording that two Englishmen were sued, at the instance of the Chinese Government, for conveying firearms into the camp of the rebels. They were found guilty, and sentenced as follows:—

"That the defendant Bennett be imprisoned for the period of three months, and be fined the sum of five thousand dollars, or in default of payment of the same be imprisoned a further period of one year; and that the defendant Mills be imprisoned for the period of three months, and be fined the sum of two hundred dollars, or in default of the payment of the same, be imprisoned a further period of two months."

The French have received possession of a plot of ground in the city of Shanghai, which is said to have been the site of a Catholic church during a former dynasty. This is only one of many such acquisitions, present and future.

The annexed Imperial Edict is one of the most important State papers that has appeared in China for a long time. It inaugurates a new era, and nothing less than the creation of a Board for Foreign Affairs by the Government, which has hitherto refused to have intercourse with other nations on terms of equality. But not only does the establishment of the Board give an assurance that this intercourse is to be conducted on a very different footing, but the persons who have been appointed to discharge the important functions assigned to it warrant the expectation that the treaties with Western nations are to be observed in good faith, and that no effort will be spared by the Chinese Government to discharge the obligations which she has come under by these solemn compacts. The members of this Board are the Prince of Kung, the Emperor's brother, who met Lord Elgin at Peking, and notified this treaty; Kwei-liang, the Principal Secretary of State, and who negotiated the treaty of Tien-tsin in 1858; and Wan Siang, a Vice-President of the Board of Revenue. The two principal members are now the best known officers of the Chinese Government. They are known as the earnest advocates of peace and friendly intercourse with Western nations. Hence their appointment may be regarded as highly auspicious, as indicating the sincerity of the Government. It is very important that Western nations, and especially that of England, should accept it in this light, and that their ambassadors should meet them in a spirit of conciliation and friendliness. It is an interesting fact in this connection, that the Prince has sent instructions to Shanghai and Canton to have inquiries made for persons that are qualified to act as interpreters of English to the Commissioners for Foreign Affairs, and that if such can be found they should be sent up to Peking. The intention would appear to be, to establish a college of interpreters for English, similar to that which has existed for Russian in connection with the Russian college at Peking. It is greatly to be desired that they had a supply of competent and well informed interpreters. There will, however, be much difficulty in finding such now; but in the end the demand will lead, sooner or later, to the supply:—

Imperial Edict, decreeing the Establishment of a Board of Foreign Affairs at Peking. (From the Peking Gazette, No. 145, published at Canton, March 20th).

On or about the 14th December, 1860 (between the 3rd and 25th of the eleventh month of the tenth year of the Hien-fung), an Imperial Edict was received, in tenor as follows:—

"The Prince of Hwei and his associates memorialise, stating that they have jointly considered the memorial presented by the Prince of Kung, Yi-sin, and others, reporting their proceedings in settling the rules for commercial intercourse devised after the conclusion of the Treaties of Peace. The memorial of the Prince of Hwei states that the measures decided upon by the Prince of Kung, and his colleagues are all (in conformity with) the actual circumstances, and begs that the propositions, as submitted, may be acted upon.

"Let, therefore, a Board of Superintendence of Commercial Intercourse with all nations be established at Peking, and let the Prince of Kung, Yi-sin, the High Chancellor Kwei-liang, and Wen-hsiang, Vice-President of the Board of Revenue, be appointed to the control thereof. Let the Board of Rites at the same time issue a seal of office, bearing the title of 'Imperially appointed Superintendency of Commercial Intercourse with Foreign Nations.' For the Under-secretariats which it is necessary to establish, let Manchou and Chinese officials, to the number of eight, be selected from among the Secretaries of the Inner Council, the Boards, and the Council of State. These officers will not be required to do duty at the same time at the Council of State. They will take their turn of duty consecutively.

"The Titular Vice-President, Tsung-hou, is to reside at Tien-tsin, as superintendent of the three (northern) ports, having all commercial relations at Niu-chwang, Tien-tsin, and Teng-chou beneath his supervision; and he will co-operate with the respective Manchou generals, viceroys, governors, and prefects, in the discharge of his duties. He will receive a seal with his title as 'Superintendent of Trade for the Three Ports,' but it will not be necessary to add the designation of 'Imperial Commissioner.'

"The duties of Superintendent of Trade at Canton, Foo-chow, Amoy, Ningpo, and Shanghai, together with the three ports on the inner river, and Chao-chou, Chiung-chou, and Tan-shuei in Formosa, are to be discharged by the Acting Imperial Commissioner, Hieh-hwan, Governor of Kiang-su.

"Of the newly opened ports, Niu-chwang alone is to be beneath the control of the Superintendent of Manchurian Customs. For the conduct of business at Teng-chou and the other ports, let officers be appointed by the respective viceroys and governors, in concert with Tsung-hou and Hsieh-hwan.

"Reports to the Throne must be made from time to time, regarding the official communications from (the representatives of) the different nations, together with all matters affecting commercial intercourse; while the original despatches themselves must at the same time be forwarded for perusal, communication being simultaneously made to the Board of Rites for transmission to the Superintendency of Foreign Commercial Intercourse.

"All Manchou generals, viceroys, and governors are likewise commanded to correspond for mutual information; and whenever any official changes take place, the special records (of foreign affairs) must be handed over to the new incumbent.

"With regard to foreign relations on the Kirin and Amoor frontier, let the Manchou general and his associates in that region report the actual circumstances; and at the same time forward information to the Board of Rites, for transmission to the superintendency.

"Not the slightest concealment or glossing of facts will be allowed.

"Respect this!"

In Hong Kong the past fortnight has not been very eventful. Steps are being taken by the Government here, first, to have better English teaching in the Government schools; and second, to have a proper staff of interpreters trained for the service of Government. By the one scheme the Chinese are taught English; by the other, the English are taught Chinese. Sir Hercules Robinson's Government is gaining golden opinions from all sorts of people. The desertions from the army and navy, we are sorry to say, have been numerous, upwards of forty men from both branches of the service having deserted within a very short space of time, a few of whom were recently apprehended in Macao.—Overland China Mail.

THE STRAITS.

NETHERLANDS INDIA.—By the mail steamer we have received Java papers to the 2nd of April. Further details are given of the effects of the inundations. The Handelsblad remarks:—"Truly there is no country in the world where past misfortunes are so soon forgotten as in Java. The inhabitants of the inundated districts have again returned to their dwellings, or are busy building new houses on the old sites. The fields which were destroyed have been mostly replanted, and 'the pestiferous mud' of a month previous is now become 'the fruitful layer of slime,' which promises a rich harvest and compensation for past losses. Of those who found their death in the water or under landslips few think any more." There is no fear of any prolonged want. The necessities of life are very little dearer than usual at this time of the year, and the state of the rice crop is nearly everywhere very promising. There is very little news from Banjer-massing. The leaders of the insurrection are still at large, but the attachment of the people to their cause seems to be declining. Further accounts are given of the earthquake of 16th February at Sumatra. At Siak some shocks were felt at ten minutes past seven in the evening, lasting about three minutes, the direction being from north to south. The damage done on the west coast of Sumatra by the earthquake, and especially by the rising of the sea, was very great. At Singkel only two houses remained, and seventeen natives were drowned. The military post at Lagundie, on the island of Nias, was completely destroyed. The sea came so suddenly on the garrison that they fled, half clothed, to the camping Hilibobo. Twelve of the soldiers and thirty-two natives were drowned. The rest of the garrison afterwards proceeded to Gunong Sitoli, where they arrived in a very sick and wretched condition. At Natal great damage was done by the earthquake and seaquake. The inhabitants took refuge on the neighbouring hills. —Singapore Free Press.

SARAWAK.—By the Sarawak steamer Rainbow we (Singapore Free Press) have dates from that place to the 20th of March. The steamer Shandon, from Singapore to China, had put in at Sarawak for wood. The latest news from Muka represents it as being as strongly fortified as the skill of Sheriff Masahore and his followers can make it. As the Muka people derive their chief supplies of food from Kanowit and Sarawak, they were suffering much from the trade with these places being stopped, and Sheriff Masahore was said to be hatching a plot to murder the gentleman in charge at the former place, and then to attack and take the fort. Any intention of this kind has been frustrated, as Captain Brooke had gone in the Rainbow to Kanowit and placed such reinforcements in the fort as would set the Sheriff and all his aiders and abettors at defiance. It was reported that Sheriff Masahore had incited the Kayans to attack the fort at Kanawit or the Dyaks at Kaibas. After her return to Sarawak from this, the Rainbow will proceed to Brunei with Sir James Brooke.

CENTRAL ASIA.

March 5.—A khillut, containing a valuable cloak, a Khaleelkhana shawl, and some Cashmere shawls, was given to Syd Baboo Jan, the chief of Kooneer, who took leave of the Ameer and left for his place. Sirdar Mahomed Allee Khan, with his sowars, returned from Lughman, and went to pay his respects to the Ameer; he informed the Ameer that he had left one hundred and fifty Jazailchees in charge of Bakheel, the people of which place were generally siding with Utta Mohamed Khan, and were still ready to cause more disturbance, and requested him, the Ameer, to appoint a hakim for that place; if not, there would be no end of bloodshed.—March 6.—An urzee was received from Ubdoolwahid Khan, the nephew of Meer Akhoor Ahmed Khan, from Mama Khyle, near Gundamak, in which he intimated to the Ameer, that on his urging on the people of Mama Khyle to pay the yearly revenue, they had quietly removed their property and families to the hills, and had given him a decided answer that they could not pay the high jumma which the Ameer had assessed them at this year. They were willing to pay what they have been paying for past years. On this the Ameer ordered Sirdars Mohamed Hussun Khan, and Mohamed Hoosain Khan, to march with two hundred sowars and three hundred jazailees to Mama Khyle, and after they had realised the revenue of that place to go direct to Cabool. It is given out that the poor people of Mama Khyle have been wrong fully blamed, the fact being that the hakim of that place has been ill-treating the people, and demanding much more than what was due, and thus the innocent men have been obliged to quit their native place. The above-named sons of the Ameer, with the troops, left Jellalabad for Mama Khyle this afternoon.—March 7.—News was received from Bakheel, in Lughman, to the effect that the moment Utta Mahomed was informed of the departure of Sirdar Wullee Mohamed Khan he collected the Bakheel people and attacked the forts and the thannahs, left there by the Sirdar. As it was a night attack the loss suffered by the Jazailees was great. The Ameer was quite annoyed when he heard of this, and ordered Sirdar Mahomed Allee Khan to march back to Lughman with his troops, and to bring Utta Mahomed and his family alive. A letter was also ordered to be written to the sons of Mohamed Shah Khan Ghilzie, directing them to apprehend Utta Mahomed and his family, who are said to have hidden themselves in the Durrah Kafree, belonging to their father's district, and to make them over to Sirdar Mohamed Allee Khan. They were also threatened, that if they did not exert themselves in this they would repent it. Sirdar Mohamed Allee Khan and his troops marched out from Lughman to-day.—March 8.—The durbar was held as usual. Sirdar Sooltan Mohamed, Peer Mohamed, Shere Allee Khan, Mohamed Oosman Khan, Ghoolam Mohamed Khan and Hafizjee attended the durbar and inquired of the Ameer about his leaving for Cabool. After a long conversation it was settled that Sirdar Shere Allee Khan, with the whole of his troops, was to march on the 10th Rumzan (23rd March). Mohamed Oosman Khan was to remain at Bala-bagh and Futtehabad, until he had realised the revenue of those places, while the Ameer, Sooltan Mohamed Khan, and Peer Mahomed Khan, were to leave for Cabool on the 15th Rumzan. This has been arranged, but the Ameer does not seem to be leaving so soon, as Aulejah Ghoolam Mahomed Khan was heard talking with some sirdars, that the Ameer intended to spend the Eed on the road. The reason for his so doing, said the Aulejah, was to save expense, because if he did spend Eed in Cabool a great deal of money was required for presents to the whole family.—March 9.—Sirdar Mohamed Ameen Khan's urzee was received to-day. He informed the Ameer that he had desired Mohamed Shurreef Khan, who was at Gurrishk, to come and remain with him in Kandahar, but he, instead of complying with his request, had given rise to a disturbance. One day he and his battalion, all drunk, came to see some fun held outside of the Kandahar gate, and his sepoy's having some words with a few respected Moollas, first abused them and then thrashed them in the public street. Three days after this about three hundred Moollas went to Mohamed Shurreef Khan and requested him to hand over the sepoy's who had abused and beaten the Moollas the other day, as they would have them punished according to their Book. Mahomed Shurreef Khan, instead of cooling their anger, spoke to them very harshly, and ordered his men to turn them out; a skirmish took place, in which about twenty-three Moollas were killed and wounded, and about fifteen sepoy's of Mahomed Shurreef's side. The moment Mohamed Ameen Khan heard of this he hurried with some sowars to Gurrishk, and ordered some sepoy's of Mohamed Shurreef Khan's to be apprehended. He in vain tried his best to persuade the Moollas to pass it by by presenting them a certain amount as a fine, and placing the sepoy's at their disposal to be punished, but they would not listen to his advice. They said they would not be content until they had seen Mohammed Shurreef Khan, who had abused them, punished by the Mohammedan law.—Delhi Gazette.

DEATH OF LIEUT.-GEN. SIR MARK CUBBON.—A telegram to his relative, Lady Buchan, has recently announced the death, at Suez, of Sir Mark Cubbon, one of India's ablest and most distinguished statesmen. He landed at Madras more than sixty years ago, and acquired his first knowledge of India under his uncle, Sir Mark Wilks, then Resident at Mysore, the country where in later years he himself ruled so ably and so long. His administrative talent early pointed him out for employment in the formation of that efficient and responsible branch of the Indian executive, the commissariat. He succeeded his intimate friend, Sir William Morison, as Commissary-general in 1827, and, by a singular providence, was also selected by Lord William Bentinck to succeed that accomplished officer and his talented colleague, Mr. Macleod, as sole commissioner for Mysore in 1834. The principality of Coorg, in the capture of which he had shared, was shortly afterwards added to his charge. On Sir Mark Cubbon thus devolved the working out of a great problem, viz., the administration of a Government preserving its native institutions, but guided and directed by English integrity, enlightenment, and energy. This problem has since been intrusted to men of kindred spirit in the Punjab, and its successful solution has stood the sternest trial. The astonishing progress of the Mysore country, exhausted as it had been by insurrection, famine, and misrule under the Rajah, from the commencement to the close of Sir Mark Cubbon's wise and vigorous career (vide, "Selections from the Records of the Government of India, Foreign Department, No. 11, Census of the Punjab, and Administration of Mysore") has established the value of the principle of government embodied in the Mysore system; and, though not subjected to the fierce and fiery ordeal of the North-West mutiny, it has had its own sufficient test and probation. In the year 1837 an insurrection which for a short time baffled the forces of the Government broke out in the adjacent province of the British territory, but Mysore and Coorg stood firm, and a Coorg contingent, like the Punjab force which came to the succour of the besiegers of Delhi, quelled the rebellion. Again, when twenty years later the mutiny of 1857 caused our power to totter, notwithstanding the elements of mischief in its large and restless Mahomedan population, the fort and arsenal of Bangalore were promptly secured, and Mysore was tranquil. How well the principle of government to the development of which Sir Mark Cubbon's life was thus devoted was apprehended by the natives of India, will be best shown by the following extract from a Madras paper of the 20th of March last; but, while we acknowledge the virtue of the system, let us not be unmindful of the qualities of the man to whom a nation was indebted for tranquillity and prosperity during so many eventful years:—"In Sir Mark Cubbon were rarely combined a cultivated intellect, a calm judgment, a firm will, and an enduring patience, which was the more conspicuous because associated with extraordinary penetration. Striking and prepossessing in personal appearance; dignified, yet simple and unassuming in demeanour; liberal to profusion, with an exquisite tenderness of sympathy, and a tact which extended to all the exigencies of his position, he was emphatically one of nature's noblemen. From many succeeding Viceroy's he enjoyed the greatest confidence; from his many friends he won the warmest esteem; from his surviving assistants the most devoted attachment; and from the people, to whom he was for twenty-seven years the friend and benefactor, the profoundest gratitude."—Madras Athenaeum.

Adj. Gen.'s Office, Simla, March 18.—With the sanction of Government, the C. in C. is pleased to grant furlough to the whole of the Bengal native army.

Leave will be given, where practicable, to the extent of ten per cent. of the effective strength of corps, except in Punjab regiments recently returned from China, where it will be granted to the extent of forty per cent., agreeably to para. 10 of G. O. No. 52, dated December 20, 1859.

Arrest of Officers.

Poona, April 1st.—It appears to the C. in C. that the power of placing officers in arrest has in some cases been injudiciously exercised during the last twelve months in this army.

According to the rules of H.M.'s service an officer should not be put hastily in and out of arrest.

The arrest of an officer is held to be the preliminary of his being reported to superior authority with a view to his trial or otherwise, but it is irregular to look upon it as a punishment, or as the direct means of enforcing discipline.

H.E. desires that in future whenever an officer is placed in arrest, whether by order of his commanding officer, or of those in authority over the latter, a full report shall be made of all the circumstances for the information of the C. in C. through the division.

If it shall have been deemed advisable to release the arrested officer before the report has been forwarded, it is to be sent nevertheless, containing the fullest explanation of the circumstances which have led to the release.

It is most desirable whenever the convenience of the service will admit of it, that courts of inquiry should assemble to investigate the circumstance connected with the arrest of officers. The proceedings of such courts are of great use to the C. in C. in guiding his judgment as to the necessity of a court martial, while the result of such investigation may often be the release of an officer from arrest, instead of his subjection to long confinement on a charge which cannot be substantiated.

It is, therefore, henceforth to be considered the rule, that a charge against an officer is to be accompanied by the proceedings of a court of inquiry which shall have been assembled for the previous investigation of offence alleged against him.

When it may be impossible to assemble such court of inquiry, an explanation of the circumstances must be forwarded with the charge.

For proceedings and powers of Military Courts of Inquiry see separate G.O., page 15.

The C. in C. is pleased to direct that the following rules be added to the rules of Courts of Inquiry, published under separate G.O., dated the 21st July, 1856:—

"Whenever a person accused of an offence appears before a court of inquiry, he is invariably to be told by the court that any information afforded by his answers or statements may legally be used against him on his trial."

DIVISIONAL COMMANDS IN INDIA.

The following Letter and Note of the Secretary to the Government of India with the Gov. gen., bear reference to a Correspondence which has passed between the Gov. gen. and C. in C. in India on the subject of the appointment of divisional commands between the line and local troops (recommended by H.R.H. the Duke of Cambridge).

MILITARY DEPARTMENT.

To the Adjutant general of the Army.

SIR,—The Rt. Hon. the C. in C. having personally replied to my letter,* No. 113, of the 10th ult., to your address, I have had the honour to lay before H.E. the Gov. gen. the C. in C.'s letter, No. 7,664, dated the 8th inst., and am directed to acquaint you, for H.E.'s information, that in the Gov. gen.'s opinion, it is expedient at present that out of the seven divisional commands now existing in the Bengal presidency, three should be held by general officers of H.M.'s Indian forces, and four by general officers of H.M.'s forces of the line.

The Gov. gen. is accordingly prepared to sanction the appointment of a selected officer of H.M.'s line forces to the command of the Oude and Cawnpore division, now vacant, and you are requested to move the C. in C. to nominate an officer for the command.

This distribution of divisional commands is, however, to be understood as purely temporary, and subject to such modification as H.M.'s Government, in communication with the Government of India, may introduce when the arrangements for the re-organisation of the armies of India shall have been matured.—I have, &c.,

(Signed) R. J. H. BIRCH, Maj. gen., Sec. to the Govt. of India with the Gov. gen.

Camp Deennannuggur, 19th March, 1860.

NOTE.

Despatch from the Sec. of State, No. 479, dated 22nd December, 1859.

Letter from the C. in C., No. 7,664, dated 8th March, 1860.

H.R.H. the Gen. C. in C., H.M.'s forces, in a letter, dated the 22nd of October, 1859, brought under the consideration of the Sec. of State for India "the question of divisional commands in India, to be held in future by the general officers of H.M.'s army, as several changes are about to take place."

H.R.H. observes that there are now, besides the C. in C. in India and the C. in C. at Bombay,

In Bengal five	Maj. gen. Windham.
major gene-	" Sir J. Inglis.
ral.	" Sir S. Cotton.
"	" Sir R. Garrett.
"	" Sir Hope Grant.
In Madras two	Lieut. gen. Beresford, Maj. gen.
major gene-	Craigie.
In Bombay two	Sir Hugh Rose.
major gene-	Sir J. Michel.

And he states his opinion that there should not be less, certainly, than four maj. gens. of the line in Bengal, and two in each of the other presidencies.

Adverting, then, to the removal of Sir Hope Grant to China, to Lieut. gen. Beresford's retirement which takes Sir J. Inglis from Bengal to Madras, and to the intended appointment of Sir Hugh Rose to succeed Lord Clyde as C. in C. in India, H.R.H. proposes that a maj. gen. of the line be selected to complete the complement of four in Bengal, and another maj. gen. of the line to complete that of Bombay. (This last appointment has been made.) And H.R.H. considers that these arrangements may be at once made, quite irrespective of what may afterwards be fixed with regard to the general staff of the regular and local army in India.

The Sec. of State for India replies on the 12th of November, 1859, that, as a temporary measure pending the adoption of any alterations it may be deemed expedient to make regarding divisional commands in India, he will not object to two maj. gens. of the line for Madras and two for Bombay.

In regard to Bengal, the secretary shows that while the established number of divisional commands is two for line officers and five for Indian officers, at the present moment there are nine divisional commands, of which the line officers hold five and the Indian officers four, viz.:—

Maj. gen. Windham, Lahore.
" Garrett, Sirhind.
" Inglis, Cawnpore.
" Cotton, Peshawur.
5 " Grant, Oude.
Maj. gen. Hearsey, Presidency.
" Bradford, Meerut.
" Campbell, Benares.
4 " Napier, Gwalior.

It being uncertain how many of these general officers draw full divisional allowances, and how many the allowances of divisions in the field, the Sec. of State expresses his desire to refer the subject of the Bengal commands in the first place to the Government of India "for their opinion as to the distribution of the officers of both H.M.'s British and Indian armies."

The Duke of Cambridge rejoins in a letter, dated 17th November, 1859, expressing his hope that the Government of India will be of opinion that four maj. gens. for Bengal is not more, having regard to the very large force of H.M.'s line army now employed in India, than is the fair claim of that army. H.R.H. gives a statement of the line force in each presidency in 1853, before the Indian mutiny, or the Russian war, and that now in India:—

1853	Bengal, cavalry and infantry ...	15,508
	Madras, ditto ...	4,550
	Bombay, ditto ...	5,532
	Total ...	25,590

1859	{	Bengal { Cavalry, infantry, artillery, } 53,306
		and engineers
		Madras, ditto ... 18,756
		Bombay, ditto ... 15,398
	Total ...	82,455

H.R.H. remarks that, whereas at the former period there were two maj. gens. in each of the three presidencies, in all six, "if the establishment of maj. gens. were fixed in proportion to the greater number of troops of the line now in India, the number would be—

"For Bengal	...	7
Madras	...	6
Total	...	18

The Sec. of State, on the 22nd December, 1859, informs H.R.H., that in referring the subject to the Government of India, care will be taken to direct attention to the great increase within the last two years of the British troops serving in Bengal; but that with reference to H.R.H.'s assumption "that, because in 1853 the line troops numbered 25,590, and the divisional commands held by line officers were six, therefore the number of line troops being now 82,455, the number of commands would in the same proportion be 18;" the number of divisional commands depends primarily upon other considerations than the numerical strength of line or local troops in India, and that the Gov. gen. in Council has to decide the matter upon grounds of policy and economy, as well as of strategy and of minor military considerations. And the Sec. thus continues: "In fact, when all the present field divisions shall have been broken up, the number of divisional commands will probably be reduced to the former limit." And Sir Charles Wood's letter thus concludes:—"In the allotment of the divisional commands, the looked-for reward for long and meritorious service, it is to be borne in mind that the strength of the local armies, European and native, as well as that of the line, must be taken into consideration."

In the despatch with which this correspondence was received, the Sec. of State recapitulates the points of it briefly; he refers to the Govt. of India the subject of the distribution of the commands "so as best to meet the fair claims of the officers of both armies, due consideration being given to the large increase of royal troops within the last two years;" and he desires to be furnished with the sentiments of Govt. on this subject as early as possible.

The despatch and correspondence having been sent to the C. in C. in India, and H.E.'s opinion on the subject invited, Lord Clyde has replied direct to the letter addressed from this department to the adjt. gen. of the army.

The C. in C. in his letter alludes to a letter (a memorandum) from the adjt. gen., with which H.E. has favoured me, on my asking for it (it is put up), which shows that the number of divisional command now is just what it was before the mutiny, viz.:—

Presidency,	} Of which, lately, four, viz., the Oude, Sirhind, Lahore, and Peshawur divisions, were held by general officers of the line, and the other three by gene- ral officers of the local army.
Dinapore,
Oude,
Meerut, Sirhind, Lahore, Peshawur,
In all seven.

At this moment three divisions are held by either service, and the Oude division is vacant.

The C. in C., alluding to the calculation from which the Duke of Cambridge deduces the result that many more than four generals from the line ought, in justice, to be appointed, and to the reply of Sir C. Wood, "that the number of divisional commands depends primarily on other considerations than the number of line or local troops in India, and has to be decided on grounds of policy and economy, as well as of strategy and minor military considerations," observes that if general officers were to be nominated according to the relative number of troops, the relative quality of these troops should be an element in the calculation; but H.E. considers that the terms of Sir C. Wood's remarks indicate his having virtually abandoned the question of the relative number of troops of either service, and placed the matter on the footing of a purely political question, into which H.E. cannot be expected to enter.

"I, however," the C. in C. continues, "must suppose that by the expression of policy and economy, it is intended to be implied that, although as a military question it might be proper to employ a larger proportion of generals from H.M.'s line, yet that taking into consideration the expense of the army, and the claims and feelings of the local officers, it will be the wish of Government to give the latter a greater share of command than would be thought proper if mere military efficiency in the generals and in the army were to be looked to. Such a line of policy and economy is one which it is impossible for me to think wise, however convenient it may seem for the moment to be."

* Not transmitted by the Government of India.

Perhaps, as "the expense of the army" is the same whichever class of generals may hold divisional commands, it may be permitted to me to suggest that the term "economy," as used by the Secretary of State, may possibly refer only to the question whether the State can bear the expense of any particular number of divisions, and whether some of those divisions ought not to be placed on the footing of field commands, as the Gwalior division was, and the Oude division for some time, and lately the Saugor division also. It was this sort of economy that led to the reduction of the Gwalior division to a first-class brigade, and to the amalgamation of the Cawnpore and Oude divisions; both done at the suggestion of the C. in C.

And may not the term "policy" have been used with reference to State policy exclusively; to the question of dividing the territories of the presidency into such military commands as may best suit the aspect of the country and the characteristics both of the provincial population and of the neighbouring rulers and people?

These matters, as points of economy and policy, must needs come under the consideration of Government in deciding the question of divisions to be maintained, their number and their extent; and, perhaps, it may be thought that the point of properly distributing the commands to line and local generals, comes rather within the "other considerations" of which Sir C. Wood speaks; these being also, as he remarks, "the looked-for reward for long and meritorious service," but not to be assigned without just reference to the "strength of the local armies, European and native, as well as that of the line, due consideration being given to the large increase of royal troops within the last two years."

Lord Clyde expresses his opinion that the strict maintenance of discipline, upon which the efficiency of the European regiments depends, "can only be secured by the continual inspection made by officers who have served in such regiments, and who are perfectly acquainted with every part of the system, and with the mode of managing the men." "On the stability," continued H.E., "of H.M.'s regiments of the line on their perfection as military bodies, we really rely to support our power in India, and taking the question in this light, there can hardly be too large a number of general officers from the line, to secure, by constant inspection, the discipline which makes these troops irresistible. I do not, therefore, enter into a computation of the numbers of soldiers of the two services, whatever result such a computation might lead to, nor do I think I can take expediency and policy into my calculation. I put the question on a higher ground altogether—the possession of India depends on the prowess of H.M.'s troops of the line, and the success and power of these troops depends on their discipline, which is maintained by the presence of experienced and uncompromising generals of the same service, and I therefore most strongly urge, for the sake of maintaining this discipline, that certainly not less than the four divisional generals proposed for Bengal by the Duke of Cambridge, should be decided on."

This inference does not go far enough, if the premises are sound; obviously the preceding assertions can only legitimately lead to the total exclusion of local generals from divisional commands. The C. in C. appears wholly to ignore the local European artillery and the local European infantry, who have done so much for the maintenance of the British power in India. The mention of "the European regiments" in the long passage just quoted, seems at the first to include all such regiments, but the context clearly shows what European regiments H.E. alludes to, and that "H.M.'s regiments of the line" are exclusively intended, and that generals of H.M.'s line army are alone considered by Lord Clyde to be qualified to hold divisional commands in India.

If training in British regiments of the line is indispensable, how is it to be accounted for that our Pearses, Malcolms, Ouchterlony's, Burrells, Richards, Lumleys, Adams, and a host of other time-honoured names, have so well acquitted themselves in high commands?

It is submitted that much more is necessary to efficiency as a general officer commanding a division in India than regimental training, however excellent. Knowledge of the people to a certain extent, and capability of commanding men, whether they be Europeans or natives, are essential qualities, and this seems to have been recognised of late years more than it used to be formerly, by the more frequent appointment of general officers of the line army, who had served previously in India, to divisional commands. But the majority of the general officers, now commanding divisions in the several presidencies, had never served in India till they came out to assume their commands.

There is assuredly a marked difference between one royal regiment and another in point of discipline, however excellent the general system undoubtedly is, and the difference is open to intelligent observation. There exist also the means of observing the excellencies of the British system, when serving at the same station or in the same field with regiments of the line, and a very considerable knowledge of the practical working of that system is to be gained by officers on the staff of divisions, or the general staff of the army departments, and especially the department of the adjutant general. It was in this way, by personal observation, by intimate acquaintance with the details of command in H.M.'s line regiments, and in the local regiments, European and native, which constitute the divisions of the army, by experience of the country and its people, and knowledge of his own countrymen, and by service in the field with troops of all arms, royal and local; it was in all these ways that the present C. in C. at Madras became qualified for his high office, and was enabled so well to perform its functions, and it is submitted, that what Sir Patrick Grant acquired, may be, and has been acquired by many of his brother officers of the local service, and that he is by no means the only one of their number who would equally well acquit themselves had they the same opportunities; but Sir Patrick Grant has had no training with any corps of H.M.'s line army.

In the observations now submitted I do not allude more to officers of high rank now living than to those who are advancing in rank and in qualification for high command eventually.

With regard to the calculation made by H.R.H. the Duke of Cambridge, it may be remarked that the relative numbers of regiments of the line has never determined the number of divisional commands to be assigned to line generals in the several presidencies. In 1853, as stated in that calculation, there were two general officers of the line in Madras and two in Bombay, and not more than two in Bengal, though the line troops in Bengal were three times as numerous at the time as those in Madras, and nearly so as those in Bombay.

And in the number of line generals which H.R.H. brings out of that calculation as assignable on the principle of relative strength to the three presidencies, it is remarkable that H.R.H. would give six to Madras and five to Bombay, whereas the line troops, now serving in Bombay, are stronger by 2,000 men than those employed in Madras. And yet he would give to Bengal only seven, though numerically the line troops in this presidency are four times as many nearly as are now serving in Madras, and about three and a-half times as many as are now in Bombay. But the calculation in question would absorb eighteen out of the twenty divisional commands available in the three presidencies at the time that calculation was made. The total number having now been reduced to eighteen, the local generals would be wholly deprived of the commands of divisions.

Whatever may be the result of the deliberations of the Government of India as to the number of divisions in each presidency to be finally retained, perhaps until the reorganisation is settled, it may not be considered expedient to do more than determine to which service the vacant Oude division shall now be assigned.

The Duke of Cambridge claims it for the generals of the line so as to secure to them four divisional commands in Bengal.

The C. in C. claims it for them on the ground that not less than the four divisional commands proposed by the Duke for Bengal should be assigned to the line generals.

In the adjutant general's letter it is suggested that it would be only fair to give the odd command, the fourth out of seven, alternately to the two services.

The "feelings of the local officers" are alluded to by Lord Clyde as likely, in his opinion, to be to some extent taken into consideration by the Government of India, but that sort of thing cannot form any part of considerations to be entertained. If the local generals cannot show "long and meritorious service," entitling them, as Sir Charles Wood expresses it, to "the reward" of divisional command (if, indeed, as Lord Clyde declares, they are unfit because they are not of H.M.'s line army), then can it be of no importance what their feelings may be, they must needs recede from competition for high command; but if it be otherwise, it is the claims of the local officers, and not their feelings, that must be considered; and the instruction of the Secretary of State is unmistakable, that the distribution of the commands shall be settled "so as best to meet the fair claims of the officers of both armies, due consideration being given to the large increase in the number of royal troops within the last two years."

The number of divisional commands in Bengal is now seven, as it used formerly to be; and they are all regular divisions, carrying the full allowance.

At the present moment neither of the three line general officers commanding divisions in Bengal are on the strength of any of the regiments of the line serving in India. The local generals belong, as a matter of course, to H.M.'s Indian service in Bengal.

When the late Lord Hill was C. in C. of H.M.'s forces, the distribution of divisional commands was made on the principle that the local force constituted the main Indian army, and that the royal troops were "auxiliaries." The expression was Lord Hill's.

In that distribution two divisions were assigned to the royal or auxiliary troops, and five to the local forces.

Circumstances have now entirely changed. The number of officers of the local forces has not been reduced, but the number of major generals has been increased to 145 as the fixed establishment for all India. The proportion of major generals in Bengal varies from time to time; but, in the absence of major generals, colonels are eligible to command divisions, and this rule obtains for both services.

The increase, however, of the royal troops serving in India, within the last two years is such that the term "auxiliaries" is no longer applicable. They constitute, in fact, the main army of Bengal at the present time, and it appears to me that the line is entitled to the majority of the commands in Bengal, but only to a majority, and, accordingly, the vacant division, I submit, should be assigned to H.M.'s line army, making their complement four, while the local generals should retain the other three.

But this distribution, should it be approved of, should, I apprehend, be declared only temporary, so as to leave the Government of India quite unfettered as to the future permanent relative distribution of divisional commands to be made after the reorganisation shall have been determined upon.

MR. LAING'S REPLY TO THE REPORT OF THE CANADIAN RAILWAY COMPANY.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "ENGLISHMAN."

Sir,—A report having appeared in the public papers from a committee of shareholders of the Great Western of Canada Railway Company, attacking my conduct with reference to transactions which took place some years ago, I think it right to ask you to insert the following copy of a letter which I addressed to Sir Charles Wood on the same day on which I received the report in question:—

Calcutta, April 4, 1861.

Dear Sir Charles Wood,—The missing mail has arrived this morning, and as there is a chance of catching the Bombay mail by an after-express, I do not delay a moment in writing.

I need not say with what extreme surprise I have seen the charge brought against me with reference to the Great Western of Canada Railway.

When I saw the committee, in order to volunteer any explanation in my power, I asked them distinctly if they had any charge, and urged them to make it before I left the country. Also, finding towards the close of the interview, that they had a short-hand writer in the room, I said that as I had been speaking frankly on matters half forgotten, owing to the lapse of time, if they intended to use anything I said as evidence, they must send me a proof for correction. This they distinctly promised to do, but five or six weeks elapsed before I sailed for India, during which I never heard a word about the matter, and therefore naturally concluded that, as far as I was concerned, the matter was at an end. I mention this simply as the reason why it never occurred to me to have any special explanation of the affair with you or any one else.

Now for the merits of the question. The history of it is shortly this:—The Great Western of Canada Railway Company, after an abortive attempt, frustrated by the panic in 1847, was organised as a Canadian company with a Canadian board of directors, mainly by the exertions of Sir Allan McNab, and the house of Buchanan and Company, of Hamilton and Glasgow. I assisted them on several occasions in raising capital, and was much consulted by them in railway matters. By 1853 the concern had assumed a very promising appearance. That was a period of great railway excitement in Canada, and the Grand Trunk scheme was brought out under the auspices of Messrs. Glyn and Baring, and Mr. Hincks, the premier of Canada, with a very large capital, as a comprehensive scheme for a Canadian system of railways. It was a moment of great peril for the Great Western of Canada, as the Grand Trunk interest was all powerful in the Canadian Legislature, while the Great Western was very unpopular, from the idea that it was a link in the United States route to New York, and not in the Canadian route to Montreal. Sir Allan McNab and the Canadian Board considered the possession of the line from Hamilton to Toronto as of vital importance to the Great Western. A glance at the map will show the reason. If the Grand Trunk got it, the avowed policy of their leaders in Canada was to extend their line from Hamilton parallel with and close to the Great Western, between it and Lake Erie to the same terminus opposite Detroit. This has been several times nearly effected, and would have been utter ruin to the Great Western. If, on the other hand, the Great Western got the Hamilton and Toronto, they became the natural prolongation of the Grand Trunk line westwards, and an equal arrangement between the two became possible.

The constant policy of Sir Allan McNab and myself was to bring about such an arrangement, prevent injurious competition, and unite the Grand Trunk and Great Western influence to get a guarantee from Canada of five per cent. on the English capital embarked in both enterprises. This, I believe, might have been carried out, and millions of loss to English shareholders been saved, had not the excitement in Canada, and the personal animosities of the Grand Trunk and Great Western parties there, overruled the policy of Sir Allan McNab and his friends.

However, this was the state of things in which Sir Allan McNab, and Mr. Harris, of the firm of Buchanan and Co., who were the president and vice-president of the Great Western Board, and had full powers from them, came over to England with an urgent request to me to assist them in securing the Hamilton and Toronto line. An Act had been got for the line in the Canadian Legislature, on an estimate of the Great Western engineer, a Mr. Benedict, based on rough surveys, and on the actual cost of the Great Western line itself according to the last estimates. But this Act authorised an independent company, and not the Great Western, to make the line, and in the then feeling of the Canadian Legislature it would have been hopeless to ask for it in their name.

Accordingly, the great object of the Great Western directors was to get an independent company formed entirely in the same interest, who should hold the line until the Great Western were allowed to take it over. The Grand Trunk party were equally eager to get the control of the company, and it was a matter of notoriety that, as soon as the subscription list was opened in Canada, they would endeavour to secure a majority. The urgent request of Sir A. McNab and Mr. Harris to me was, that I would help them in forming a company and find some well-known English contractor who would undertake to make the line for the engineer's estimate, and to subscribe for any shares which might not be subscribed for here, on the understanding that the whole concern was to be made over to the Great Western, as if they had originally undertaken it, as soon as possible. There was no other possible means of attaining the object. It seemed to me, then, and seems now, a perfectly legitimate one. The leading men interested in Great Western stock in England, whom there was time to consult, approved of it, and I accordingly exerted myself strenuously and successfully to carry it through. I persuaded Mr. Wythes, who, as Messrs. Brassey and Peto were engaged for the Grand Trunk, was the only large contractor I knew for such an affair, to take the risk of the contract on the Western engineer's estimate, without the delay, which would have been fatal, of sending to Canada to make minute inquiries. Also to take the risk, with me, of authorising Mr. Isaac Buchanan in Canada to subscribe in our names for all the shares, so as to secure the control from the Grand Trunk, taking our chance of finding subscribers in England to take them off our hands.

This was done, and the prospectus issued inviting subscriptions, and Mr. P. Buchanan, Mr. Masterman, the Company's banker, and I, were provisional directors, or trustees, for the purpose of holding the deposits, and seeing that they were not handed over to the Company, until the conditions of the prospectus were complied with. All this time I had no concern with the contract, and looked to being paid for my risk and trouble by some commission. The public subscribed pretty freely, and the shares were, if I recollect, at a small premium of £1 or £1.10s. each. They were allotted in England at par, from the subscriptions made in Canada, and I retained for myself individually either four hundred or five hundred shares. The whole of the proceedings were duly ratified by the Board in Canada, and our functions as provisional directors having completely terminated, Mr. Masterman and I wrote a joint letter to Mr. Peter Buchanan, who had been officially appointed agent of the Hamilton and Toronto Railway Company, resigning our trust. Of this letter I have fortunately found a copy amongst some old papers in a desk I brought to India, and as the date may be material, I subjoin it.

To Peter Buchanan, Esq., agent to the Hamilton and Toronto Railway Company.

Dear Sir,—The lease of the Hamilton and Toronto Railway being now confirmed, and the shares and bonds delivered to the English shareholders, our duties as trustees for them have ceased, and we shall be happy to transfer the funds standing in our names jointly with yours, as you may direct, on behalf of the Hamilton and Toronto Railway Company.

We remain, yours faithfully,

S. LAING.

J. MASTERMAN, JUNR.

London, July 11, 1853.

The whole affair as regards the Hamilton and Toronto shareholders was thus concluded.

The Great Western Company had taken over the line and contract as originally proposed by Sir Allan McNab and their Board, and the Hamilton and Toronto shareholders were put in the same position as Great Western shareholders, with no further risk or liability. In the meantime Mr. Wythes had got nervous about his contract, and urged me, as I had drawn him into it, to take a share of profit or loss with him, rather than any fixed commission. I agreed to do so at a date which I can fortunately identify, for I have found a copy of a letter, which I wrote on the same day that I made the arrangement, to Mr. P. Buchanan, as Agent for the Company, for the purpose of forwarding to the Directors.

"London, July 9, 1853.

My dear Sir,—I see from the report of the proceedings at Hamilton that I have been elected a director of the Hamilton and Toronto Railway Company. It is impossible for me to act in such a capacity, both because I cannot discharge duties on the other side of the Atlantic, and also because I was obliged, in order to inspire Mr. Wythes, who had no previous experience in America, with sufficient confidence, by coming forward at the critical period when the co-operation of a well-known English contractor was essential for the success of the undertaking, to enter into engagements with him which might expose me to misconception if I continued even nominally to be a director. I must request you, therefore, to accept my resignation of an office in which I have been put by my friends on the other side without my knowledge.—I remain, &c., "S. LAING."

And I have found further a note in this form, which sets the question of date beyond all doubt.

London, 2nd July, 1853.

To S. LAING, Esq., M.P.
DEAR SIR,—We are jointly interested in the Hamilton and Toronto contract, and share equally in all profit or loss resulting therefrom.

I am, dear sir,

Yours very faithfully,

GEO. WYTHES.

I will send the originals by the first Calcutta mail, as the weight by this express is limited.

This makes two things clear. First, that the whole provisional trust for the Hamilton and Toronto shareholders was completely at an end. No doubt the letter of the 11th July should, in strictness, have been written on the 9th, but it is manifest that a mail had arrived from Canada, bringing news of the ratification of all proceedings and final termination of all separate trust and responsibility for the Hamilton and Toronto shareholders, before I agreed to take a share in the contract. Secondly, that there was no idea at the time of there being anything to conceal, or it would have been the easiest thing in the world to conceal it. I had simply to decline to act as a director on the ground of non residence in Canada, and no one could have known anything about the matter. But the more straightforward course was to write as I did, so that if any question were raised about the Hamilton and Toronto line, the Great Western Directors, who were the same, or nearly so, as those of the Hamilton and Toronto Company, might know exactly how I stood, and act accordingly.

I am not aware that there is anything else that requires explanation. It is not disputed that, when at a subsequent period I consented to become for a short time a director of the Great Western Company, I gave up all interest in the contract before doing so. It is not disputed that the contract contained a clause for referring differences to Mr. Robert Stephenson, and that the English directors, comprising men of the greatest experience in such matters, like Mr. Gill, after I had finally left the Board, and knew nothing of what was going on, preferred settling with Mr. Wythes by a compromise, to going to a reference; and I am informed that Mr. Wythes has quite recently offered to re-open the whole question and go to a reference, if the company will take the risk of having to pay more than they have done. The fact is, the contract was originally made on the fairest possible basis proposed by the Great Western Directors and Engineer themselves, and approved by the Canadian Legislature, who had an interest in seeing that it was not excessive, as they might have been called upon to advance some proportion of the cost as a public loan under existing Acts. That basis was to take the assumed cost of the Great Western, which was then approaching completion, and to allow the same cost for the same sort of work in the Hamilton and Toronto line. Owing to the enormous rise in the price of labour and materials in Canada, consequent on the expenditure of ten or twelve millions on the Grand Trunk and other lines, these estimates became insufficient. The cost of the Great Western has greatly exceeded that on the basis of which the Hamilton and Toronto contract was taken, and I have little doubt that Mr. Wythes's statement is correct, that he has been a loser by it. Knowing this, I have always felt myself bound to bear testimony to the circumstances under which he took the contract, and to urge that he should be dealt with fairly, and no undue advantage taken. But I can appeal confidently to my colleagues, Mr. Gill and Mr. J. B. Smith, M.P., whether I ever exerted any undue influence to procure a favourable settlement for Mr. Wythes; whether I did not at the outset tell them of the exact position in which I had stood; and whether I had not finally resigned my seat at the Board for some time before any settlement was made.

From that time to this, now six or seven years, I have known nothing whatever of what was going on, except generally, that owing to the insane competition between the Grand Trunk and the Great Western, and the complete prostration of Canada and the Western States after the panic of 1857 and succession of bad harvests, all Canadian Railway property has become greatly depreciated, and discontent has naturally ensued. But I am persuaded that the policy of Sir A. McNab and his Board in 1853 was the right one, and that if it had been carried through, the fifteen millions of English capital invested in Canadian Railways would have been in a very different position. I have only to add that I never received a farthing, directly or indirectly, on account of this affair, except for the small premium on the few hundred shares which I took as an individual subscriber. I have not time, before the express goes to-day, to read attentively what purports to be my evidence, but I believe it is full of errors. I will not comment on the conduct of the committee in taking short-hand notes, without any warning, of a familiar conversation on half forgotten events many years old; or still more in publishing that evidence without giving me any opportunity of seeing it, in the teeth of a promise not to do so; and with five or six weeks' time to send it to me. I believe the facts which I have stated can all be confirmed in case of need by Sir Allan McNab, Mr. Buchanan, Mr. Gill, Mr. Wythes, and others now in England; and I feel the most entire confidence that, upon these facts, no one who understands anything of business can say that there was anything underhand or dishonourable in any part of my conduct. It is painful to appeal to character in a case like this; but having been thus attacked in my absence, I must say this. For a long series of years I have been, as it were, in the thick of railway transactions, both in England and abroad. I had not the advantage of being born to a fortune. Owing to the failure of kelp on a Scotch estate, I had to fight my way in the world, to support a family, and struggle for an independence. Circumstances threw me into the line of railway business, and have brought me into personal contact, in large transactions, with almost every railway man and capitalist of note who have taken a leading part in industrial affairs throughout the world. If there had been any flaw in my character for honour and integrity in commercial matters, I think it is barely within the range of possibility that it should not have been found out long ago.

Well, I appeal to those men with the same confidence, to say if they have ever known or heard of anything wrong in my conduct generally, as I do on the facts of this particular case, to say whether there is anything in it inconsistent with honour and probity. Pray make whatever use of this you think best to vindicate the character of a public man most cruelly attacked in his absence, and if there is any point which, in the hurry of writing, I have overlooked, or which seems to require further investigation or explanation, let me know at once.

I remain, my dear Sir C. Wood,

Yours very faithfully,

(Sd.) S. LAING.

The Right Hon. Sir C. Wood, Bart.

The day after despatching this letter I received one of a week's later date from Sir Charles Wood, viz., of the 4th March, in which he says:—

"Since I wrote to you I have seen Mr. J. B. Smith, Mr. Beattie, and Mr. Isaac Buchanan. They all concur in statements which completely exonerate you from anything which could be objected to by anybody as to the matters which were questioned as to the Hamilton and Toronto Railway."

I also thought it my duty immediately on receiving the report to send it to the Governor general, with a request that he would read it, and form his opinion upon it; and I have his Excellency's permission to use his reply, which is to the following effect:—

"I have read the correspondence which you sent me yesterday, and your letter to Sir Charles Wood. I have also read the report of the Committee of investigation appointed by the shareholders of the Great Western Canada Company so far as it relates to yourself, and your evidence before the committee."

"I now say, without hesitation, that your conduct in the transactions which have been called in question appears to me to have been quite open and above-board, and that the different relations in which you stood at different times to the Great Western (of Canada) Railway, or to a part of it, are explained satisfactorily in your letter to Sir Charles Wood."

I have only further to request that you will be good enough to give insertion to the above as early as possible.—I remain, sir, your obedient servant,
Calcutta, April 6, 1861.

FRENCH STEAM-PACKET SERVICE IN THE INDIAN OCEAN.

A BILL has been submitted to the Corps Legislatif of France which may well strike terror to the hearts of the great P. and O. monopolists. Little will it avail them now to have fted her Majesty's Ministers and the representatives of the people. Little will it benefit them to have conveyed the august legislators of our land to the harbour of Cherbourg, or in triumph alongside of the mighty war-ships that stopped short of Cronstadt. Neither turtle soup nor iced champagne will stand them in any stead against a rival company subventioned by the Imperial Government. And they must lay their account to experience but little sympathy in their misfortunes. Possessing a giant's strength they have used that strength like a giant, and have shown scanty consideration even for those from whom their wealth and influence were directly derived. Every year the complaints of passengers by their ships have become louder and more frequent, but no trouble was ever taken to redress their grievances and prevent their recurrence. And now their sin has found them out. A French company is about to break up their monopoly, and establish a truly formidable competition. This company undertakes to place twelve fine steamers in the Eastern Seas, within the period of three years, capable of an average speed per hour of nine and a-half knots on the main line, and of nine knots on the branch lines. The main line will be from Suez to China by Aden, Point de Galle, Penang, Singapore, and Segon; while the branches will be five in number:—
1. From Aden to Réunion and the Mauritius;
2. Point de Galle to Calcutta and Chandernagore;
3. Singapore to Batavia;
4. Segon to Manilla;
5. Segon to Shanghai. This company, moreover, does not look solely to its own exertions for the meet guerdon of public-spirited enterprise. It will enjoy the substantial patronage of the French Government to an extent that argues the existence of political motives of considerable urgency. The average subvention or annual grant is £240,000, in addition to which the sum of £75,000 is to be given to the Government to cover the expense of sending its vessels round the Cape to their respective stations. As if this were not enough to encourage capitalists to come forward, the Government actually provides a large portion of the capital itself. It engages to advance £160,000 a-year for three years, which, together with interest at the rate of five per cent., is to be repaid in twelve yearly instalments of rather more than £42,000. In other words, a capital of £480,000 will be furnished to the Compagnie des Messageries Impériales, and a net annual subsidy of £198,000. If it were a mere commercial speculation, it is probable that the P. and O. Company, laying aside their superciliousness for a time, would soon drive these intruders out of the field; but it is manifestly the intention of the Imperial Government to give them a powerful and efficient support. The object in view is plain enough. It is not simply to furnish a gratuitous passage to "Lazarists, missionaries, sisters of charity, and all members of religious orders." Even the Eldest Son of the Church would hesitate to pay £200,000 a-year for this romantic purpose. But this packet service will necessitate or excuse the formation of large depots at the various stations; and the protection of this valuable property, again, will justify the maintenance of a powerful naval squadron in the Indian waters. Besides, and perhaps more than all this, a nursery for French seamen will be formed, and an impetus given to maritime adventure. It remains to be seen what British enterprise and perseverance are capable of accomplishing in the face of apparently superior advantages; and it also remains to be seen if the British Government rightly appreciates this insidious form of aggression, and is prepared to counteract the further designs of the Man of Mystery.

HONORARY MAGISTRATES IN THE NORTH-WEST PROVINCES.

THE confession of error is oftentimes more difficult, and occasionally even more meritorious, than undeviating adherence to the right path. The Indian Government is entitled to the credit of frankly acknowledging and correcting the chief defect in its former system of administration. It recognises to the fullest extent the unsoundness of the policy that destroyed all distinctions of rank, and reduced the princes of the land almost to the level of the peasantry. However ungenerous such a course of procedure may appear, there was no lack of arguments in its favour. At first sight it might not unreasonably appear an astute and politic line of conduct to discredit those who had, up to that time, possessed the greatest influence among their fellow-countrymen, and to deprive them of the power of organising a vigorous opposition. The overthrow of the local magnates and the encouragement of the trading and industrial classes seemed the readiest way to reconcile the mass of the population to the sway of their foreign rulers, and bind up their interests with the permanence of the new Government. The ancient landholders, like most Asiatics, were men of warlike temperament, prone to violence and disdainful of the arts of peace. Their humiliation, therefore, suggested itself as the most certain and expeditious mode of securing the maintenance of order and tranquillity, and of removing all ground of disquiet from the ryots and bunnials. The idea was by no means original. It is the principle conquerors have almost invariably adopted in their treatment of the conquered, but the terrible experience of the last years proves that it is inapplicable to India, or rather that sufficient time had not elapsed for the obliteration of all traces of the old aristocracy. The famine, too, that is at present depopulating the North-West Provinces would probably have been deprived of something of its intensity had the native gentry been in a position to take thought for their destitute dependents. The levelling system, in short, has been tried and found wanting, and now the Government is setting to work partially to reconstruct the edifice it has hitherto taken such fruitless trouble to destroy. It is now pronounced desirable to associate the native chiefs with the European officers of the Government, both in the administration of criminal justice and in the disposal of revenue business. The Lieut.-governor is of opinion that the time has come to "give an opening to the heads of native society for the useful occupation of their intellectual energies and for the beneficial exercise of the large influence, both local and personal, which they possess, in the service of the Service." No doubt, great good will arise to all parties from the more intimate intercourse between European officials and the leading men of the native population. The latter also will recover their self-respect, and be saved from the habits of low sensual debauchery they had acquired from idleness. By degrees they may be permitted to take a more active and important part in the civil administration of the country, and thus reduce the enormous expenditure necessitated by the present system, and at the same time conciliate the goodwill of the people at large. At first some circumspection as well as forbearance may have to be exercised, but gradually the consciousness of responsibility will ensure the equitable dispensation of justice, and the satisfaction of being trusted will naturally produce a desire to justify the confidence that has been reposed. The restoration of the proprietary classes to their ancient honours and local position may be regarded as the most encouraging feature of the new order of things, and augurs well for the future stability of our Indian empire. Without detracting from the beneficial influence that may be exercised by European settlers, it may be safely averred that the natives themselves must work out their own regeneration, and the recent appointment of honorary magistrates is the first step in that direction.

"MADRAS IN THE OLDEN TIME."

UNDER the above title a book has lately been published consisting of compilations from the Government Records. It is full of much curious matter, and gives a great deal of very interesting information respecting the state of European society in Madras in the early times of that Presidency. Some of the sketches it contains are exceedingly characteristic of the period, though with reference rather to the manners and customs of the English at home in the seventeenth century than to those of the natives, or even to the mutual relations of the two races. Here is a picture, for instance, of our countrymen at Madras as they appeared two hundred years ago:—

"We would endeavour to picture Madras as it was some two centuries ago; when members of Council rode about in bullock bandies, and the guards of the President were armed with bows and arrows, swords and shields; when gentlemen wore large hose, 'peascod-bellied' doublets, preposterous breeches, and hats with conical crowns and bunches of feathers; when the ladies, very few in number, wore long-waisted stomachers and powerfully starched ruffs; when the Fort was nothing more than a fortified factory, in which the factors and merchants bought and sold, gave their orders and their payments, just like any merchant firms of modern date; when all took their meals together, attended daily prayers, and lived like a little brotherhood, who were all kept under by a strict discipline, and who, but for the attractions of burnt wine, punch, native beauty, and occasional quarrels, may be said to have lived as sober and God-fearing lives in this presidency as were led by their brethren in Leadenhall-street or Cheapside."

The first difficulty to be overcome in the social line was to find suitable mates for the Hon. Company's servants in that distant land.

"The Dutch Company encouraged the matrimonial desires of their servants, and invested husbands and fathers with peculiar privileges; and to this day the effigies of many a rare old Dutch wrow may still be seen in the strange antiquated burying-ground at Palicat. The Portuguese were even more fortunate, for their king had been long in the habit of sending out small cargoes of orphan girls, well born and indifferently well portioned, to become wives to his subjects of India; and a good story is told how a Portuguese ship, with three of these maidens on board, was captured by the Dutch and carried in triumph to Surat, where the young ladies were promptly married to three of the most eminent Dutch merchants in the settlement, to the everlasting despair and desolation of the amorous Portuguese. For a long time, however, scarcely a single English lady was to be found at the English factories; the thing was altogether discouraged by the Directors, and the result may be easily inferred:—

'The heart, like a tendril, accustomed to cling,
Let it grow where it will, cannot flourish alone,
But will lean to the nearest and loveliest thing
It can twine with itself, and make closely its own.'

"Within the Fort all was outwardly fair enough, and the morals of the apprentices and writers were tolerably well seen after, for Sir William Langhorne was somewhat of a martinet in that direction. But still, if walls had ears and tongues, they might tell strange tales; and there were very many goings on in Black-town which we care not to record. In the out-stations, such as Masulipatam and Armaghau, there would seem to have been no restraint whatever. Sometimes, as we have already indicated, connections were formed which were as sacred in the eyes of the parties themselves as the marriage-tie could have made them. Sometimes, and there is no denying it, the household of a factor bore a stronger resemblance to the harem of some Mussulman voluptuary than to the household of a Christian trader.

"As for the soldiers of the garrison they lived much as soldiers might be expected to do. Many of them actually married the women of the country, not, indeed, the poor heathen girls, but the native Portuguese women, who were Roman Catholics. Accordingly, such marriages were celebrated by the Portuguese padres; and, in process of time, marriages, baptisms, and burials were conducted by the same priesthood, and the children were educated in the Roman Catholic religion. Those who are familiar with the history of the seventeenth century, are well aware of the suspicious enmity which was then felt by every Protestant communion towards the Roman Catholic body. The discovery of the Gunpowder Plot in the reign of James, the terrible 'Thirty Years' War,' the knowledge that the mother of Charles II. was a Roman Catholic, and that the next heir to the throne was himself a Roman Catholic, had culminated about this time in the pretended discovery of a Popish plot, and the English nation was literally driven mad with the vile perjuries of Oates and Bedloe. It is not, therefore, surprising that the wrath of good Master Patrick Warner, the chaplain at Fort St. George, should have been powerfully kindled. He wrote a long letter home to the Directors, complaining of the backslidings of the soldiers, the drinking and dicing of writers and factors, and the sinful toleration of Sir William Langhorne, who had actually fired a salute in honour of the foundation of a Roman Catholic Church within the walls of White-town. We reprint the letter at full length, at the end of the present article. We have corrected the spelling, but have left the reverend gentleman's language untouched. There may be a word or two which modern decorum would prompt us to cut out, but not one which may not be found in the Authorised Version of the Bible; and, therefore, we do not see any necessity for adapting the plain speaking of a divine of the seventeenth century to the tastes of our more polite times.

"The honest merchants in Leadenhall-street seem to have been powerfully affected by the letter from their God-fearing chaplain; and they adopted extraordinary means for preserving the orthodoxy of Fort St. George. They sent out strict orders that if any man was married by a Roman Catholic priest, or allowed his children to be baptized by a Roman Catholic priest, or did not have his children educated in the Protestant religion, he was to be sent home without delay. Moreover, they sent out, both to Bombay and Fort St. George, a few Protestant women for the soldiers to marry, and even permitted certain ladies to come out under restrictions, but on something very like matrimonial speculation.

"Thus it was that three or four English ladies first arrived in Madras; plain honest women enough, and, no doubt, tolerably educated for those times, when the 'Protestant Manual' and the 'House-keeper's Receipt-book' were the principal subjects of study. Seven or eight months had probably passed away since they had been wished 'God speed' by the worthy gentlemen of the Court of Directors, and had fairly set sail down the silver Thames for the hot country of Indians and idolaters. Poor souls! they must have had strange thoughts as they gazed out from the anchorage, and pondered upon the curious world they were soon to enter. But stranger still they must have felt when the two members of Council and the captain of the garrison climbed up the sides of the ship and welcomed them to Madraspatanam. But upon this part of the picture we need not dwell, but will simply imagine them to have been carried over the surf with many displays of gallantry, and finally landed in safety upon the beach in front of Fort St. George.

"A strange old fort it was even to the English gentlewomen of the time; but it would seem more strange to us; whilst our extensive buildings would have seemed stranger still to that simple-minded generation. There was the warehouse piled high with goods of all descriptions; some which seemed fresh from Aldersgate-street or the Cheap; others—silk, muslins, coloured calicoes, and other choice articles—which had been brought from mysterious towns far inland. Then there was the little chapel, where every man in the agency, from the youngest apprentice up to the honourable governor himself, was compelled to attend the daily reading of morning and evening prayers, besides two sermons on Sundays and something extra on Wednesdays. There was the refectory-room, where all the members of the agency took their dinners and supper at times which very nearly corresponded to our tiffin and dinners, and where on certain afternoons in the week the younger men were taught some one or other of the languages of the country, being stimulated thereunto by promise of large rewards for proficiency, twenty pounds being given for the knowledge of an Indian language, and ten pounds for a knowledge of Persian. There was the school-room, where all the children of the soldiers and others were taught to read and cipher, and, above all, were imbued with the principles of the Protestant religion; and be it told to the credit of the merchants of London in the Godless reign of King Charles, that they constantly sent over supplies of Bibles and Catechisms for use of school, and directed that 'when any shall be able to repeat the Catechisms by heart, you may give to each of them two rupees for their encouragement.' Other rooms there were, adorned with the heavy old-fashioned furniture of the time, but still looking mighty bare, and plain, and rough. Last of all, we must mention the Council Chamber, where all the members of Council were summoned to attend on every Monday and Thursday morning, at eight o'clock, either by the secretary himself, or by one of the writers and factors under him. It was also the secretary's duty to enter all their consultations in the book appointed for that purpose, together with all other occurrences and observations after the manner of a diary; and to take care that a duplicate copy was fairly written out by the factors and writers appointed to that duty, so that one copy might be retained by the secretary, and the other be sent home to the directors. And from that day to the present, from the governorship of the Hon. Sir William Langhorne in 1670 to the governorship of the Hon. William Morehead in 1860, all these 'Consultations' have been preserved in thousands of volumes; and it is from these original records that we are now writing the history of the Madras Presidency."

The standard of morality in England during the reign of Charles II. is admitted to have been lower than at any other period of the history of our nation, and it could hardly be expected that a higher tone would prevail in distant settlements removed from the restraints of even the lax notions of decorum that then existed in the mother country. It is not, therefore, a matter for surprise—nor, fairly, for reproach—that the factory servants at Madras should have indulged in the practices which called forth the following prohibitory penalties in the year 1670:—

"Sir William Langhorne had issued express orders—and certainly his views were liberal—that no one person was to be allowed to drink above half a pint of arrack or brandy and one quart of wine at one time, under a penalty of one pagoda upon the house-keeper that supplied it, and twelve fanams upon every guest that had exceeded that modest allowance. Drunkenness was to be punished by a fine and the stocks. All persons addicted in any way to the social evil were to be imprisoned at the discretion of the governor, and if not reclaimed were to be sent back to England. All persons telling a lie, or absenting themselves from morning or evening prayers, were to be fined four fanams for each offence. Persons being out of the Fort after eight o'clock would be punished; and any one committing the heinous offence of getting over the walls of the Fort upon any pretence whatever was to be kept in irons until the arrival of the ships, and then to be sent to England to receive further condign punishment on his arrival. It was also ordained that all persons swearing, cursing, banning, or blaspheming the sacred name of Almighty God should pay a fine of four fanams for each offence; that any two persons who should go out into the fields to decide a quarrel between them by the sword or fire arms should be imprisoned for two months on nothing but rice and water; that any soldier giving another the lie should be made fast to a gun, and there receive ten small blows with a rattan, well laid on by the man to whom he had given the lie, and that any officer who should in any way connive at the offence, or at any mitigation of the punishment, should forfeit a month's wages."

Kidnapping appears to have been one of the means resorted to for the speedier accumulation of wealth, though it is probable that the natives were more largely implicated in that abominable traffic than our own countrymen. Stringent orders, however, were issued for its punishment and suppression.

"Monday, 18th September, 1683.—There being great number of slaves yearly exported from this place, to the great grievance of many persons whose children are very commonly privately stolen away from them, by those who are constant traders in this way, the agent and council considering the scandal that might accrue to the Government, and the great loss that many parents may undergo by such actions, have ordered that no more slaves be sent off the shore again."

"Monday, 13th November, 1683.—An order in English, Portuguese, Gentoo, and Malabar, for the preventing the transportation of this country people by sea and making them slaves in other countries, was read and passed and ordered to be hung up in public places of this town. The contents are as followeth:—

"Whereas formerly there hath been an ill custom in this place of shipping off this country people and making them slaves in other strange countries, We, therefore, the present Governor and Council of Fort St. George, have taken the same into our serious consideration, and do hereby order that, for the future, no such thing be done by any person whatsoever, resident in this place. And we do hereby also strictly command all our officers by the water side, whether they be English, Portuguese, or Gentoos, to do their utmost endeavours to prevent the same; or else suffer such punishment, either in body or goods, as we shall think fit to inflict upon them. And if any person, being an inhabitant of this town of Madraspatanam, shall hereafter presume clandestinely to do anything contrary to this our order, by shipping such slaves of this country, and it be proved against him—he shall pay for every slave so shipped off or sent away fifty pagodas, to be recovered of him in the Choultry of Madraspatanam; one third for the use of the Honourable East India Company, one-third to the poor, and one-third to the informer."

The Government was also determined to have no Dame Quicklies within its jurisdiction.

"Thursday, 8th March, 1688.—Mrs. Francis, wife to the late Lieutenant Francis, killed at Hoogly by the Moors, being sent hither from Bengal very poor, she made it her petition that she might keep a punch house for her maintenance. But she being a notorious bad woman, it is agreed that she be not permitted to keep a public-house, lest it be the occasion of many debaucheries and disorders, she having lived very scandalously formerly here. It is therefore ordered that she go on the 'Royal James' to the West Coast, and that according to the Right Honourable Company's order, she be allowed something out of the proceeds of the prizes to provide her necessities, in consideration of the loss of her husband in the late unhappy Bengal expedition. From a subsequent entry we learn that this lady was afterwards sent home to prevent 'further scandal in our city.'"

So far back as 1687 it was proposed to give to Madras the benefit of municipal administration.

"But if you could contrive a form of a corporation to be established, of the natives mixed with some English freemen, for aught we know some public use might be made thereof, and we might give the members some privileges and pre-eminences by charter under our seal, that might please them (as all men are naturally with a little power); and we might make a public advantage of them, without abating essentially any part of our dominion when we please to exert it. And it is not unlikely that the heads of the several castes, being male aldermen and some other burgesses, with power to choose out of themselves yearly their mayor, and to tax all the inhabitants for a town-hall, or any public buildings, for themselves to make use of,—your people would more willingly and liberally disburse five shillings towards the public good, being taxed by themselves, than sixpence imposed by our despotical power (notwithstanding they shall submit to what we see cause), were Government to manage such a society, as to make them proud of their honour and preferment, and yet only ministerial, and subservient to the ends of the Government, which under us is yourselves.

"The town clerk must always be an Englishman, that can speak Portuguese and Gentoo; and their recorder must be the same. The habit of the aldermen in that hot country, we think ought to be thin scarlet silk gowns; their number twelve, besides the mayor; that they be allowed to have kettysols over them. The burgesses to wear black silk gowns; their number to be limited to sixty, eighty, or one hundred, as you shall find most convenient. The sergeants attending them to bear silver maces gilt, not exceeding one yard in length. All officers to be elected by the mayor and aldermen with the approbation of our president, and to be paid by the corporation such reasonable salaries as the mayor and aldermen shall think fit; and to have such fees established by the mayor and aldermen as shall be settled and appointed by them with approbation of our president and council. And to give the mayor and some of the aldermen power to be always justices of the peace, as in the Portsmouth Charter, and to have power to try all causes that shall be brought before them,—to erect a proper prison for the use of the Corporation, and to award judgment and execution in all causes that shall be exhibited before them.

"We think it may be convenient, that in the said Court of Aldermen, being twelve beside the mayor, there should never be above three English freemen, and three Portuguese; the other seven to be Moors and Gentoo."

Twelve years later the English population was still very small, and single men formed a large majority.

"Out of one hundred and nineteen Englishmen, only twenty-six were married to English wives, fourteen to Castees, four to Mustees, two to French women, and one to a Georgian. It will be seen that only forty-seven were married at all, and that the remaining seventy-two were bachelors. The English ladies were fifty in number, viz.:—Twenty-six wives, fourteen widows, and ten young unmarried ladies. It seems a great pity that ten young ladies should have been unable to find husbands amongst so large a community of unmarried gentlemen."

The present volume comes down no further than 1702; but we trust the editor will not grow weary of his arduous occupation until he has reached at least the commencement of the present century.

IMPERIAL PARLIAMENT.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—May 8.
ARMY AMALGAMATION (INDIA).

Mr. H. SEYMOUR asked the Secretary of State for India whether he could give any information with regard to the progress of army amalgamation in India?

Sir C. WOOD said he had received a letter a few days ago stating that the Indian Government had agreed upon and prepared a general order for carrying this measure into effect. He hoped to receive the papers on the subject by the next mail, and as soon as they arrived they would be laid upon the table.

RAILWAYS IN INDIA.

Sir M. PETO asked the Secretary of State for India what steps the Government intended to take consequent on a despatch from India, dated the 22nd of February last, in which it was stated that "a state of things is possible, or rather probable, in which, in the event of funds not being supplied from home, in anticipation, to carry on the railway works, the Government of India would have no alternative but to order their abrupt and complete suspension."

Sir C. WOOD was very sorry that the statement referred to had been published, because it had excited a considerable degree of apprehension, which he believed was totally unfounded. There was not the least intention of allowing the railway works now in progress in India to be stopped. Those works had been carried on last year to the full extent that could be executed, the whole expenditure incurred for them during that year having been 8,300,000*l.*, of which sum there was received from the shareholders 5,810,000*l.* He believed it would be equally detrimental to the interests of the shareholders, the Government, and the public if those works were suspended.

Mr. H. SEYMOUR asked whether it was intended to continue the branch of the Great Indian Peninsular railway into the cotton districts?

Sir C. WOOD said the works along the whole line from the north of Bombay into the interior of the cotton-growing country would be carried on as rapidly as possible.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—May 10. SIKKIM AND THIBET.

Mr. W. EWART asked the Secretary of State for India whether terms had been made with the Rajah of Sikkim by which increased facilities for communication would be opened from India to Thibet.

Mr. VANSITTART, before the right hon. gentleman answered the question, wished to ask him when he proposed to introduce the Bill relating to India, which had been long under his consideration.

Sir C. WOOD had no official information on the subject referred to by the hon. member for Dumfries, but he learnt from a private letter addressed to the Governor-General by Mr. Eden that an arrangement had been effected with the Rajah of Sikkim by which increased facilities of communication would be opened between our territories in Bengal and Thibet. It was intended that no duty should be charged on goods passing between our territories and Sikkim; and, as only a low rate of duty would be imposed on their passage between Thibet and Sikkim, it was to be hoped that a fair and free mode of transit would soon exist from our dominions into Central Asia. With respect to the measure alluded to by the hon. member for Windsor, he had hitherto been unable to introduce it on account of the pressure of the Government financial business, and he was afraid that he would not have an opportunity of doing so till after Whitsuntide.

"BY AUCTION, AT THE INDIA HOUSE."

(From the Press, May 11.)

A poster on the pillars set for show,—

What is't? Some bulletin of Indian battles,—

A kingdom taken in? Why! surely, no!

"A sale by auction of the goods and chattels."

Thank you! poor vestige of that portly Beadle—
(His ghost, may be, haunting these precincts still)—

I will walk in; and—tweedle-dum-di-deedle,—

You hear I'm humming, so I can't be "hill."

But don't look at me so! I own a feeling Like too much mustard in my eyes. Oh, beast!
What paste you there upon this wall and ceiling,
This palace of the Princes of the East?

Lot 96! Well, yes; I know, I knew it,—

"Dead, buried, and the fixtures to be sold"—

"The usual course"—"What's done, we can't undo it"—

"He died respected"—observations old.

But I—I ate the salt of this great Master;
I served him in his splendid Orient land,
Last, not least faithful, till the great disaster,
I knew his princely heart—his open hand.

He's dead. Well, well!—his hair's gone down Westminster
To govern Asia from a first-floor flat.

Gods! what it took to win! You, there—you—spinster,
You don't mean really that you've purchased that!

A desk, ma'am, yes—but use it not at knitting,
Nor balance bills thereat, or washing-scores:
A century's Foreign Secretaries sitting
Before that faded baize, "cast" crowns and crores.

That blotted porte-feuille there—the clothes-man's bought it—
DALHOUSIE'S scribble 's on the cover yet;
The black-wood bookcase—"your's, sir!"—MAL-COLM brought it

From Central India—HOLKAR had the set.

And, Moses! what you dub in your vernacular
"A peshky peish of rubbish,"—'twas the seat
Of such a scholar that his voice oracular
Taught Arians Sanskrit, as you'd teach to cheat.

Going!—what's going? Gone!—ah, gone indeed!
Generals and Governors who graced this board;
The grave Durbar that bade the soldier speed,
The feast that welcomed home his conquering sword.

Gone!—Clive, the country boy, of Plassy dreaming;
Hastings, arraigned by juster Judge than earth's;
Cornwallis, Elphinstone, and Wellesley, seeming
Noble by more nobility than birth's;

Heber's pale lips, in pious hymnals moving
For all those millions of his Eastern sheep; Napier, his good sword drawn, rough, just and loving;—
Theirs, and a thousand memories these walls keep.

Gone now! A crowd of Hebrews—broker, touter—
Stands in the place of those majestic men.
Oh! mighty moralist, of self-praise scouter,
Point here a moral—sharpen hence a pen:

But say no vanitatum vanitas!
καταστροφὴς καταστροφῶν, sigh not!
"Their works do follow them," the Scripture has,
And those which these have done with them shall die not.

If I took ill the busy buyer's jest,
And angered at the trader's thoughtless scoffing,
It was but this,—the worm will have our best,
But who can bear to lift the lid o' the coffin?
E. A.

MADRAS RAILWAY.

The report of the directors states that the work of construction had proceeded actively on the different lines since the last report. The first section of the Bellary line had been opened for traffic. The company had now about 257 miles open and at work on the two lines together, as against 137 miles at the date of the last report. The traffic of the railway during the last half-year had unavoidably suffered from the unfortunate prevalence of cholera and the comparative failure of the crops from drought. The shipments of material, plant, fuel, and stores during the year 1860 were to the extent of 38,348 tons to Madras and Beypoor. On the 1st of February last a further length of 70 miles of the main or south-west line was opened to Salem, making a continuous line of 207 miles from Madras. On the 12th of March the first section of the western end of the line was opened from Beypoor to Tiroor, 18 miles in length; and a further opening of 14 miles in the same direction to the Thoota river was to have taken place about the middle of last month. By the end of June it was expected that a further opening to Coimbatore would make the length open from Beypoor 104 miles. There would then remain only the intermediate space, 80 miles, between Coimbatore and Salem, to complete the main line from Madras on the east coast to Beypoor on the west coast, a total distance of 405 miles, which the chief engineer thought might be opened throughout for traffic towards the latter part of the present year. The open portion of the line was reported to be in good order. The renewals of sleepers, keys, and trenails had further increased, being at the rate of 22 per cent., as against 17 per cent. in the previous half-year. At this rate of decay the replacement of the original country wood sleepers would in no long time be effected, and the cost of maintaining the line would then only be reduced to a normal level. The chief engineer was of opinion that the greatest advantage was to be expected from the use of iron sleepers. The excess in first cost of the iron sleeper road was unimportant compared with its eventual economy in maintenance. The Board continued to supply iron sleepers as well for original construction as for replacing decayed wooden sleepers where required. The first section of the Bangalore branch was expected to be ready for the permanent way in six months. The main difficulty on this line was the cutting in the Saidanoor Pass, where the unhealthiness of the locality and scantiness of the population presented serious obstacles to obtaining the requisite labour. On the Salt-cotaur branch the earthwork had been completed from the junction with the main line to the station ground, and also that of the entire branch line to the salt platform. The first section of the north-west line, 18 miles from the Arcoonum Junction to Nagerry, was opened for traffic on the 12th of March. Beyond this station the works in this district were expected to be completed by July next. The passenger traffic on the 137 miles for the half-year amounted to £549 for first-class passengers, to £752 for second-class, and to £15,810 for third-class passengers—total, £17,111, against £14,357 for the corresponding half of 1859. The entire number of passengers carried during the past year was 887,452, of which 875,506, or 98½ per cent. nearly, were of the third class, at a fare of one farthing a-mile. The goods traffic for the half-year amounted to £13,189, against £9,569 for the corresponding half year of 1859. Notwithstanding the increased tonnage passing over the line, a large traffic still went by the common road, which the directors state must eventually fall to the railway. The total receipts for the half-year ending the 31st of December, 1860, amounted on the 187 miles for coaching to £19,040, for goods and materials to £17,786, and for rents and telegraph to £130—total, £36,956. The expenses amounted to £29,223, including £10,087 for maintenance of way, leaving the net receipts £7,034. For the corresponding half of 1859 the total receipts on ninety-six miles amounted to £31,837, the total expenses to £17,399, including £5,232 for maintenance, leaving a net balance of £14,438. The receipts for carriage of railway materials formed twelve and-a-quarter per cent. of the gross receipts for the half-year. The receipts per train mile during the past half-year amounted to 8s. 10d., and the cost to 3s. 0½d. The receipt per passenger carried was 9½d., and per ton of goods 6s. 4½d. The capital account to the 30th of June, 1860, in India, and the 31st of December last in England, showed that £4,305,115 had been expended on the south-west and north-west lines.

BANQUET TO LORD ELGIN.—On Wednesday, the 8th, the Lord Mayor gave a grand banquet in honour of Lord Elgin's return from China. On the right of the Lord Mayor sat the Earl and Countess of Elgin, the Duke of Somerset, the Marquis of Tweeddale, Lady Mary Fielding, the Earl of Denbigh, the Earl of Leven, the Countess of Courtoun, the Earl of Courtoun, the Countess of Kintore, the Earl of Kintore, Lady A. Churchill, Lord A. Churchill, M.P., Lady H. Vane, Lord Harry Vane, M.P., Lord Wodehouse, the Countess of Rothes, the Hon. G. Waldegrave, Lady Camilla Fortescue, and the Hon. D. Fortescue. On the left of the Lord Mayor were the Duke of Argyll, Lady Caroline Charteris, the Earl of Minto, the Countess of Minto, the Earl of Durham, the Countess of Durham, Lord Henry Lennox, M.P., Lady Charles Wellesley, Lord Ernest Bruce, M.P., Mr. Locker, Lady Charlotte Locker, Lord Mark Kerr, Lady Hope Grant, Lieutenant-general Sir Hope Grant, the Hon. Mrs. Grey, Major-general the Hon. R. Bruce, and the Hon. T. Bruce. The Duke of Somerset responded for the Navy, Sir Hope Grant for the Army, and Colonel Hicks for the Volunteers. The health of Lord Elgin was then proposed by the Lord Mayor, and drunk with enthusiasm. The noble earl, in returning thanks, sketched in a clear and forcible manner the leading events in his two missions to the East. The Duke of Argyll acknowledged the toast to the House of Peers. The Earl of Elgin then gave "The Health to the Lord Mayor," remarking that on the first day of his arrival in Pekin he wrote a letter announcing the fact to Alderman Cubitt, unconscious that that gentleman had been elected chief magistrate of London; and the first intimation he had of his excellent friend having received that well-merited distinction was by afterwards reading in the Times that his own hurried letter from the Chinese capital had been posted in front of the Mansion House.

SPOILS FROM DELHI.—Under this heading a curious collection of articles, said to have belonged to an officer who was at the siege of Delhi and presented the King's throne to her Majesty, was disposed of last Wednesday by Mr. Plews, at the sale rooms, 21 Old Bond-street. A great number of the lots consisted of native dresses, which had belonged to leading personages among the Hindoos, and although the colours were exceedingly gay, and the workmanship and silver lace of a very beautiful description, yet from the diminutive size of the original owners, they were chiefly purchased for the value of the ornaments. Some of the dresses, said to have been those of Hindoo boys and girls, would not have been large enough for many an English doll. A great many of the articles enumerated in the catalogue were not disposed of, the owner having attached a very high reserve price to them. Among those sold was a coat, with a rich bullion border, and crimson trousers, highly ornamented, formerly worn by the King of Delhi, which fetched only £18. A pair of Mahomedan flags, one purple satin and one green, used by the enemy during the siege, were sold for £13. 10s. The Mahomedan flag, or sacred standard, taken from the palace of the King of Delhi, most beautifully worked in green satin and silver stars, and under which the oath of rebellion was said to have been taken, was reserved, as also was the celebrated relic shirt, described in the catalogue as follows:—"Many Mahomedan nations of India have an idea that before Mahomed the Prophet left this earth he distributed his shirts to the hands of his faithful followers, and with his own hands wrote portions of his sacred writings on them, telling them that, in the event of necessity, disasters, &c., if the shirt was worn and prayers offered it would avert the evil. The shirt was found in the palace, and is believed by Mahomedans to be the one belonging to the House of Timour." This was a most valueless looking object, but a very high reserve price had been fixed by the owner, and no doubt there are places in the world where enthusiasm would greatly enhance its worth.

THE EAST INDIAN RAILWAY COMPANY at their annual meeting on the 30th April, agreed to empower their Board to raise £20,000,000 by debentures at 5 per cent. convertible into stock at the option of the holder. The amount actually required, however, is only £3,000,000, of which two-thirds will be raised in the present, and the remainder in the following year. The other three millions are for the Jubbulpore and Allahabad line, the construction of which is indefinitely deferred. The directors have since notified that they are prepared to receive subscriptions for £2,000,000 of the new capital authorised at that meeting. £1,000,000 will be raised in 5 per cent. debentures for five years, renewable for a second term, at the option of the holder, and also convertible into shares after the expiration of twelve months; and the remaining £1,000,000 will be issued in £20 shares. The option of subscribing for the shares is at present limited to the shareholders, but the debentures are offered to the public.

CHINA AND JAPAN STEAM NAVIGATION COMPANY.—A prospectus has been issued of the China and Japan (Coast and River) Steam Navigation Company, with a capital of £300,000 in £10 shares, of which only half is to be raised in the first instance. The experience of the management of new steam companies has of late years not been favourable, but there can be no doubt that a great field exists in the quarter indicated, supposing the idea of economical administration to be not altogether hopeless. It is intended to commence with the construction of six vessels, and to "limit the operations of the company until experience shall have proved in what way they can be best extended."

DISCONTINUANCE OF SECOND MONTHLY MAIL TO PENANG, SINGAPORE, AND CHINA.—The Second Monthly Mail to Penang, Singapore, and China, viz., that now despatched via Southampton on the 20th and via Marseilles on the 26th of the month, will be discontinued after the month of June next. Commencing with July, therefore, the mails for Penang, Singapore, and China will only be forwarded via Southampton on the 4th and via Marseilles on the 10th of each month. By command of the Postmaster-General, ROWLAND HILL, Secretary. General Post-office, 11th May, 1861.

CANTON PRIZE MONEY.—(Royal Hospital, Chelsea, May 9.)—Notice is hereby given, that the distribution of the prize money for the capture of the city of Canton on the 28th and 29th of December, 1857, to the land forces present at the said capture (including those portions of the Royal Marine Artillery and Light Infantry serving on shore) under the command of Major-gen. Sir G. T. van Straubenzee, K.C.B., will commence at my office on Wednesday, the 22nd inst., to those entitled, and will be continued daily (except on Mondays and Thursdays) during the hours of 11 to 2 o'clock. The following are the regiments, &c., entitled to share, viz.:—General Staff and Medical Staff Corps, Royal Artillery, Royal Engineers, 59th Regiment, acting Military Train, 38th Madras N.I., Royal Marine Artillery, and Royal Marine L.I., who served on shore under the Major-gen. commanding.—London Gazette, May 10.

UNIVERSAL LIFE ASSURANCE SOCIETY,

No. 1, KING WILLIAM STREET, E.C.

Established under Special Act of Parliament in 1834.

The TWENTY-SEVENTH ANNUAL GENERAL MEETING of this Society was held on the 8th instant.

The progressive improvement in the Society's business enabled the Directors to declare the sum of £204,537. 2s. 7d. as the profits for the last Five Years, one-fifth of which is divisible among the Policy and Shareholders, in the proportion of three-fourths to the former and one-fourth to the latter. The Directors have, however, restricted the actual division to the sum of £39,528. 18s. 8d., which still affords the large reduction of 45 per cent. from the Premiums of all Policies entitled to participate in the profits, being 5 per cent. in excess of the reduction of last year. The effect of this reduction upon the interests of Policyholders will be understood by stating that the Premium in 1861 upon a Policy for £1,000 effected in 1856 on the life of a person aged 40 would be reduced this year from £31. 10s. to £17. 6s. 6d., and others in proportion.

Yielding Annual Premiums of ... .. 6,183 3 11
Policies have been issued since 1834 for ... 6,461,652 14 11
The claims paid since 1834 amount to the sum of ... .. 1,106,596 3 8

"Looking at the book as a work of art, there is a brilliancy of colour about it that would charm a pre-Raphaelite. His book is pregnant with ideas as well as facts, and the style so attractive that it cannot fail to allure general readers as well as those who take a special interest in Japan."—Literary Gazette.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

THE Bombay Mail of the 27th April is chiefly interesting by reason of a telegram from Calcutta which announces the publication of the Amalgamation order in the Government Gazette of the preceding day. The information thus received amounts to little more than the bare enunciation of the circumstance; but to those who have so long been kept in anxious suspense as to the intentions of Government concerning them, it will be a great relief to know that in a week hence their doubts will be solved, their fears dispelled. The arrangements, we are told, are equitable, and this much might fairly have been anticipated. Further than this we merely learn that no examination will be required of officers at present holding commissions in the native army preparatory to entering the general Staff Corps, and that all native regiments will gradually be organised on the irregular system. Incidentally, indeed, we gather that the question of bonus to retiring officers has been referred to the Secretary of State, with the recommendation that instead of the £50 a-year originally proposed, £100 should be offered to all who may retire within a limited period. It is likewise stated that fourteen native infantry regiments, both regular and irregular, will be entirely disbanded, and that all the so-called "levies" will be swept off at one fell swoop. The reduction will comprise 25,000 men, and nearly 300 officers—to use a French phrase—will be placed en disponibilité. Of the latter some will probably find their way into line regiments, and not a few may be expected to retire should Lord Canning's suggestion as to the Bonus be adopted by the Home Government. To the native commissioned officers small grants of rent-free land will be made, and they will also be allowed to retain their swords and medals and the much-prized privilege of being seated in the presence of British officers.

The same system of retrenchment is being applied on the water as on the dry land. The Bengal marine, for instance, is cut down from fourteen vessels to only one. The establishment of 1,289 men and officers dwindles away, in consequence, to about 50, and an annual expenditure of £10,000 will replace an outlay of £135,000. In short, the various reductions in the course of immediate accomplishment will save the State a million sterling per annum without in any way impairing the efficiency of the public service.

We would ask the special attention of our readers to the account of the grand durbar, at which Lord Canning received the deputation from the Talookdars of Oude. The contrast between the flowery, inflated declamation of the native chiefs, and the firm, incisive, almost haughty language of the Viceroy is very remarkable. His Excellency was evidently not disposed to mince matters, or to allow the deputation to imagine that they were the representatives of feudatories dependent only in name. They spoke of their chosen Queen—"who rides upon the heavens"—and of themselves as being aided by the British troops in restoring order in the distracted province of Oude. From the lips of Maharajah Maun Sing, their spokesman, this way of putting the case must have sounded very like an impertinence. The Viceroy, however, sternly reminded them that swift punishment had overwhelmed the guiltiest among them, but that mercy had been shown to those who submitted, while favours had been showered upon the few who had remained true to their allegiance. His Excellency's speech can hardly fail to produce an excellent effect throughout India.

The famine is still undiminished, nor is there any hope of a sensible abatement of suffering for some months to come. The price of grain, however, had slightly fallen in anticipation of a favourable harvest, and it was thought that the fall would be maintained.

The Sikkim force is broken up. The Royal Artillery return to Calcutta via Rajmahal, and the native troops to their several stations. H.M.'s 6th and 19th Regiments remain at Sinchul. The 3rd Sikhs proceed to the Punjab, and of the rocket tubes and guns some go to Benares and others to Fort William, while Murray's Sappers and Miners are to be employed to make the road towards the Teesta.

Sir William Denison was about to proceed to Calcutta on a visit to the Governor-general. It appears certain that the seat of government will be removed from Madras to the Hills.

The Governor of Bombay, with the Commander-in-Chief, and the Bishop of the Diocese, was at Mahableshwar. There is some talk of the provinces of Malabar and Canara being annexed to the Bombay Presidency, an arrangement decidedly beneficial to all concerned in it. The railway line from Kurrachee to Kotree is now completed and will shortly be opened for public traffic.

BENGAL.

THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL'S DURBAR.

Viewed as a spectacle, the viceregal durbar held in Government-house on Tuesday night must be pronounced a failure. Every effort had evidently been put forth to make it imposing. The large hall was brilliantly lighted. A military band was in attendance. A European regiment was drawn up in the vestibule to add dignity to the scene. Of the great officers of State who crowd the capital few were absent. From the meanest native servant to the Member of Council almost every official sparkled in livery or uniform. Some forty of the native gentry of Oude and Calcutta were present, arrayed in garments which were generally fantastic, seldom imposing. Preceded by bearers with peacock feathers and ornamented fans—the Indian substitutes for sceptre and mace—and followed by the Commander-in-chief, Members of Council, and a crowd of undistinguishable aides-de-camp, secretaries and under-secretaries, the Governor-general walked up the hall in a procession which lacked all the elements of stateliness. Among some three hundred European gentlemen sweating under heavy uniforms of all shapes, from the bishop's gown to the judge's robes, and some forty native gentlemen unaccustomed to chairs, yet forced to sit on them, unused to stockings, yet resigned to wear them, the only personage in the assemblage who manifested a seriousness or dignity in keeping with its objects was Lord Canning. He looked every inch a king, and filled, as we have so often given him credit for filling, the office of her Majesty's representative with power and grace. Otherwise the whole durbar was a ludicrous fusion of Oriental and English manners, the natives striving to accommodate their conduct to their ideas of European etiquette, the English making an attempt to ape the pompous ceremonial and barbaric splendour of an Eastern Court. Calcutta is no place for a durbar, unless the Anglicised baboos of Bengal alone are to be received. Amid the palaces of Lucknow, under the walls of Delhi, or encircled by the associations of Lahore, an English Governor-general may make a durbar imposing. But the failure of Tuesday should prevent us from again receiving the nobility of India in an English city. It was not so that the Roman Senate accepted the offerings of distant kings, and sent them back to their savage wilds impressed with a sense of the majesty, the glory and the power of the "populus." The talookdars of Oude may tremble at our armies but they must despise our capital city. Till, like Jungh Bahadoor and Dhuleep Singh, the princes of India can visit London, they should not be received in open durbar in Calcutta.

But if the durbar was a failure as a spectacle it was important as the occasion of a great political demonstration. If the address of the Talookdars of Oude to Lord Canning was a genuine Oriental effusion, it must be considered a remarkable document. In language of unmistakable boldness it condemned the policy of 1856, which, by dispossessing the ancient proprietors of the soil, caused the rebellion of Oude. It expatiated on the importance to any country of a class of wealthy landholders who so long as they are loyal can never be dispossessed; it traced all the present peace and prosperity of Oude to the very reforms for which every European in India has long been agitating—the tenure of the soil in perpetuity, the legal exercise of those rights of self-government which property confers. The expression of attachment to "our beloved Queen" came strangely from the lips of Maun Singh, a man who two years ago was in arms against her authority. We believe it to be as sincere as the words of a conquered and alien Asiatic chief can for the moment be. The reply of the Viceroy of India was still more emphatic and explicit. It will rank as the most remarkable of that series of durbar addresses which, beginning at Cawnpore in 1859, have created a new native policy for India. The manner of the Governor-general was still more impressive than his words. With arms crossed and haughty bearing he looked down from the dais on the subject talookdars. As in sketching the eventful history of Oude during the last six years, he reminded them of the invincible power of England, his voice rose high, and his right arm waved gesticulatingly. Nor did he omit to take advantage of the presence of so many Europeans around him, indirectly to justify his policy, as he did at Rajmahal and before the Senate of the University. He closed his address with these words:—"The continued success of England's Government, as it is now administered in Oude, will be a standing proof that, in spite of bygone animosities, and of the broadest differences of race, religion, and social usage, a generous and trustful rule is the surest way to make a loyal and dutiful people." Noble words! But little more than words so long as the Government of India practically does its utmost to perpetuate and widen these differences of race, religion, and social usage. The truly generous and trustful rule is that which, by an open and frank Christian policy, strives "to gather together in one the children of God that are scattered abroad."—Friend of India.

TEA CULTIVATION.

Tea cultivation seems destined to occupy the same position in the north of India as indigo planting does or did in Bengal, though we hope it is not fated to suffer from such a combination against it by the ryots as the indigo interest has of late. All the members of the local Government, who are something more than mere animated lumps of prejudice, are gradually awaking to the vast importance of inducing English settlers and English enterprise and capital to find their way to India; some of them who are, and always have been, in advance of the rest, such as Sir R. Montgomery and Mr. Edmonstone for instance, have all along seen clearly the advantages of encouraging and fostering the growth of an influential independent European community, instead of taking every possible measure to disgust and bully and insult, and drive them out of the country. The stone has, however, now been set rolling; and though we are not so foolishly sanguine as to expect a sudden change—an instant removal of existing evils from the new impulse that will be shortly communicated to commerce in India, and from the changes in the administration that will necessarily accompany the influx of English capital—we are quite certain that all this will prove the beginning of the regeneration of the country, and ten or twenty years hence those of us who are alive to compare notes and talk over old times, will raise a laugh when they relate how things were managed in India but a short ten years back.

The extent to which money is to be made in this country is absolutely incalculable; and what the ordinary branches of commerce fail to do in stirring the latent energies of the people it is very certain will be effected some day, probably before very long, by the sudden discovery of gold fields; for the precious metal is known to exist in many places, and probably in as large, if not larger, quantities, than in California or Australia.

Our attention, however, at present is directed to tea cultivation, having just received Dr. Jamieson's report on the present conditions and progress of the Government tea plantations in the North-West Provinces, dated January 27th, 1861, in the Supplement to the Government Gazette, No. 330 B., dated 18th March, 1861.

These reports have reached us just as we had finished the perusal of the last book on China, by Captain Sherard Osborn, C.B., of the Royal Navy, in which, while dealing with the subject of the Past and Future of British relations with China, he gives a good deal of information about the tea among other branches of trade.

The out-turn of tea this year in the Government plantations of the North-West, owing to the drought, has not been so good as formerly; still the result is very satisfactory, the total out-turn being 70,210 lbs., of which 16,000 lbs. have been sent home to the Secretary of State, in order to show capitalists in England the kinds of tea produced in the Government factories.

In addition to this out-turn of tea, the estates have yielded 117 tons or 3,290 maunds of seed; of this 2,057 maunds have been distributed gratis to different planters in Kamaon, Gurhwal, Deyra Doon and Kangra. Upwards of 4,500,000 seedlings have also been distributed gratis to private planters.

The number of tea plantations belonging to private individual companies, &c., which have sprung into existence lately, is perfectly extraordinary. In Kumaon and Gurhwal there are no less than ten different plantations. In Deyra Doon twelve, besides the Deyra Doon Company's; and besides seven smaller plantations belonging to natives, that are, we are told, in admirable order, and being worked with energy and vigour.

In the Pinjore valley the Maharajah of Puttiala has an estate, and at Simla General James and Major Goad are at work, and north of Simla, Mr. Berkely. In the Kangra valley we have a list of ten, besides the Hotta plantation, and that belonging to the Nassau Company; part of the Hotta plantation was waste land purchased from Mr. Atherton, C.S., for 30,000 rupees. This waste land was given to Mr. A. by Government to establish a Christian colony in, but the Christians "seeing the heavy work before them on the waste land, decamped, and left the proprietor without labourers."

The extent to which tea cultivation is extending is evident from the few details selected from the report.

Dr. Jamieson, in concluding, alludes (and it is cheering to find a servant of Government speaking out his convictions like an honest man, and not keeping them to himself as too many do, like little boys when they first go to school, who would as soon think of swallowing a live dragon, tail and all, as speak to the schoolmaster) to the very injurious result of the restrictions lately put upon officers in the services with regard to embarking in profitable speculations. He says, the Governor General's order permitting officers to hold lands anywhere out of their presidency gave a great impetus, which has been damped by the communication of the Secretary of State. He adds, it has fallen very heavily on officers who, through agents, had taken up land for tea cultivation, and will do so much more heavily if carried out. The Penal Code, however, unless altered or explained away, does much more mischief than the Secretary of State, or rather completes it; making it a criminal offence to hold property under the conditions laid down by the Secretary of State.

As we have elsewhere said, we hope this matter will be cleared up, and the foolish, illiberal and unfair strictures be removed.

Dr. Jamieson rates his tea when sold at 1-8 per lb. He does not tell us what it cost him to make it. We expect not less than 8 or 10 annas per lb., including all charges.

A few facts about the China trade may not be uninteresting.

The tea, that in England, after being adulterated, as Captain Osborn says, with every abomination under heaven, is sold at 2s. 10d. and 3s. a pound, sells on the spot where it is produced at 3d. The other 2s. 6d. goes into the hands of the tea merchants, and thus they are enabled, as Captain Osborn says, to allow a partner to retire from business every five years or so with a fortune of from £50,000 to £100,000.

In 1859 England imported 55,000,000 lbs. of tea, an increase on the former year of near 30,000,000 lbs. In the same year 1859 the United States carried off 23,250,000 lbs. Yet this trade is so elastic that for all this huge consumption the countless myriads of Chinese who all consume tea, "never missed their usual beverage" (p. 98), an assertion which we give on Captain Osborn's authority—no doubt perfectly true, but difficult of proof. But, besides this amount exported by sea, the Siberian trade has increased within the last ten years 57 1/2 per cent. In 1850 ten millions of lbs. were exported by the land route from the north-west provinces of China: these teas are of the very best quality, for such only pay the cost of land carriage.

We believe it will be very long before the Indian tea finds a ready market in England; it will not need to do so. For years to come there will be demand enough for the supply in India itself. And as the habit of tea-drinking spreads, as it is certain to do, among the natives, the demand will increase so as to exceed rather than limit the supply. To drive the China tea out of the English market the India tea producers must undersell it, and that they cannot do, at any rate, now. Of course a good quantity may always find a ready sale, but we are speaking of a consumption, like that of China tea, of many millions of pounds annually.

We do not believe the Indian tea manufacturers could afford to sell their tea at anything like the low figure the Chinese do, as we are told by Captain Osborn—viz., 3d. a pound on the spot. As we said before, it costs, including everything, in this country nearer 8 annas a pound; but of this, packing in wood and tin is probably a heavy item. It is obvious, however, that tea must be produced and manufactured at a steadily-decreasing figure, that is, till a certain limit is reached. All our tea plantations are new affairs of yesterday, compared to the Chinese; and in reckoning the price of tea, the price of land, and the money laid out in clearing, cultivation, rearing the shrub, &c., must be taken in. After the plantations and factories have been at work some time this item will diminish, and continue to diminish yearly till nothing more will have to be reckoned up as the price of a pound of tea than an infinitesimally small amount of the labour bestowed upon it. Tea will eventually be made at the plantations for 2 annas a pound.—Delhi Gazette.

MISCELLANEOUS.

TUMLOONG.—One of the conditions of the new settlement with Sikkim is that a road through the country should be constructed. The advantages of having such a road are obvious. The Sikkim Government have agreed to make the portion between the Teesta and the Thibet Frontier, provided the Government construct the portion between the River Runjeet and the Lingsing Ghaut on the Teesta. Mr. Eden is very anxious that as so much has already been done on this road, the portion remaining between Namchie and Lingsing Ghaut should be constructed at once, and has suggested to Government the expediency of employing the local sappers and miners on this work. Pending a reply, Mr. Eden has requested Colonel Gawler to direct the immediate employment of every available man of the corps on this piece of the road. If they commence at once, aided by the park coolies and Lieutenant Beavan's party, very much of the worst part of it might be finished before the whole of the troops leave the Sikkim territory. As the field force will probably be broken up as soon as it arrives, Lieutenant Beavan's party will be considerably weakened. It will, perhaps, therefore be better that the worst parts of the road should be commenced on first. The Khan-sama and his son, who are the last of the Rinchingpoon prisoners, are now on their way from Bootan and should arrive soon. The Dalimkote Sobah has replied to the Sikkim Government's demands for the fugitive criminals, to the effect that on receipt of orders from his Government he will make them over. The Paro Penlow, who is in fact the supreme authority on this side, says he has given necessary orders, and in the meantime the Dalimkote Sobah must have received our envoy's letter, urging him to comply with the requisition from Sikkim, and the special envoy hopes, therefore, that these men will also have been surrendered by the middle of next week. The Rajah of Sikkim, the other day, sent to Mr. Eden, the son-in-law of the late Dewan Namgyal, and requested that he would keep him as a hostage for the surrender of the fugitives, as it was through the connivance of himself and relatives that they escaped from Sikkim.—Englishman.

Mr. J. C. WILSON, C.B., who distinguished himself by his efforts to suppress the mutiny of 1857, and subsequently went to New Zealand, in a letter to the Englishman describes his success as a farmer in Canterbury, and contrasts it with the encouragement held out to European capitalists in India. "In the year 1852 I had resolved to remain in the Bengal Civil Service so long as my health would permit, and then to retire to the Province of Kumaon; but about that time I discovered that the interference which is absolutely necessary on the part of the governing power, when the condition of Asiatics is to be bettered and improved, was death and destruction to an Anglo-Saxon settler, and that the same laws could not with any prospect of success be brought to bear upon the deep scheming child of intrigue and lies, and the open, honest child of truth, and hence I turned my thoughts towards New Zealand."

HOWRAH VOLUNTEERS.—The European residents of Howrah, now a great railway town, have established a Volunteer Rifle Corps, under the Magistrate, Mr. T. Prinsep. As the corps is 57 strong, it will have an independent organisation, and will not be required, as in Serampore, to be a part of the Calcutta regiment. Within the last ten years Howrah has increased with true colonial rapidity. The railway employes alone could raise a corps of a hundred men, but many of them are frequently absent on duty on the line. The erection of a bridge over the Hooghly below Chandernagore will check the prosperity of Howrah as well as of Serampore and Bally. But there is little prospect of that bridge for some years to come.

GOITRE.—Mr. Hamilton, Benares opium agent, submits to the Board of Revenue a communication on the cure of goitre. This disease is very prevalent in Goruckpore. The late Major Holmes used biniodide of mercury with great success. Mr. Nicholson, sub-deputy agent, has been in the habit of dispensing it to the diseased, and almost all the cases that he watched were successful. It is only where the goitre is old and very large that a second application of the biniodide is required.

NATIVE TESTIMONIAL TO MR. WINGFIELD.—The Oudh Gazette states that the Talookdars have subscribed nearly a lakh of rupees for a memorial of Mr. Wingfield, the retiring Chief Commissioner. As Mr. Wingfield will soon return to India, the subscribers must obtain the sanction of Government, if the memorial is to be public.

MISSIONARIES WANTED.—Captain Magrath, Superintendent of Hill Tribes, Chittagong, lately applied to the Church Missionary Society to establish a Mission among the tribes. He describes them as sturdy, independent men, without caste-prejudice or bigotry. Similar applications from Darjeeling and Cachar have recently been made, but the committee have been obliged to decline them, and to contract their operations among the Sonthals. This is a mistake. For every Missionary sent to the Hindoos or Mahomedans two should be sent to the aboriginal tribes. We are glad to learn that the society is likely to receive an annual grant from Government of Rs. 12,000 for their educational Mission among the Sonthals.

DEATH OF MR. JAMES MACKENZIE.—We (Englishman) are sorry to notice among the many recent deaths that of James Mackenzie, of Sulkeah, formerly the editor of the John Bull, the original of this paper. The deceased gentleman was a man of considerable ability, and his editorial career was decidedly a successful one. He was afterwards engaged for some time in commercial pursuits, and was also at the head of the Marine Department, in which positions he earned the respect and esteem of all who knew him. He died at Sulkeah at the advanced age of seventy-two years, on the morning of the 27th of March, and was buried the same evening at Howrah.

MAJOR S. BLAINE, H.M.'s 52nd Foot, has been appointed an Aide-de-camp on the personal staff of his Excellency the Governor-general, in succession to Capt. the Hon. J. C. Stanley, Grenadier Guards, proceeded to Europe, and resigned.

SIR A. DE H. LARPENT's appointment by Mr. Grant as Secretary to the Calcutta Income-tax Commission is said to have been cancelled by the Home authorities.

OPIMUM SALE.—The following are the particulars of the opium sale held at the Exchange rooms April 10:—

	Chts.	Highest	Lowest	Average	Proceeds
Behar ...	1230	2500	2485	2492 1 51	80,40,350
Benares. 600	2430	2415	2421 11 14		13,56,150

INCURSION OF KOOKIES.—We are likely to be again engaged in a petty war with the Kookies, the hill tribe on the skirts of Chittagong, as the one which we had with them appears not to have given a sufficient lesson, so as to make them respect the rights of our subjects. The Kookies in great number, said to be one thousand strong, came down in some three or four bodies, and simultaneously attacked and burned some ten or more villages, taking on their way back to their homes nearly one hundred, and killing as many.

GENERAL D'ORGONI.—A case came before the Calcutta Small Cause Court on the 9th April, in which the defendant was General D'Orgoni, who represented himself as Commander of the King of Ava's troops and first Minister at his Court, and the plaintiff a French carpenter in the service of the general. The charge was that the defendant had, in October, 1859, while at Mandalay, struck the plaintiff and kept him in stocks for seventeen days. The damages were laid at two hundred and fifty rupees. The defendant pleaded non-jurisdiction in the Court, not guilty, and justification under the law of Ava. The judge said there was jurisdiction over the defendant in the Court, and though there was legal authority for the imprisonment there was none for the striking on the part of General D'Orgoni. Judgment was given for the plaintiff.

MAHARAJAH JUDONATH BHUNG, of Mourbhunge, in Cuttack, petitioned Government that during the late disturbances he displayed conspicuous loyalty to the State and preserved peace in his own territory. He regularly furnished contingents for the protection of the treasury and station of Chyabassa on the breaking out of the mutiny of the Ramghur battalion in that district, and he promptly attended to all requisitions made upon him by the local authorities. Both the superintendent of Tributary Mahals and the Commissioner of Chotah Nagpore expressed their opinions that he was sincerely loyal, and that his conduct throughout the disturbances was creditable to him. Mr. Cockburn recommended that the title of Maharajah Dhiraj Bahadur and a khilut should be bestowed upon him, as a suitable acknowledgment of his meritorious services. The Governor-general has approved of the recommendation.

BENGAL MARINE.—In looking through the official papers connected with the reduction of the Bengal Marine, we (Englishman) perceive that the recommendation of the Finance Commission to discharge the establishments of thirteen of the sea-going ships, which has been acted upon, effects an immediate saving to the revenue of eleven lakhs of rupees a year; and as the Bentick and Armenian are not included in the above number, a further saving has been effected by placing the former vessel "in ordinary," and selling the latter. Government should now lose no time in carrying out the reduction of the Indian navy, which has been ordered from England; and the saving effected by that measure, added to that above noticed, will relieve the Exchequer of a drain to the amount of one million sterling. These are large measures of economy, worthy the attention of commissions and statesmen.

THE POLICE COMMISSION has brought to the notice of Government that there are a number of surplus officers in the present military police of the North-Western Provinces, whom it may be difficult to provide for under that Government, and whom it may be inconvenient or undesirable to discharge from police employment; but the Commission remarked that whilst this surplus of officers exists in the North-West Provinces, the Punjab authorities are in want of officers to aid in the organisation of the new constabulary. Under these circumstances, they suggest whether the transfer could not be made from the N. W. Provinces to the Punjab, in order to equalise the requirements of both these Governments, instead of making fresh nominations to the police under the Government of the Punjab.

MAJOR H. E. L. THULLIER, of the Bengal Artillery, as surveyor-general of India, and superintendent of the Revenue Survey Department, is to draw a fixed monthly staff salary of rupees fifteen hundred, and Major J. T. Walker, of the Bombay Engineers, as Deputy and Revenue surveyor general of India, rupees thirty hundred.

IRON IN NIMAR.—Major Keatinge, Superintendent of Nimar, reports on the progress of the iron mines at Burwai, in that district. He visited Germany and Sweden to collect information on the subject, and last November he brought out a young Swedish gentleman, Mr. Mitander, to act as manager of the mines. Five old mines have been opened out. The Nandia mine is the largest. About 100 tons of ore have been raised of good quality. The excavation is about 50 feet long, 20 wide, and 25 deep. The ore contains 33 to 47 per cent. of iron.

AUDIT DEPARTMENT.—On the departure for Europe of Colonel J. C. Hannington, officiating Military Auditor General, in consequence of a recent attack of illness, his place in the audit department will be temporarily filled by Major W. S. Ferris, first examiner in that department. Major Ferris's promotion is well deserved, his long standing in the audit office, added to actual service on various occasions in independent charge of field pay accounts, entitling his claims to high consideration. Mr. Hollingberry, the late registrar of the same office, and now a member of the Civil Finance Commission, has been succeeded by Mr. A. J. Sturmer, who was lately in charge of the bill department.

THE CAWNPORE MASSACRE.—A correspondent, writing from Cawnpore, informs the Friend of India that there has just been discovered a great number of European skeletons in a trench on the western side of the "Subadah Kotee," all huddled together, some eighteen inches below the surface. They were dug up, and placed in coffins. Forty-nine skulls, with numerous bones and bits of clothing, buttons, &c., have been already collected, and decently interred in the grave-yard, but without any funeral ceremony, as the chaplain declined to read the funeral service over the remains. Another sad remembrance of 1857.

BANK OF BENGAL.—The Government of India has just opened an account current with the Bank of Bengal, in the name of the sub-treasurer of Fort William, and placed the sum of ten lakhs of rupees in paper money to his credit. This transaction is a novel thing of the kind. Whether it has been done to accommodate the bank, or is a preliminary step towards the proposed transfer of the Treasury business to the said bank, is a question which time alone can solve.

THE DALHOUSIE INSTITUTE.—The Englishman gives the result of the decisions of the committee on the designs for the Dalhousie Institute. The first prize, of Rs. 3,000, was adjudged to a design sent in by Mr. C. G. Wray, executive engineer, Ramghur division, Hazareebaugh. The second prize, of Rs. 1,000, fell to Mr. W. S. Granville, 7, Harrington-street. A design received from England, marked "Virtus in Arduis," was considered not to have fulfilled the conditions; but as it was in other respects deserving of great credit, an extra prize was awarded for it, to Mr. J. Toner, 38, John-street, Bedford-row.

CORONERS IN THE PUNJAB.—The Justices of the Peace in the Punjab have been constituted coroners for holding inquests in cases of sudden or suspicious deaths among the Europeans, and the Punjab civil authorities have been directed by Government to report on the death of Europeans which may occur within their jurisdiction by other than natural causes.

DR. SYLVESTER, of the Bombay Medical Service, and at present in medical charge of Probyn's Horse, will succeed to the appointment of surgeon to his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief, in the room of Dr. Vaughan, who leaves for another employ.

CAPTAIN ANDERSON, the Revenue Surveyor, has proceeded to the Nepal frontier for the purpose of connecting with his boundary line the forest tracts that Mr. Reva may have demarcated.

WESTERN JUMNA CANAL.—The Governor-general has sanctioned the expenditure of Rs. 1,75,000 for improving the main line of the Western Jumna Canal between Indree and Kurmaul. A large tract of marshy land will be reclaimed, and thousands of starving poor in the neighbourhood will be employed. The canals yield a large revenue.

JEYPORE.—In consequence of the increased pressure of scarcity in the Jeypore territories, dacoities and robberies have spread to such an extent, that special orders have been given to the surrounding rajahs to station bodies of horse upon their borders, to assist in suppressing them.

BHURTPUR.—There have recently occurred some serious disturbances among the Hindoo and Mahomedan populations in Bhurtpoor, in which several lives were lost, arising out of the slaughter of cows by the latter. In consequence of this, order having been restored, Government has prohibited the slaughter of cows in that district.

THE INCOME-TAX.—The Friend of India, which probably derives its information from official sources, states that the produce of the Income-tax for the year ending 31st July next will be approximately as follows:—Bengal, £560,000; Madras, £290,000; Bombay, 310,000; North-West, £340,000; Punjab, £90,000; Pegu, &c., £50,000; Oude, £120,000; salaries and debt, £150,000; total, £1,910,000. From this total will have to be deducted the expenses of collection.

PROGRESS OF THE CINCHONA EXPERIMENT.

Mr. Markham's attempt to introduce the quinine-yielding varieties of the Cinchona plant into India and Ceylon has failed. Of the 270 plants which survived the heat of the Red Sea, not one is now alive. But the experiment has not, therefore, been abandoned. The first attempts of the Dutch in Java, about six years ago, were a failure, and success was only attained by the most painstaking experiments on the part of Youngboon and De Vrij, two eminent naturalists, who analysed each plant that died, with a view to ascertaining what chemical elements were injurious to its growth. Of the plants not one lived, and of the seedlings only one in a thousand survived. It was by carefully watching these that the successful cultivation of the Cinchona was ultimately attained in Netherlands India.

Such is the control exerted by science over nature, that in cold, cloudy England, where such a delicate denizen of the tropics would least be expected to thrive, there are at present in Kew-gardens several thousands of healthy Cinchona seedlings. In Jamaica, too, and other of our West Indian possessions, the introduction of the plant is advancing steadily. When we turn to see what has been done in this country beyond Mr. Markham's experiment, we have reason to congratulate ourselves on the progress that has been made. In February last, Dr. Anderson, the present Superintendent of the Calcutta Botanic-gardens, brought out from England three healthy plants of the Calisaya variety, which are at this moment growing vigorously in the Ceylon-gardens at Peradenia. He also brought with him a considerable quantity of seed which had been received at Kew immediately before he left. This is now divided between the Calcutta-gardens and those of Ceylon and the Neilgherries. The seeds sown in Calcutta have germinated freely, and there is every reason to expect that they will form the nursery from which the hilly parts of Bengal and the ranges of the Eastern Himalayas will be supplied. The sites for Cinchona plantations in the Neilgherries reported upon by Dr. Macpherson, resemble in every material respect those portions of Java and the Andes where the plant thrives best. In the woods of the Neilgherries and Coonoor have been found the ferns with which the plant is sometimes covered in Peru, and many of the forest trees are identical with those found near the plantations in Java. These encouraging facts lead us to conclude that no second expedition to America will be undertaken, and that we need not trouble ourselves with another application to our inhospitable Dutch neighbours. Even should this second experiment fail, the seedlings at Kew, where a large stove has been erected as a Cinchona nursery will put the cultivation in India beyond the chance of failure.

The places where seedlings are now healthily vegetating are the Calcutta, Ceylon, and Ootacamund Botanic-gardens, in Coorg, and in two nurseries in the Neilgherry-hills. We would call the attention of all European settlers in the Hills of India to the cultivation of the Cinchona and the manufacture of quinine. It has by no means been proved that the plant will not flourish on the Himalayan slopes as well as in the Neilgherries. Government would do well to furnish every tea and coffee-planter in the Hills with a few seeds of the Calisaya, and with a statement of the mode and localities of culture and growth. The Agricultural Society of India, and the Societies of Madras, Lucknow, and Lahore, should direct their energies to the subject. The process of extracting quinine from the bark may be too difficult for even European planters, but if once a supply of bark were secured, Government could establish a manufactory at Calcutta or Madras. The failure of Mr. Markham's attempt will not be so much a cause of regret, should his report induce European settlers to enter on the cultivation:—

"I have had conversations with many coffee-planters on the subject, and I think it likely that as soon as they know that the Government experiment has been successful, they will be willing to undertake the cultivation of Cinchona plants on their own account. For this reason it is an advantage that the Government Cinchona nurseries should be in the vicinity of the coffee estates. Should this be the case, the Cinchona would soon be as important an addition to the products of the hills in a commercial point of view as coffee has already become."

Even natives, he believes, would willingly undertake the cultivation. Already coffee is so popular that there is hardly a native hut in the Wynad district which has not a coffee-garden attached to it. But we know there are not a few of the European settlers in India, who have both scientific enthusiasm and intelligence enough to experiment on the growth of the Cinchona for themselves, without waiting for the success of Government. Let the local authorities offer seed in this case, as in that of cotton, and success in the growth of a febrifuge which costs the State £50,000 a-year, will be a fact.—Friend of India.

HYDERABAD, April 2.—A proposal was made to Government for the erection of an electric telegraph along the railway branch to Nagpore, at an estimated cost of about one lac of rupees as the cost of the work. Under the restrictions ordered by the Government of India this expenditure has been deferred, Raichoor Doab and Dharaseo districts have been made over to the Native Government, and fresh treaties concluded. Certain military officers lately applied to the Governor-general that a tract of land in the Hyderabad assigned districts be granted to them for coffee plantations. The viceroy has declined to comply with their request, on the ground that Government servants are not allowed to hold lands in India. We have now renewed transactions, which the minister, knowing the difficulties they would one day produce, had relinquished. The Sohokars, who had made monthly advances to the Nizam's Government for its current expenses, without receiving assignments upon the country, or holding securities of any sort, in expectation that the surplus revenues of the assigned districts would on some future day pay them, have now ceased to make the advances, professing inability, from want of funds, to do so. The Nizam, notwithstanding his promise, made solemnly even to the Resident, to place the restored districts under the charge of the minister for public use, still holds them for his privy purse, and shows no inclination to part with them. The consequence of the Sohokars' refusal to advance any more money has been, under the sanction of the Nizam, a resort to the only other capitalists capable of maintaining the Government for a time, the Arabs. These people, already too powerful as large creditors of the State, will possess predominant power, and will become formidable to the Government and the country. They will exact from the first additional military commands, and bring in a large influx of their countrymen, and they will spread over the whole country with assignments on the revenues in their hands, controlling the Government authorities, and oppressing all. Hyderabad is considered peculiarly dangerous by the English Government, as may be seen in the circumstance of its having a larger force there than in any station in India; and not content with that as its safeguard, from having also fortified its cantonments. The main strength of the Government, I should rather say of the disaffected population, are the Arabs. It cannot be prudent to permit an accession to their numbers, nor to their having liens upon the State which may make it difficult to remove them; or irritate them, in default of their obtaining justice according to their sense of it, to hazarding the issue of a battle. Their courage and their pride will not allow them to submit to what they may consider injustice; and I should not wonder, under present circumstances, if two years more brought this matter to a practical issue. The difficulties—danger I apprehended none to the English Government—which will attend a conflict with this people will produce disorders of no small amount; most probably the entire destruction of the Nizam's capital, for the Arab chiefs occupy and guard all the principal parts of the city. All this may be averted by a simple movement of the Government of India, pointing out to the Nizam the difficulties which his selfishness is bringing upon his allies, and the destruction of his sovereignty as the probable result. Lord Canning has wisely provided that if the measures of an Indian State are calculated to produce disorder, the English Government will think it expedient and necessary to step in and control that Government. I quote his lordship's words—"The proposed measures will not debar the Government of India from stepping in to set right such serious abuses in native Governments as may threaten any part of the country with anarchy or disturbance." At present we may prevent the evil; hereafter we may have to lament the injuries that have been inflicted, and to repair them. In the circumstance that the Arabs can compete, by their inordinate wealth, with the bankers of the country, may be seen the manner in which they have employed their power to acquire wealth; and in the circumstance that one Badden Khan, twice ejected from high offices at the instance of the English Government and proscribed from employment, can dare to insult the Government by proposing to lend it money on condition of being restored to his former combined employments of military commander holding fiefs for the maintenance of his troops, and collection of several districts, may be found the fact how subservient to its pecuniary wants the Nizam's Government is understood to be. His proposals have been rejected, but his expectation evinces the extremity at which the necessities of the Government have arrived.—Englishman.

SUICIDE OF LIEUT.-COL. RUSSELL.—It is with regret we see announced in the Madras Times that Lieut.-Col. Russell, of H.M.'s 3rd Madras Native Infantry, committed suicide, on the 15th of April, at Ootacamund, by shooting himself. Scarcely anything beyond what we have just stated was known in Madras of this sad event; but it was supposed that the delicate state of the unfortunate gentleman's health must have induced a severe depression of spirits, and have led to temporary insanity.

MADRAS IRRIGATION COMPANY.—The Madras Government has brought the unhappy disputes as to the works of the Madras Irrigation Company to a close. Sir W. Denison, himself an engineer officer, has adopted in all important respects the report of Major Orr who was deputed to examine the works, and who has exposed the ignorance and waste of the chief engineer. The Government has sanctioned "the commencement of such of the works as form a scheme complete in itself, and the cost of which is not likely, after making every allowance for contingencies, to exceed the sum for which a guarantee has been allowed, namely, one million sterling." The works which are now to be rapidly carried out are, an Anicut at Sunkasala; 60 miles of canal to the great cutting; the Hindri aqueduct; and so much of the Mettacondal cutting as will bring the canal to the upper gorge above the Somaishwaram. Sir W. Denison unreservedly condemns the imperfect data and untrustworthy estimates on which the works were based. And now, the shareholders will say—whom shall we hang? Sir Arthur Cotton is now on the spot, and will, we trust, do something to retrieve the disaster caused by his brother's ignorance, which Major Orr has so mercifully exposed.—Friend of India.

MYSORE COTTON.—From the official correspondence on the proposed cultivation of cotton in Mysore it is evident that Manchester need not look to that quarter for aid. The cotton used in Mysore is all brought from the Southern Mahratta country and the Bellary Collectorate. The experiment of growing it has been repeatedly tried but has as often failed. The table-land is unfavourable to cotton. The only suitable soil is a patch on the frontier of the Southern Mahratta country, and on this the natives prefer cultivating grain. In Mysore they have plenty of roads and no cotton; in Bombay and elsewhere plenty of cotton and no roads.

CAPTAIN COLBORNE.—The court martial assembled at Ootacamund for the trial of Captain the Honourable John Colborne, H.M.'s 60th Rifles, and of which General Coffin was president, has been dissolved under orders communicated through the telegraph from the Governor-general. The assembling of a court martial at all upon the frivolous charge laid against the prisoner was an error. The reader may remember that Captain Colborne was charged with insulting the sub-magistrate of Ootacamund by forwarding "an old tooth brush" amongst the effects given up by him to satisfy a decree of the civil court, and on this and other charges connected with the same dispute he has been in arrest twelve months.

BOMBAY.

MISCELLANEOUS.

SIR GEORGE CLERK recently invited the children of the Byculla Schools to a tea-party in Government House, where they spent a merry night. A large party was present to witness and promote their enjoyment.

KURRACHEE.—The value of the trade of Kurrachee for 1859-60 was £2,660,088, being an increase on that of the previous year of £75,228. An increase in the import of cotton goods and railway materials raised that part of the trade 10 per cent. There was a decrease in the exports to England and Bombay in oil-seeds, Cashmere shawls, and saltpetre.

ADEN.—A local contemporary told us the other day that Colonel H. G. Robertson was to have the Aden command, and that it was in contemplation to make Aden a lieutenant-governorship. The Aden command is not vacant at present, and in the event of Brigadier Coghlan applying for leave of absence, the acting Residency would probably be held by some experienced officer who has served in Turkey or Arabia. As to Aden becoming a lieutenant-governorship, the idea is of course ridiculous. If we are not misinformed certain reductions are contemplated in the Aden establishment instead of any enlargement of its staff.—Bombay Times.

A WHALE IN THE INDIAN SEAS.—The Bombay Gazette mentions the stranding of a dead whale on the coast of Rutnagherry. The villagers made use of the blubber, and disposed of the bones to a speculator in Bombay. As the bones were being carted through the streets they excited the astonishment of the natives, many of whom insisted that they were not bones, but the machinery of some wrecked screw-steamer. It will be difficult for the student of natural history to account for the presence of a whale in such a latitude, unless it were one of the herbivorous cetacea known as the dugong or halibore common to the Indian Seas. If an ordinary Greenland whale, it may have been struck in the colder latitudes of the south and floated by currents to the Indian coast.

CHOLERA IN SIND.—We regret to learn from the Sindian that cholera is prevalent at Kurra- chee, and in Sind generally. One of its earliest victims seems to have been Mr. John William Shockman, who died at Kurra- chee on the 12th April. The life of this unhappy man has been but too prominently before the public for the last seven years.

DUTY ON MALWA OPIUM.—Some of the opium merchants of Bombay memorialized the Indian Government on the subject of the increased duty lately imposed on Malwa opium, praying that certain notice be given of any future change of duty. The Government replied that no guarantee upon this point could be explicitly given; but the memorialists might feel assured that their wishes, and the view expressed by the Bombay Government, will be carefully kept in mind and fully considered on any future occasion of altering the duty.

JUSTICES OF THE PEACE.—Under the provisions of Act VI. of 1845 the undermentioned gentlemen have been appointed her Majesty's justices of the peace for the town and island of Bombay and its dependencies and are requested to qualify by taking the prescribed oaths:—Captain William Widdicombe, Lieut. Cecil David James Dodd, Lieut. Gregory Colquhoun Grant, Lieut. Francis James Thomas Ross, Commander William Bal- four.

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE.—A special general meeting of the Chamber of Commerce was held on the 18th of April, at noon, in the office of the Chamber, for the purpose of electing a chairman and deputy chairman in the room of G. Hamilton and H. M. Scott, Esqrs., resigned. There were present G. Lord, J. N. Fleming, H. D. Cartwright, J. G. Volkart, R. P. Nixon, H. Scott, R. Latham, A. B. Bogle, C. D. Leggett, W. Sim, W. J. Morgan, W. C. Sillar, T. Bradley, A. F. Wallace, R. A. Robinson, J. Achenbach, H. Somerville, W. T. Roper, J. Bevis, F. A. Palmer, and J. Rich, Esqrs. On the motion of Mr. Volkart Mr. Cartwright was called to the chair. Proposed by A. F. Wallace, Esq., seconded by J. Bevis, Esq., and carried unanimously, "That George Lord, Esq., be selected chairman of the Chamber of Commerce in the room of George Hamilton, Esq., resigned, and that James Nicol Fleming, Esq., be elected deputy-chairman of the Chamber, in the room of Michael H. Scott, Esq., also resigned." Proposed by R. P. Nixon, Esq., seconded by J. Rich, Esq., and carried unanimously, "That the thanks of the meeting be given to Mr. Cartwright for his able conduct in the chair." The meeting then separated.

HIS EXCELLENCY THE GOVERNOR and suite arrived at Mahabeshwar on the morning of Wednesday, the 10th of April.

PIRACY.—The schooner Good Hope, owned by Messrs. Lawrence and Co., of Bombay, and bound to the Kooria Moorla Islands, which sailed in March, was seized by pirates off Cape Fatask; and, after dismantling and breaking up the vessel, the captain and crew were landed and left in a desolate state. The natives, however, treated them with great kindness, but they suffered much from weakness and from privations, and were conducted safely to Muscat, from which place they arrived at Bombay on the 26th of April.

THE REV. G. P. BADGER.—The I. N. steamer Zenobia is under orders to proceed to Aden, touching at Muscat on the way up, and there landing the Rev. G. P. Badger, a member of the Muscat-Zanibar Commission.

MR. R. SPOONER.—A deputation from the subscribers to the testimonial to R. Spooner Esq., waited upon that gentleman with a purse of Rs. 7,000, to be presented to him in token of his valuable services to the mercantile community, but he refused to accept it unless he was permitted by Government to do so. The subscribers, therefore, it is said, intend soliciting the permission of Government to allow Mr. Spooner to receive the present.

MR. F. L. BROWN, who has for many years filled the offices of Chief Clerk at the Fort Police Office and Clerk to the Court of Petty Sessions, has been appointed Third Magistrate of Police in succession to Mr. R. H. Thomas, who retires upon his pension.

BOMBAY UNIVERSITY.—Thirty-nine youths have successfully passed the entrance examination of the Bombay University. Of these twenty are from the Elphinstone College, seven from the Elphinstone School, seven from the Poonah College, two from the Free Church Institution, and one from the Belgaum Sirdar School.

CASTE.—It is stated that the caste men of Rao Saheb Mahiputram Roopram, just returned from England, do not intend to excommunicate him. They, however, demand that he should undergo a certain ceremony named "Desh Paraschit," to purify his body of the influences of the strange clime and country he visited.

THE BOMBAY CRIMINAL SESSIONS recently closed occupied sixteen days, and comprised sixty-one prisoners, being double the number tried last December. Of these twenty-six were Hindoos, seventeen Christians, thirteen Mahomedans, three Chinamen, and two Parsees, their ages ranging from eighteen to fifty years. Thirty seven were convicted and sentenced. Three of these were sentenced to death, but sentence on two of them was afterwards commuted to transportation for fourteen years and for life respectively.

THE BOMBAY VOLUNTEER RIFLE CORPS have elected Colonel G. H. Robertson, C.B., of the 25th N. I., Commanding officer, in place of Colonel North, resigned. The following officers were elected:—Mr. W. C. Sillar, Captain, Mr. A. Langdon, Captain, Mr. J. P. Cornforth, 1st Lieutenant, Mr. J. Blair, 1st Lieutenant, Mr. J. A. Forbes, 2nd Lieutenant, Mr. T. Harding, 2nd Lieutenant. The corps is about one hundred strong. Sir W. Mansfield, the Commander-in-Chief, has expressed his interest in its progress.

MR. W. C. SILLAR, of the firm of Sillar and Co., has been deputed by the Chamber to proceed at once to the cotton districts of the presidency to report upon the practicability of increasing the next season's supply.

MR. ROBERT STRONG, merchant, has been appointed a member of the Income-tax Commission for the town and island of Bombay, vice Mr. Wm. Stevens, proceeded to England.

BOMBAY LAW ASSOCIATION.—At the suggestion of the Chief Justice, Sir M. Sausse, the solicitors and attorneys of the Supreme Court are exerting themselves to form a Law Association on principles similar to the Law Associations at home. A number of attorneys met for the purpose at the Chambers of the Chief Justice on Wednesday, the 24th, when a Committee, consisting of Messrs. Bowyer, Faithfull, Acland, and Bickersteth, was nominated for the purpose of framing rules for the proposed Association, which will be submitted for approval at the next general meeting. It is said that this Association will have the power of trying native candidates as to their fitness for becoming articled clerks to attorneys.

SERVICES OF MAJ. GEN. SIR J. HEARSEY.

Head Quarters, Calcutta, April 10.

The long and brilliant services of Maj. gen. Sir J. Hearsey, K.C.B., comdg. the presidency division, extending over more than half a century, justify the C. in C. in making an exception on the occasion of his departure for England, by according to him the distinction of a special mention in a general order.

Sir Hugh Rose will not detail the numerous actions fought since 1800, in different parts of India, in which Sir John Hearsey took a most distinguished part. His successful charge and defeat of a greatly superior enemy in line, with only a squadron of the 6th Regular Native Light Cavalry, at Seetabuldee, where he was dangerously wounded, was an exploit of rare merit. This and other successes in the field are known throughout the Indian army, and chronicled in its records. Services less known, but of the greatest importance to the Government rendered by Sir John Hearsey, in the early part of the mutiny at Barrackpore, entitle him to the respect and gratitude which are due to an officer who, by his own individual fearlessness and presence of mind at a moment of the greatest danger, political as well as military, saved from anarchy and destruction interests of which the value cannot be overrated.

All rejoiced when H.M. rewarded this good service with the high distinction of the Knight Commandership of the Bath.

The C. in C. sincerely hopes that a general officer, whose career has been marked by never failing devotion to his duty, and success in every operation which he has undertaken, may long enjoy in his native country health and happiness.

GRAND DURBAR AT THE GOVERNMENT HOUSE.

His Excellency the Viceroy and Governor-general held a grand durbar on the 16th of April, especially for the reception of the Talookdars of Oude, whose arrival in Calcutta with Mr. Yule we noticed a few days since. The attendance was very large, and the affair went off most brilliantly, the effect of the assemblage on the entrance of the Viceroy being very striking. Of course, on a special occasion, the whole official world was present. The Commander-in-Chief, the Lieutenant-governor, all the Legislative Council, the Judges of the Supreme and Sudder Courts, the Lord Bishop and the clergy, and every military notable now in Calcutta, were there, and all classes of Europeans were there, well represented by their leading members. By the way, we noted that if the Legislative Council should be extended instead of abolished, and the debates become discursive, the military member of Council possesses in perfection the art of sleeping soundly in a chair without snoring. Sub rosa, even the ladies, who were supposed to have no business there, gave evidence of their presence behind the jilms, and carried out the Eastern character of the scene. Only one element was not in full force; the loyal natives of Calcutta, not seeing their way, we presume, to any immediate advantage to be gained by the exhibition of their loyalty, were not there; only sixteen of the native gentry of Calcutta made their appearance on such an occasion. Whenever they find it convenient to appear in his presence we trust Lord Canning may speak as plainly to them as it will be seen he did to the Talookdars of Oude, though perhaps not so flatteringly.

After the formal presentation, homage, and decoration of the following Talookdars:—Maharajah Maun Singh, Maharaja of Balaunpoor, (Digbijai Singh), Raja Hunwunt Singh of Kalakunkur, Raja of Tiloll and his uncle Baboo Thakoor Prasad, Lal Shunkur Buksh of Khujoorgan, Raja Madhoo Singh of Anettee, Baboo Ujeet Singh of Tirhoul, Raja Fuzund Ali Khan, Raja Goureesunkur and his nephew Baboo Sheo Prasad, Raja Kishen Dutt of Gondou, Syud Bakir Hossen of Peerpoor, Chowdhoree Hushmut Ali of Sundella, Raja Roostum Sah, Chowdhoree Nuwab Ali of Selimpore, Maharajah Maun Singh read to the Viceroy the following address:—

"MY LORD,—We offer thanks first to the merciful and gracious God, the protector of the world and all that dwelled therein, who after causing the evil days to pass, has bestowed on us days of peace. This world (and all that it contains) is a garden created for the enjoyment of God himself the Physician. Whenever cruel rulers waste it like the summer sun by their fierceness, and strip it of its flowers and leaves, then He, through some of his chosen agents, orders the rain of mercy and compassion and makes it green and fresh. Afterwards regards he with fond interest His handiwork, and makes His chosen agents beloved and respected throughout the world. This has been exemplified in the troublous times recently gone by, in which, after innumerable calamities had been inflicted by violent and savage rulers, increased honour and renown came to our chosen Queen, who rides upon the heavens (may her Empire and power endure), and to our Excellency, her representative and our Lord, dear to the hearts of all.

"In truth your Excellency has gained elevated rank and the love of all, and we have obtained an opportunity of showing our gratitude and offering our praises to you.

"My Lord, we not only thank your Excellency for this, that for your benefit, and for the sake of pleasing God, you extinguished your anger and displeasure with compassion and mercy and justly issued in succession advantageous orders; but we are especially grateful for this, that you came in person to Allahabad to issue these orders and to see their faithful execution at all times. For the purpose of carrying out the above measures you selected officers whose appointment was efficacious in every respect, and advantageous to the people. My Lord, that physician alone can attain his object, in whose laboratory there are men who can judge of each disease.

"At that time, in one direction the pile of the fire of rebellion blazed high and consumed the plain of the citizens. On the other side the storm of the troops of the Commander-in-Chief coming in waves to extinguish the fire, turned the whole kingdom into chaos. In that time of struggle the poor people, struck with infatuation, could not protect themselves, but like animals in a forest burning all around them, and neither able to fly nor to remain, were overwhelmed in destruction.

"Praised be the late Chief Commissioner, Mr. Montgomery, and his assistants, Colonel Barrow and Col. Bruce, for their wisdom and prudence. The above officer removed the evil councillors and godless from among the people, through whose influence they were blinded and unable to distinguish friends from foes, and by the help of his assistants above named began to give hope to us half dead through fear. This was the first stage of order and peace.

"To give hope to the patients, a proclamation offering protection of life and property to all who should timely surrender and yield submission to the British Government was issued. This was a cause of confidence, and had such effect that great and small, being saved from the disease of infatuation, were restored to their former state.

"My Lord, in former times on such occasions it was considered right to subdue the people by severe measures. But in truth, God has placed a ruler over his subjects to be a father and mother to his creatures, and as it has been incumbent on the ruler to protect the people, so it is lawful for him, in return for that protection, to levy a revenue from them. But it is not proper for the father to withdraw his affection from his infatuated children and cast them into a sea of displeasure.

"On the departure of Mr. Montgomery, your Excellency, through the excellent appointment of Mr. Wingfield, connected all the arrangements which had been left unfinished, and fulfilled the duties of her Majesty the Queen, who rides on the heavens (may her Empire and power endure!) and the duties of your Excellency's office, whereby you acquired a distinguished name among the wise. We sincerely thank you for the adoption of these measures, the beneficial effects of which were such as we had read of only in history. But, although these measures gave assurance of safety to all, yet it must be remembered that they would not have removed the uneasiness and the ruin which the administration of 1856 had caused, had not your Excellency held out assurance, through Mr. Wingfield, that the rights which they had enjoyed for 800 years, but which were then in abeyance, would be confirmed to them in perpetuity, on a new and secure basis.

"My Lord, as natives of Hindostan, we do not consider our houses our own if the land on which they stand does not belong to us in perpetual right, and we do not look upon the people of the house as our own if we have no control over them. Nothing so much as this could give vigour to our mind and induce us to offer up prayers to the Almighty for the prosperity of the British Government. In following the course they did on these two points, the object of your Excellency's agents above-named was not only to consult our happiness, but also to strengthen the ties of affection which subsist between us and the British Government, and have given stability to our State.

"My Lord, a country may be conquered, and a house may be founded by the sword, but the history of centuries proves that the perpetual stability of that house depends on the love of the people. The present assembly may believe that the work of the sword is to divide, not to unite.

"Wise men consider that the basis of an Empire is strengthened by the ties of affection. Actuated by this consideration, the Emperor Jaulalooddeen Mahomed Akbar, of the house of Timour, followed that course. But it was left incomplete, in order to display the fame of her Majesty the Queen and your Excellency the Viceroy, who has re-established the English power over all India, and especially in Oude, on this foundation, and left a good example to future sovereigns.

"We cannot indeed complain that the former police, judicial, and revenue arrangements were not good; but we can undoubtedly say that the alterations made by your Excellency in these arrangements have proved highly beneficial to the people; and you have shown that the Queen of England is not the sovereign of the English only, but is considered by the natives of Hindostan as God's Vicegerent.

"We shall specify a few of these:—

"1st. There is the talookdare settlement which has not only contributed to remove the fears of the people, but re-established peace, which is only a drop in the ocean of its good effects. On careful observation it will be found that the signs of the contentment of the people, such as the establishment of bazaars, and gardens, the erection of houses and the excavation of tanks and wells were fewer under the former settlement with the Zemindars than in the 33 months of the experiment of the present settlement. The cause is that the former petty Zemindars were not able to spend thousands of rupees on such works, and their income was sufficient only for their maintenance and the costs of suits which they used to bring against each other. By the present arrangement, on the contrary, the Zemindars live in the enjoyment of their petty rights, which are fixed by their respective Talookdars, and have no cause to incur any expense, while the Talookdars, on their part, are bent on improving their States by the construction of works from the profits of their property.

"2nd. The new arrangements which have been made in the Police Department through Colonel Bruce and other officers have not only protected the life and property of the people from the hands of thieves and robbers, but also put an instant stop to bribery. Oh! just ruler, life and property may truly be said to be safe when a man enjoys them without any one's interference.

"3rd. By the arrangements made in the Judicial Department every poor ryot, without incurring expense, without undergoing the trouble of resorting to a court at a distant place, without the intervention of the Amlah, can get his case decided by his own Talookdar, who understands his affairs.

"My Lord, in confirming the aforesaid arrangements, your Excellency has not only established a claim to our lasting gratitude, but has, beyond doubt, furthered the ends of justice.

"The territory of Oude, in freshness and beauty, was beyond comparison with any garden. But for a time, being filled with wild and ravenous beasts, it became a fearful desert. Thanks! a hundred times thanks! to your Excellency the kind and the generous. We are grateful, also, to the officers by whose unremitting exertions this thorny forest has become the envy of the garden. This place your Excellency saw on the 26th October, 1859, when he held a general Darbar at Lucknow. We shall never forget the remarkable day when your Excellency, as Viceroy, surrounded by the civil and military officers, received us, the representatives of the people of Oude, in Darbar.

"Your countenance then glowed with affection for the people of Oude. Blessed! blessed! blessed! be our beloved Queen, who rides on the heavens. Blessed be the day when our victory restored to us those rights which we had enjoyed from time immemorial, but of which we were for a while deprived, and when you thus fulfilled the will of the Almighty who is full of mercy and love for His creatures, and when you conferred on us khillats, and jagheers, and titles, which will descend as signs to our posterity. These presents not only displayed the unbounded generosity of your heart, but made every man desirous of rendering service to the British Government.

"In concluding our address we fervently pray Almighty God to continue to maintain over us the protection of her Majesty and your Excellency, and to dispose the hearts of us and of our descendants to pray, and our tongues to praise, because we can give no other return for all these favours."

His Lordship, then, in most excellent and impressive style, addressed them in reply, and we have seldom heard a more telling speech, or one more effectively delivered than the following, every tone of which filled the great Throne Room with its emphatic earnestness. He said:—

"Talookdars of Oude,—I receive your address with much pleasure.

"I am glad to acknowledge the spirit of loyalty to the Crown, and of attachment to the Government which pervades it.

"I am glad, too, that you have chosen to present it to me here, in the capital of British India, amongst a community of your fellow-subjects to whom you and your province are as yet but little known, and in the presence of the chief officers of the State assembled to receive you.

"You have referred to various incidents in the recent history of Oude. That history has indeed been an eventful one.

"Six years ago Oude was the worst governed country in India. Nowhere were life and property more insecure, or oppression and violence more flagrant.

"Two years elapsed, in the course of which Oude came under British rule, but mutiny and rebellion soon reached the new province and raged in every corner of it.

"Two years more and rebellion had been crushed and peace restored. Sharp punishment swept the guiltiest from amongst you, but mercy remained for those who made submission, and favour for those who were cordial in their allegiance.

"Again, two years and prosperity has followed so closely upon peace, that there is now no part of Hindostan more flourishing, or more full of promise for the future. The ancient system of land tenure has been restored, but has been placed upon a new and clear foundation. The preservation of the great families of the soil has been encouraged and facilitated. The rights of the humbler occupants have been protected. Garrisons have been reduced; police diminished. The country is so tranquil that an English child might travel from one end of it to the other in safety; so thriving that its people have been the most prompt and liberal of all the natives of India in responding to the cry of their famishing brethren of the North-west. While you, who are now the independent magistracy of your province, have already become, although you are the newest of the Queen's Indian subjects, the foremost of them in the practice of self-Government, and in enforcing by your example and authority an intelligent reverence for law and order.

"Such are some of the chief changes, briefly told, which have passed over your country in the last few years; and they present lessons which it behoves you—and not you alone, but your fellow-countrymen of all India—to lay to heart.

"You have seen it proved before your eyes that there is no section, or race, or multitude of you which can hope to brave the power of the English Government with impunity.

"You have seen that those who resist or cross that Government it is sure and swift to punish, although, justice satisfied, it is eager to forgive and to forget.

"You have seen that those who serve it earnestly is never forgetful to reward.

"And you have seen,—and you are yourselves the evidence of this,—that it is its wish and purpose to seek out amongst you the chiefs and great landholders of India, those in whom it may safely repose its confidence, and having found them, to place power and influence freely in their hands, and to uphold them to the respect of their fellow-subjects of every class.

"Impress these lessons upon those around you. Teach them to your children, and if you desire, as to-day you have told me that you do desire, to show your gratitude for the treatment which you have received, let it be your care, one and all, each in his sphere, to do all that in your power lies to make certain that by no act or example of yours shall the Government which has confided in you be exposed to the reproach of having misplaced its confidence, or the gentry of India be taunted with having proved unworthy of their trust. To secure this you have only to continue steadfast, as you have hitherto been, in the honest and zealous exercise of the powers which have been given you. If difficulties or perplexities should meet you, have recourse to the chief commissioner of your province for guidance. You will find him, as you have found his predecessors, Sir Robert Montgomery and Mr. Wingfield, your best adviser and your truest friend.

"I am glad to see that you appreciate at their value the services which these distinguished officers, and others associated with them, have rendered to your country.

"Talookdars, it is uncertain whether I shall ever set foot in Oude again. Perhaps not. But, though I may now be speaking to you face to face for the last time, the interest which I feel in the prosperity of your country will never cease. It is a deep interest and it will be a lasting one, not only because the prosperity of Oude involves the happiness of seven millions of people, who became subjects of the Queen of England by circumstances which made an anxious care for their well-being one of the most solemn duties that ever fell upon a Governor-general of India, but also because the continued success of England's Government, as it is now administered in Oude, will be a standing proof that, in spite of bygone animosities, and of the proudest differences of race, religion, and social usage, a generous and trustful rule is the surest way to make a loyal and dutiful people."

A translation of his Excellency's speech, the tedium of which as a translation was relieved by occasional smiles at its very peculiar idiomatic style, was then read, and the orthodox utar and pan having been administered to the native visitors, his lordship left the hall. There was a general rush to the refreshment-room where cold drinks were in tremendous request for the next half-hour; and this very interesting Darbar was over.—Englishman, April 17.

SMALL CAUSE COURTS.

THE Indian Government seems at last to have entered with sincerity and earnestness upon the path of progress and reform. On a recent occasion we alluded, in terms of commendation, to the appointment of honorary magistrates, and augured nothing but good from the revival of the former prestige of the native gentry. We have now to advert to another excellent measure, adopted experimentally, which can scarcely fail to produce the most desirable results. During the progress of the libel trials at Lucknow, in the latter portion of last year, we more than once expressed our conviction of the urgent necessity of requiring a certain amount of legal training on the part of public servants invested with judicial functions. Not a few civilians, of late, have shown their consciousness of their deficiency in this respect by applying themselves to the study of the law while at home on furlough. This honourable devotion to duty, this conscientious determination to make every sacrifice in order to capacitate themselves for the efficient discharge of the responsibilities of office, is worthy of all praise, and will certainly meet with its due reward. But, after all, these instances were exceptional, and gave no definite assurance of the righteous dispensation of justice throughout the empire. The proper administration of the law is undoubtedly a matter of the very highest importance, and is not to be confided to amateur lawyers. And yet such has been the case hitherto in India, and certainly with less detriment to the public interests than might fairly have been anticipated. It is clearly undesirable, however, that the past state of things should be permitted to continue a moment longer than is unavoidable. A different—we fear we must add, an inferior—class of men is now being sent out to conduct the civil administration of the country, and it therefore becomes imperatively urgent to separate the judicial from simply magisterial or revenue duties. The Indian Government appears to have arrived at this wholesome conclusion, and to be prepared to act accordingly; but some time must elapse before competent persons can be found to hold the new appointments thus created. The Presidency barristers are at present even in a worse plight than the civilians. The latter may not be very conversant with legal knowledge, but the former are almost wholly ignorant of any language but their own. A thorough familiarity with native idioms, and also with native peculiarities of thought and feeling, is indispensable on the part of a judge who has to rely upon native evidence, and to adjudicate in cases arising out of a totally different system of society to any that exists in Europe. The demand will no doubt, in due time, create a fair supply of legal gentlemen properly qualified in every respect to elicit truth from untruthful witnesses, and to administer even-handed justice unto all. In the meanwhile, we have only to congratulate the people of India on the better times that are in store for them, and to recognise the beneficent intentions of the British Government on their behalf.

INDIGO CONTRACTS.

SIR CHARLES WOOD reckoned without his host when he expressed his belief that the Legislative Council would of themselves see the impropriety of proceeding any further with the Indigo Contracts Bill. He certainly little dreamed that two Bills were actually before the Council, and had been referred to the same Select Committee. One of these, introduced by Mr. Beadon, had for its object to punish breach of contract as a criminal offence; while the other, fathered by Mr. Sconce, contemplated only civil procedure to facilitate the enforcement of contracts entered into for the cultivation of agricultural produce. The latter proceeded on the principle of awarding damages, but how those damages are to be recovered when awarded is not so clearly stated. In the opium cultivation carried on for the Government breach of contract is punished by damages to the extent of three times the amount of the advances made to the ryot, and this penalty may very likely answer the purpose with the summary means of proceeding in the power of the Government. But the indigo planter would derive little or no benefit from a penalty which he would scarcely ever be able to recover. It is proverbially said to be a difficult undertaking to rob a Highlander of his "brecks," but it would be still more difficult to extract from a Bengal ryot three times the amount of the advances made to him for the purpose of growing a crop which he failed to grow. Mr. Sconce further requires the registration of contracts relating to agricultural produce, but in such a clumsy and troublesome manner that it is obvious that neither party to the contract would ever subject themselves to the trouble and annoyance. Imagine four persons being obliged to appear before the Registrar, who may possibly live at a distance of some miles, in order to register a contract the whole value of which may not exceed ten shillings. It seems to be uncertain whether or not registration is intended to be compulsory, but in any case it would prove an illusion. A priori, no one will deny that the fraudulent non fulfilment of a contract of any kind should be treated as a criminal offence, and punished by imprisonment; but if the failure be involuntary, it is a case for pecuniary adjustment by civil action. A happy illustration of the latter clause was introduced by Mr. Lning in the course of the discussion that preceded the second reading of Mr. Sconce's Bill. "In the famous case," he said, "of specific performance of a contract in the Merchant of Venice, why did our sympathies go so strongly with Antonio? Because the failure was involuntary; his argosy had been lost at sea. But suppose that, instead of being lost at sea, the failure had arisen because Antonio, after contracting with Shylock, had sold the cargo to some one else, who had tempted him, by a higher offer, to break with the Jew: it was by no means clear that Portia's judgment would have given us equal satisfaction." Where the moral sense erred, he continued, and a positive fraud was committed, the law ought to inflict a criminal punishment. As an abstract theory, this doctrine is incontrovertible; but, touching indigo contracts, there is one peculiarity that must not be overlooked. Is it not monstrous that a ryot should be compelled to go on year after year—perhaps generation after generation—cultivating a crop that leaves him destitute even of seed for the ensuing year? Let us consider the meaning of an advance. Is it not equivalent to a proof that if the ryot started without this burden the yield of his land would be barely sufficient to repay his labour and outlay? The really beneficent mode of dealing with him, if it be argued that in any case his thoughtlessness and want of foresight would prevent him from laying by a provision against seed time, would be to deduct a small percentage from the price agreed upon for the purchase of his indigo, and retain this in his name until the next season approached. By this system the ryot would be free to sell his plant to the highest bidder, and instead of being bound beforehand to deliver it at a stipulated price, whatever rates may be ruling in the market. The objection will, of course, be made that this proposition cannot benefit the planters who are already under advance; but we have long since regarded their case as hopeless. They may make up their mind to write off to loss all outstanding advances of longer date than one year, and in most cases the loss will be little more than nominal. They never expected to recover the amount as capital. These advances were merely the rope round the ryot's leg that bound him to such or such a planter. That rope must be cut, and the ryot allowed to become a free agent to choose his own crop and his own market. Some few planters will probably be ruined, and so will some of the landholders in Russia be by the emancipation of their serfs; but we cannot affect a pity we do not feel. Neither of them, perhaps, is answerable for the existing state of things, but as inheritors of a faulty system they must be content to suffer for the sins of their predecessors.

AN IMPERIAL "CHIFFONIER."

THE attention and curiosity of English travellers on their first visit to Paris are generally excited in favour of the strange-looking beings who are seen in the early morning prowling about the streets with curious shaped basket on back, and carrying in their hand a stick with an iron hook at the other end. These creatures live, like town sparrows, by what they can pick up out of the refuse and garbage thrown out into the thoroughfares. They scratch among the heaps of rubbish awaiting the dust-cart, in search of bits of rag or paper, or anything else that can still be applied to human use. Now and then in the course of the twelve months they alight upon something of greater value, a coin, a ring, a brooch, or a jewel possibly both rich and rare. These are the prizes in the lottery of their life. What the marshal's baton is to the soldier, the Cardinal's hat to the village curé, or the ermined robe to the young lawyer, the chance of finding a costly gem is to the dram-drinking chiffonier. In the hope of stumbling upon a treasure that will keep him in brandy and absinthe for a week, he ventures into the vilest sewers, and stirs up the foul, unsavoury deposits in the hope of coming upon something that may reward his unwholesome enterprise. In much the same sort of expectation does Napoleon III. trouble the political waters of the civilised world, and disturb the slumbering passions of mankind, with a view to gather into his hotte it may be a kingdom or a province, or, it may be, a strip of desert or a barren rock in the ocean. In the midst of the agitation something may turn up, and there is nothing too large for his ambition or too small for his covetousness. It belongs not to the province of this journal to expatiate on European politics, or to concern itself with the diplomatic contests of rival Courts, further than they may happen to influence the present or future stability of our Indian possessions. Neither the annexation of Nice and Savoy nor the occupation of Rome disturbs our equanimity, or calls forth a single anathema. It is otherwise, however, when we observe the workings of an undeviating, though insidious, policy, which aims at raising up in the Far East a rival to Great Britain. The real or imaginary grievances of some French missionaries in China sufficed to furnish a pretext for co-operating with the British forces in the late campaign, and for obtaining an influence that may possibly be exerted to our prejudice hereafter. In like manner the alleged murder of a missionary in Cochin China brought about a joint expedition of French and Spanish troops against the barbarous empire of Annam, the final result of which will be to give France a standing point in that peninsula also. Off the coast of Australia several small islets have been seized as military outposts, and in our last number we referred to the new line of steam-packets between China and Suez, which will be held to justify the maintenance of a powerful naval squadron in the Indian seas. Stations, too, have been acquired on the shores of the Red Sea, for the ostensible purpose of protecting a commerce that does not even exist. The occupation of Syria, whether a permanent or temporary measure, would probably affect us in only an indirect manner, through the reports that might be circulated by Indian pilgrims returning to their homes from the holy places of Islam, and who would naturally speak in exaggerated terms of the great sovereign of the Franks who, after subduing the Mussulmans of Northern Africa, now held in subjection those of Syria likewise. But all these schemes combined are as nothing compared with the apparently magnificent project of constructing a navigable canal to unite the Red Sea with the Mediterranean. Scientific engineers, indeed, insist upon the impracticability of the undertaking, and commercial men deny that that route would ever supersede the old passage round the Cape. These objections, however, are only so far valid that they prevent English capital from being sunk in the sands of the Egyptian desert, for in truth it was never anticipated that the canal could be completed. The true motive has long been patent to all the world. In the first place, the Pacha would be thrown into the hands of the French; and he himself has blindly rushed into the toils spread for him by subscribing for one-half of the entire amount of the original capital—a sum equal to more than three-fifths of the annual revenue of Egypt. Then, a tract of land three miles in width, in addition to the canal itself, has been ceded by the infuriated Viceroy—subject, indeed, to the sanction of the Porte—for the residence of the servants of the company, who shall be governed by their own laws, and exempted from native jurisdiction. If completed, the canal, moreover, would serve as a great military line of defence, severing Egypt from the Ottoman Empire, and interposing a barrier of French posts held by Frenchmen: in the words of Lord Ellenborough, another Bosphorus would be created and placed in the hands of the French. The cession of this territory, indeed, has not yet been ratified by the Porte, and there is reason to believe that the Sultan's assent will not easily be obtained. Nevertheless, the works have been commenced, excavations have been made on a large scale—only to be filled up again by the ever-shifting sands—and a small colony of Frenchmen is actually in possession. It is quite superfluous to insist upon the serious inconveniences that might arise to this country by the interception of its communication with India, and even the temporary ascendancy of France in the Red Sea. The Government is fortunately awake to the occult designs of the Imperial Chiffonier, but its hands should now and again be strengthened by the expression of public opinion.

IMPERIAL PARLIAMENT.

INDIGO PLANTERS IN INDIA.

MR. VANSITTART asked the Secretary of State for India whether a deputation of the indigo planters had not recently waited upon the Governor-general, and, if so, whether any and what orders were issued in consequence of their representations by the Governor-general; and whether he had any objection to produce copies of those orders, and of any other correspondence and papers on the subject?

SIR C. WOOD replied that a deputation had waited on the Governor-general, and, in consequence of their representations, two special commissioners had been sent to the indigo districts. He was quite willing to lay all the papers upon the table.

CLAIMS AGAINST OUDE.

MR. TORRENS asked the Secretary of State for India, with reference to the letter from him to the Governor-general of India in Council, dated the 26th of May, 1860, directing that the cases of claimants against the late State of Oude, yet to be reported on, should be investigated, as desired by the late Court of Directors, in their letter to the Governor-general of India in Council, dated the 17th of June, 1857, whether he intends to take any steps for the adjustment of the claims of the parties whose cases have been already reported on in the letters from the Governor-general of India in Council, dated respectively the 17th of May, and the 8th of September, 1859?

SIR C. WOOD replied that he had sent out an inquiry as to the mode of examination that had been adopted, but he had not yet received a report.

COMMERCIAL TRAFFIC ON THE YANG-TSE-KIANG.

In reply to a question from MR. DUNLOP,

SIR G. LEWIS said the Admiralty had received a letter from Sir James Hope, from which he would read an extract. The letter was dated:—

“On board the Coromandel, Feb. 25, 1861.

“You will be pleased to acquaint the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty that I left Woosung on the 9th inst., and after some detention, occasioned by the grounding of the Centaure in a difficult part of the river, I arrived at Nankin on the 20th, after having located the Consul at Chin-keang-foo on my way up. From the communications I held with the chief authorities of the Tse-pings, I have reason to expect that every point necessary for the unmolested passage of British vessels up the Yang-tse will be readily granted, but I have refrained from coming to any distinct arrangement on the subject until I should have the assistance of Mr. Parkes. On my return down the river for the purpose of taking up the Centaure, I was joined by Mr. Parkes, whom I forwarded to Nankin, where he will put matters in train and wait my arrival. I propose to-morrow to proceed up the river, and foresee no difficulty in completing the arrangements for opening the Yang-tse, detailed in my letter of the 2nd instant.”

THE MAILS TO CHINA.

MR. BAILLIE wished to know whether it was the intention of the Government to withdraw the fortnightly Post-office communication with China before the British troops were withdrawn from Tien-tsin?

THE CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER recommended the hon. gentleman to move for the correspondence that had taken place. The question put to the Government was as to the matter of a subsidy, and whether the fortnightly communication was to be withdrawn or not he could not say. The Government never had adopted the view that it would be necessary or desirable to prolong the double monthly subsidy upon the ground of the continued occupation of Tien-tsin.

HOUSE OF LORDS.—MAY 16.

CUSTOMS (INDIA).

LORD DE GREY and RIPON, in reply to a question from LORD ARLIE as to the intentions of her Majesty's Government in regard to the Customs duties imposed last year on manufactured articles imported into India, observed that the sources of the Indian revenue were so few, that in order to balance the revenue and expenditure Mr. Wilson had felt bound to impose these duties, and that her Majesty's Government, under the circumstances, had not interfered. The duties were objectionable, and ought to cease as soon as possible.

LORD GREY condemned the duties.

HOUSE OF LORDS.—MAY 17.

INDIAN PRIZE MONEY.

LORD BERNERS, who was almost wholly inaudible, called the attention of the Under Secretary for India to the delay which had taken place in the distribution of the Delhi and Lucknow prize money. It was now three years and a half since Delhi was captured, and unless some decided action were taken by the Government of India, the prize money would not be distributed for years to come. He wished to know whether the Government have taken or would take any efficient means to enforce early payment of the Indian prize money.

EARL DE GREY and RIPON stated that the warrant for distribution had been issued at the end of last year. Some delay had arisen in consequence of the difficulty of making up the rolls of claimants, for until these were completed it was impossible to ascertain the shares payable to each, and some of the regiments engaged in the operations at Delhi and Lucknow had subsequently left India. The Government of India were making every effort to obtain the rolls, and as soon as these were complete the prize money would be distributed.

LORD LYVEDEN presented a petition from the tradesmen of Northampton, praying the House to give jurisdiction in bankruptcy to County Courts; also a petition from the inhabitants of Madras and from Madura, Bellary, and three other places in the Madras Presidency, against the system of centralisation of Government in India. He said that he would not enter into the question now, as he hoped his noble friend (Earl de Grey) would, shortly after Whitsuntide, give the House an opportunity of discussing all these important questions relating to India.

MISCELLANEOUS.

took place. [The names of officers and gentlemen presented by the Secretary of State for India are given alone.] Major George Browne, on promotion and return from India, by the Dep.-Adjt.-General. Lieut.-Colonel Andrew Browne, on return from China, and being appointed a C.B. by the Dep.-Adjt.-General. Commander John Byng, on return from China, by the Hon. Frederick Byng. THE INDIAN ORDER OF KNIGHTHOOD.—It is now decided that the colour of the riband is to be light blue, edged with white, in order to prevent it being confounded with the ribands of St. Patrick and the Hanoverian Guelphic Order, which are both light blue. The Viceroy of India will be the Grand Master of the Order for the time being, and, whatever his rank may be nominally, he will enjoy the same power as that held by the Lord-lieutenant of Ireland in regard to the Order of St. Patrick, and have similar powers of investiture. The selection of the effigy of the Queen as a distinguishing feature of the badge of the Order is in correct taste. There would have been serious objections to dedicating this Order to any Christian saint, besides shocking the prejudices of our great Indian feudatories.

THE ORDER OF THE BATH.—(War Office, May 14).—The Queen has been graciously pleased to give orders for the appointment of Thomas Wade, Esq., Chinese Secretary and Translator to the British Legation in China, who acted as Secretary to the Earl of Elgin's Embassy; and of Henry Brougham Loch, Esq., who was attached to that Embassy in the capacity of Private Secretary to the Earl of Elgin; to be Ordinary Members of the Civil Division of the Third Class or Companions of the Most Honourable Order of the Bath. —London Gazette, May 15.

CENTRAL INDIA COAL.—We have been requested by the Secretary to the Nerbudda Coal and Iron Company (Limited) to contradict an unfavourable statement regarding the coal of the Nerbudda Valley, which appeared in our issue of the 6th instant. To enable us to do so, that gentleman has politely favoured us with a copy of Mr. Haines's analysis of that coal as compared with Newcastle, Welsh, Scotch, and Australian coal; but, unfortunately, the analytical table in question fully corroborates the paragraph which is charged with inaccuracy. The Central India coal may not be unfit for locomotive purposes, but it is clearly inferior to that of Bengal, as well as to that from South Wales, which is all that we said on the subject.

NEW BISHOP OF MADRAS.—(India-office, May 16).—The Queen has been pleased to direct letters patent to pass the Great Seal of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, nominating the Rev. Frederick Gell, B.D., to the bishopric of Madras, void by the death of the Right Rev. Thomas Dealtry, D.D.

ANOTHER INDIAN LOAN.—Rumours have been in circulation of the probability of another Indian loan, but they are believed to be, to a certain extent, premature. It is thought that, in consequence of the disturbance to the revenue from the famine, the Government may require between this date and the 5th of April, 1862, about £4,000,000, and Sir Charles Wood is, therefore, expected before the Session closes, to take a vote authorising that amount. The negotiation of the loan, supposing it to be needed, will, most likely, not take place until toward the end of the present year. All the other arrangements connected with Indian finance will, of course, depend upon the success which the various railways may experience in supplying their respective wants.

THE ISTHMUS OF SUEZ.—A traveller who is now visiting the works of the Isthmus of Suez, sends the Sticte the following details, dated El Guizer, 3rd instant:—"The central service of the supplies and the administration for all the points of the isthmus is organised at Damietta. From 6,000 to 7,000 Arabs are now employed. There are upwards of 2,000 at Timsale, where the works are carried on with an intelligent activity which must secure sure results. I was surprised to see those masses of native workmen using with the greatest facility all the French tools and improved machinery. Courageous and persevering efforts were necessary to organise all these works, which are carried on with the greatest order and precision. The company advances towards its object, and it will attain it. The matériel employed is immense. The wheelbarrows alone are more than 14,000 in number; there are steam saw-mills, machinery for cutting metal and wood, hospitals, bakehouses, butchers' shops—in fact, nothing is wanting."

THE CONSUMPTION OF TEA.—A Parliamentary return issued on the 16th instant, shows the quantity of tea annually consumed in the United Kingdom, with the average rate and aggregate amount of duty collected thereon; also the average price, inclusive and exclusive of the duty, and the average quantity consumed by each individual of the population, from 1801 to 1860 inclusive. The increase in the quantity consumed has been singularly steady, fluctuating here and there, but recovering the following year with a new impetus. We take the particulars at the commencement and the end of the period covered by the return. In 1801, when the average price per lb., inclusive of duty, was 4s. 2½d., the quantity of tea consumed in the United Kingdom was 23,730,150 lbs., and the amount of duty received thereon was £1,423,000. In 1860 as much as 76,816,304 lbs. was consumed, the average price per lb., including duty, being 2s. 10½d. The average quantity consumed by each individual of the population was 2 lb. 10 oz. in 1860, and 1 lb. 8 oz. in 1801. The average rate of duty per lb. paid by the consumer was 1s. 2½d. in 1801, and 1s. 5d. in 1860.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

WE may dismiss the Calcutta mail of the 22nd of April with the remark that whatever it contains of news has been anticipated in the last mail from Bombay. This deficiency of general intelligence, however, is amply atoned for by the arrival of a document long and anxiously expected by our military readers. The AMALGAMATION SCHEME is at length perfected in all its details, and has been officially published in the Calcutta Government Gazette, from which it has been transcribed into the Englishman. To the last named journal we are indebted, in common with our contemporaries, for all the General Orders, Royal Warrants, and Despatches relating to this deeply interesting subject, and which will be found faithfully and fully reproduced in another part of this paper. It is clearly impossible to give even an analysis of so bulky a document in the limited space at present at our disposal. We shall, therefore, content ourselves with a hasty glance at some of the more prominent features of the scheme, reserving for a future opportunity any critical remarks that may present themselves.

In the first place, there are to be three regiments of cavalry and nine of infantry formed out of the different regiments of Europeans formerly in the E.I. Company's service. These are to be officered by volunteers from the officers of the Indian armies. Officers of regiments ordered to serve out of India will be allowed to count such foreign service year for year, but officers volunteering hereafter for such service will be compelled to count two years abroad as one in India. Officers of the old regiments volunteering for the new will retain their present rank and all advantages they are now entitled to from the various funds. They will also rise by seniority to the rank of major, after which their further promotion will be regulated by their merit. The great mass, however, of old Indian officers will be absorbed in a general staff corps and by service with native regiments. Officers now holding staff appointments will not be displaced, but should they desire to enter the staff corps they will have the option of doing so, if under the substantive rank of colonel. Staff employ is described as embracing all civil and political appointments whatever, all military appointments on the general and personal staff, and the appointments of commandant, second in command, adjutant, interpreter, and quartermaster. There will be two great divisions of employment, military and civil, for officers of the staff corps, with practically numerous sub-divisions. No vacancies in their respective regiments will be caused by officers joining the Staff Corps or volunteering for general service, whose names will be entered in italics, in order to regulate the promotion of the lower ranks. The Artillery and Engineer Corps will remain apparently untouched, though in reality stricken to death. They will gradually "die out," and their places be taken by the corresponding services in the Royal Army. The question of bonus for immediate retirement is alone undecided, being referred to the decision of the Secretary of State.

Mr. Laing's Budget was to be enunciated on the 27th of April, and is expected to be more favourable than was at one time anticipated.

We regret to observe that illness has compelled Mr. Cecil Beadon to leave the scene of his labours, at least for a time. Though sincerely wishing him an early and complete restoration of health, it will occasion us no very profound regret should he determine on not returning to India. Mr. Barnes, lately appointed Foreign Secretary, and vilely calumniated by the Mofussilite, has also been compelled by sickness to resign his post.

The news from China is so far satisfactory that it amounts to nothing.

Not only is the great god Pan "stone" dead, but his very habitation is about to be effaced from the memories of the sons of men. The India House is for sale! A brief advertisement in the papers invites tenders for the purchase of the august mansion whence issued the decrees that gained and governed a mighty empire. The spider that wove its web in the palace of the descendants of Timour is now indulging in a similar occupation in the hall of the Mogul's conquerors. The palace is now the barracks of British soldiers, and the hall will probably ere long be the terminus of a railway; but while the Last of the Moguls is a wretched prisoner and exile in Burmah, the worthy individuals who constituted the company of merchant rulers are living at their ease in their native land, shorn indeed of their beams, but enjoying a mild and genial twilight.

Haileybury, too, invites the attention of speculators. On the 3rd of July the collection that furnished for many years the distinguished administrators who governed India with ability, justice, and integrity, is to be passed over to the highest bidder. That distinguished New Zealander, of whom we are so fondly reminded, has thus lost two subjects for his meditation.

CHARTERED MERCANTILE BANK OF INDIA, LONDON, AND CHINA.—The annual meeting was held on Tuesday, the 21st inst., at the office, Threadneedle-street; Mr. Howard presided. The following report was submitted and adopted:—"The directors have the pleasure of presenting to the shareholders the audited balance-sheet and profit and loss account of the bank for the year ended 31st December, 1860, and to report that, after providing for all bad and doubtful debts, the net profits of the bank amount to £51,274. 10s. 9d.; to this sum has to be added £1,070. 4s. undivided profit carried over from the preceding year, making a total of £55,014. 14s. 9d. available to appropriation. Out of the above amount the directors have paid to the shareholders £50,000, in two half-yearly dividends, free of Income-tax, making a distribution for the year 1860 at the rate of ten per cent. per annum on the paid-up capital of the bank. A further sum of £3,141. 3s. 8d. has been carried to the reserve fund. The unappropriated balance of £2,803. 11s. 1d. is carried over to the credit of the profit and loss account for the current year." The ordinary vote of thanks closed the meeting.

PRINCE AGA KHAN.—An effort was recently made in Bombay to establish a school for the Khoja youth, and a sum of Rs. 50,000 was raised for this purpose. The attempt has been thwarted by the interference of Prince Aga Khan, who is considered the head of the Khoja community. This has led the Bombay Times to sketch the history of this singular character. He is the lineal descendant of Hasan Sabah, the Prince of the Assassins, or old man of the mountain celebrated in the Crusades. Hasan Sabah was chief of the mountainous district of Persian Irak; he died in 1124. His sect were at one time very powerful, and though but a shadow of their former influence remains the present Aga Khan is still revered by the Khojas and Bhoras. He is now an old man, and is chiefly known in Bombay as a sporting man and owner of race horses. It is said that the last high priest of the order left his mantle to him, and after uttering some wonderful predictions about him jumped into a cauldron of boiling oil. Aga Khan is accused of dissuading his followers from contributing to the Famine Fund and to the Victoria Museum, and of in other ways opposing progress.

H.H. THE BAIZA BAEE OF SCINDIAH has applied to Government for permission to adopt an heir. The matter is now pending the decision of Government.

BUNDLECOND.—Letters received from Bundlecond mention that the rebel Makood Singh has been killed and seven of his men captured.

SEERPORE.—A rumour was lately afloat of rebel Bheels being in the jungles near Seerpore. Measures have been taken by Major Keating to secure the safety of the road.

MR. BEADON.—The Hurkaru states that Mr. Cecil Beadon has, in consequence of a very severe attack of liver complaint, been forced to proceed to sea in the Nubia.

ABOLITION OF STATIONERY OFFICE.—The Government of India has sanctioned the abolition of the Stationery Office as proposed by the Civil Finance Commission. This arrangement will effect a saving of about three lakhs of rupees a year, which had hitherto been disbursed on account of transit charges for sending stationery, &c., to various parts of the country.

NORTH-WEST PROVINCES.—Our Lieutenant-governor, Mr. Edmonstone, was warned by his medical advisers that he could not pass the hot season at Allahabad without serious risk. He accordingly, in the end of March, proceeded to Nynsee Tal, in the Kumaon Hills, with the intention of remaining there until the beginning of the next cold season. The provinces under the administration of the Government are in perfect tranquillity, and there is no reason to anticipate any interruption of it. The Income-tax Act is in full and steady operation. The reform of the police has been commenced (since the 1st January, 1861) in the three divisions of Meerut, Agra, and Allahabad, and will be in progress in the Benares and Rohilcond Divisions shortly. The measures requisite for the relief of the people in the distressed districts have been fully organized, and are working more satisfactorily.

THE MYSORE FAMILY.—On the recommendation of the Civil Finance Commission the Government of Bengal have proposed to abolish the school hitherto kept up at Russapuglah for the education of the family and dependents of the Mysore princes, better education being available for them in the Madrassa. By the abolition of the school Government will save, it is believed, from twelve to fifteen thousand rupees a-year.

CAPTAIN FORREST.—The Governor-general has sanctioned the assignment rent free in perpetuity of a grant of jungle waste-land in Dehra Doon to the heirs of the late Captain Forrest for his gallant conduct at the defence of the magazine at Delhi.

ORISSA.—On the afternoon of Friday, the 25th of January last, while Captain McNeil, the agent, was at Bundasir of Kallahundy, he received a report from the Pat Rajah of Tooamool, stating that the Khoonds of Tooamool had made every preparation for the public sacrifice of a Meriah on Sunday, the 27th of January last, at the village of Puckregoodsh of Tooamool, fifty-two miles distant from Bundasir. A guard of fifty-eight Sebundies started immediately, and arrived at the village shortly before daylight on Sunday morning, and rescued the intended victim, an elderly woman, heavily ironed, just as she was being removed from the village to be sacrificed at the shrine of the Meriah deity, all the preliminary ceremonies having been concluded. The Sebundy guard (accompanied by fifty matchlocks sent by Ramchunder Singh, the Pat Rajah of Tooamool), after rescuing the Meriah, were surrounded by an enormous number of Khoonds, estimated at upwards of 5,000, who vainly endeavoured to obtain the release either of the Meriah or the six prisoners who were apprehended at the time of the rescue. After patiently waiting till past nine a.m., the guard upon attempting to leave the village, with the object of rejoining the agent's camp, were attacked by the whole of the assembled Khoonds, who not only fired arrows but also matchlocks. Being severely pressed, the guard were obliged to fire in self-defence, when the Khoonds, instead of dispersing, only retired a little, and keeping out of musket range followed the guard for upwards of eight miles, until it arrived at the residence of the Pat Rajah of Rampoor, after which they disappeared. The Khoonds of the following districts had assembled to celebrate the sacrifice:—Tooamool, Kassepore of Jeypoor, Mohulputna of Tooamool, Koerlapant of Kalabundy, Singapore of Jeypoor, and Ryagurra of Jeypoor. It is also stated that all the Khoonds of Lunjaghur and Pengasoriah, of Kalabundy, of Bism Cuttack, and Nowrungpoor of Jeypoor were present; in fact, the whole Khoond population within a circle of fifty miles. Since our agent has arrived at Tooamool, several villages have made their submission; and Capt. McNeil entertains strong hope that the ringleaders and originators will be shortly apprehended.—Englishman.

DELHI, April 13.—Travelling on the Grand Trunk-road is becoming highly dangerous. Robbers have now taken to attacking dakh carriages. On the night of the 11th a traveller was compelled, in defence of his life and property, to use his revolver, unfortunately hitting the wrong man. It seems that he was awoken by a great noise, and on realising the extent of his danger, which was forced upon him in the form of a lallee smashing into the carriage windows, he fired a shot, as he thought over the heads of his assailants. This had the effect of putting them all to flight, but on alighting to see if his luggage was safe, the traveller learned to his dismay that he had sent the driver of the carriage to his long account. How the driver came to be in the crowd, or so as to catch the shot, nobody seems to know, but common sense points to the fact as suggestive of connivance. The gentleman reported the circumstance, on his arrival, to the Deputy Commissioner of Delhi, and as the accident occurred in the Boolundshuhur district, the investigation will, I suppose, be carried out by the authorities there.—Englishman.

RAJAH JOYKUNGUL SINGH, of Gidhore, some time back petitioned Government that a zemindary (worth 3,000 rupees a-year) the property of State, may be granted to him as an acknowledgment of his services during the Sonthal insurrection and the sepoy mutiny. The commissioner of the Bhaugulpore division supported the petition, and reported that the Rajah did good service by raising a body of men who helped to prevent the spirit of disturbance spreading to the westward. In the sepoy mutiny, too, he entertained a considerable body of men, whose presence kept Sheikpoorah and its neighbourhood quiet when the adjoining thannahs of Behar were disturbed. His men, also, had some small affairs with the mutineer sepoys of the 5th irregular cavalry and the 32nd N.I. out of this division, and also with the sepoys who came into Monghyr in 1858-59, with the view of crossing the Ganges and getting up to Nepal. During the whole of 1857 and a great part of 1858 he kept up a regular communication with the authorities by horse dakh, at his own expense, and gave the authorities the earliest information of all that went on in his own quarter; and throughout, in every way, he showed himself to the best of his opportunities an earnest, active, and energetic friend of the British Government. The Government, therefore, in consideration of his valuable services, has complied with his request.

EXPORTS (Calcutta, April 22).—Business in our market since the mail of the 10th inst. has been very depressed and comparatively less than for so ne time past. The continued unfavourable accounts of the state of the home markets, and also from America, have rendered shippers very cautious in their operation. The little business that has been done in Sugar (the Gupatta kind) and salt-petre has been principally induced by lower prices now current. Rice and Linseed are almost neglected for the home markets and America. Jute continues to be shipped to a fair extent for Great Britain, the decline in freight being perhaps an additional impetus. Hides continue in fair demand for Great Britain and the continent of Europe.

IMPORTS (Calcutta, April 22).—Since the receipt of home news of the 3rd and 10th March of a fall in the price of Grey Shirtings, holders here have been showing great disposition to sell, and 5 to 7½lb. 39 inches cloths have been submitted to a reduction of one to two annas, and Madras-dollars about one anna a piece. Grey Jacquets and Mulls remain unaltered in price. White Shirtings of fine quality engage a little inquiry for the Upper Provinces. White Figured Shirtings are not much sought for, and have fallen one anna per piece. White Jacquets are without change. White Mulls have fallen about one anna per piece. Lapets, Spots, Dhooties, and Sauries are in limited request at about former prices. Mule Twist has been dull, and very few sales have been reported. Metals continue to be purchased by speculators, but to a limited extent; there is still no demand for the Upper Provinces.

MADRAS.

MYSORE: ITS PRINCE AND GOVERNMENT.

Mysore is one of the few spots of Asia which for the last thirty years has, under a British administration, been able to enjoy the happiness of having no annals. Kingdoms have been annexed, dynasties annihilated, mutinies crushed, rebellions trampled out, but since 1832 the name of Mysore has never been heard. The little rocky triangle of table land which ends in the Neigherries has been a haven of peace and prosperity, while all India besides has been convulsed to its foundations. Only one circumstance has occurred to give notoriety to the name, if not prominence to the history of the province. The descendants of the dynasty which for a brief period usurped its Government, have been made the recipients of a benevolence so extravagant as to excite the indignation of India. Meanwhile that part of the country which Hyder and Tippoo caused to swim with the blood and groan with the cries of their victims, has presented to the view only smiling fields, contented agriculturists who no longer flee from the plough at the sight of the oppressor, and white settlers from a distant island who introduce new wealth. Since 1832 life has been safe, justice available, property secure; capital has been allowed to accumulate, waste lands have been brought under cultivation, the peasant has become the yeoman, and the hawker the great trader or banker, for the first time in the long and blood-stained history of Mysore. Sir Mark Cubbon, the Commissioner under whom these peaceful triumphs have been gained, has left India weighed down with years and meritorious services; the Rajah is now an old man, having enjoyed the dignity of his position since 1799, and Mysore is without an administrative head. When at the beginning of last year the Governor-General expressed the intention of removing the control of the affairs of Mysore from Calcutta to Madras, the Rajah entered so emphatic a protest that the idea was abandoned. Again, by Sir Mark Cubbon's departure, the Government of Mysore is in a critical state. Weeks pass on and still no appointment to the Chief Commissionership is made. The name of Sir Richard Birch has been freely used in official circles as an eligible candidate for the office, but still the post remains vacant. The reason is given us by the Madras Times; the old Rajah has applied to Lord Canning, as he has periodically applied to all his predecessors, to be allowed to govern his own territory himself, like his neighbour the Nizam, without any Chief Commissioner, and assisted only by a political resident like Colonel Davidson. Till this difficult question is settled it is obvious the present temporary arrangements must continue, and the reform of the military department must be suspended.

The application, prompted by the liberal native policy of Lord Canning, we are disposed to consider favourably. The case is so exceptional, the circumstances attending it are so peculiar, that there can be little objection to gratify the wish of an old chief who cannot now long enjoy the honour which he desires, if the rights of his subjects are protected and the cause of good government secured. With the exception of Travancore and one or two of the Rajpootana States, the present Rajah is the representative of the oldest Hindu house in India. Colonel Wilks traces it in the Ramayan. Rajput Chiefs ruled over the whole plateau, with the seaport of Kallian as their capital. Like all other Hindu states the history of Mysore was brought into clear relief by the Mahomedan invasions. The Chief of Mysore was long subject to the Mahomedan kings who ruled the Deccan from Bejanugger, till in 1565 he asserted his independence and refused to pay tribute. Each successive chief enlarged his territories partly by conquest, partly by purchase, the famous Kanti Rao being the first to issue from his mint the coins so well known to our ancestors as pagodas. The rulers of Mysore were masters of South India till the Maharrattas supplanted them like all other native powers. Then degenerating like the descendants of Clovis they became subject to their own nobles as mayors of the palace. It was under the best of these, Nunjiraj, that Hyder Ali first obtained renown as a warrior till he distanced all rivals, pensioned the titular Rajah with a smaller sum than we now give his representative, and finally strangled him, appointing his brother in his place. On the brother's death the house became extinct, and Wilks tell us how, anxious still to keep up the shadow of sovereignty, Hyder selected another Rajah. Collecting all the children from the different branches of the royal family, he turned them into a hall filled with sweetmeats, playthings, daggers, books, ornaments and money. While the rest were scrambling for the toys and sweets one child seized a glittering dagger in his right hand and a lime in his left. Hyder at once nominated him Rajah because "his first care was military protection, his second to realise the produce of his dominions." This boy, named Cham Raj, was the father of the chief whom we restored to power in 1799, and who now asks for an increase of independence. On the fall of Tippoo he was a boy five years old. Entrusted with the government of that part of his territory which we did not divide between ourselves and the Nizam, he was guided by Purneah, a Brahmin, who had been Tippoo's financial minister. So faithfully did Purneah administer the trust, that when the young Rajah came of age, he found nearly three millions sterling in the treasury of a country of which the annual revenues were not half a million. But the money was soon squandered, the country was desolated by the rapacity of his parasites, a rebellion of the people ensued, and in 1832 the British Government took the management of the province into their own hands.

We appointed a Commission, with General Cubbon at its head. The country was saved. Population flocked in. Land long waste was cultivated, and all went so well, that in 1847 the Rajah, who had become wiser as he grew older, asked to have his sovereign power restored. In person he renewed the petition to Lord Dalhousie, when in the Neigherries, but in vain. His position has not been an uncomfortable one in itself. He receives a stipend of three and a-half lakhs of rupees annually and one-fifth of the net revenue, so that his total income in 1858-59 was about twelve and a-half lakhs of rupees. In that year the revenue had risen to £870,983, or just double of what it was in 1832, and, after paying all charges, there was a surplus of £10,214. Mysore has a population of nearly four millions, of whom only a twentieth are Mahomedans. The country is rich in iron and wood; with an elevation of 2,500 feet it is healthy and cool; and its soil offers many attractions to European capital.

Considering the advanced age of the Rajah, the fact that he is heirless, and his continued loyalty, we see no objection to granting his petition to be treated as Sindia or the Nizam. But the privilege should be given on certain conditions. These are, that the Rajah maintain the existing Commission and mode of administration; that he offer no obstruction to the introduction of Europeans; and that he pledge himself to spend a fair percentage of the revenue in roads and public works. Coorg must, of course, remain directly subject to our authority, and might be considered a non-regulation district under Madras. —Friend of India.

MISCELLANEOUS.

TABLE TALK AT MADRAS.—The principal events in Madras during the past fortnight are the departure of the Governor for Calcutta, the discovery of a new planet, and the execution of a murderer. His Excellency Sir W. Denison left on the 23rd of April, but why he is gone to see the Governor-general, or how long he will remain absent from Madras is a profound mystery. In a small community like ours the most carefully preserved secrets generally leak out in some way or other; but in the present instance nobody knows anything of the "reason why" the Governor has gone to the City of Palaces. In fact, ever since his Excellency's arrival, the occupation of the gossipers has become a sinecure. There have been no "sayings and doings" at Government House to talk about, and altogether the Governor preserves as much mysterious silence as if he were a new edition of the Man in the Iron Mask, or the parrot that never talked because he was so uncommonly fond of thinking. Those who like to chatter about the sayings and doings of the local great one recall the past, and find the contrast between Sir Charles Trevelyan, the Loquacious, and Sir William, the Silent, almost too painful to be endured. As we are no wiser than our neighbours we must dismiss the subject.—The new planet discovered by Mr. Norman Pogson, the Government Astronomer, is to be called "Asia." This is the fourth planet which Mr. Pogson has discovered. For his first discovery, that of "Isis," the Lalande Prize Medal of the Institute of France was awarded to him in the year 1856.—The case of murder to which we alluded above was a very singular one. It appears that the murderer, who was a private in the Native Sappers and Miners, was so enraged against the Jemadar of his regiment for having taken his name off the recommendation roll for promotion, that he shot the Jemadar as the company was falling in for morning drill. The Jemadar died almost immediately after receiving the wound.—Athenæum.

CHINA.

HONG KONG, April 15.—The general tenor of the news for the past fortnight is of a pleasing kind. The subject that continues to engross public attention is the Yang-tze River. The expedition under Vice-Admiral Sir James Hope has done its work, and, as mentioned in our last Overland, the river is open to British trade, and an expedition under Commodore Sribbling is about to start with a view to making the necessary arrangements for that of America. It will be recollected that a deputation from the Shanghai Chamber of Commerce accompanied our expedition by invitation of the Admiral, in order to report upon the commercial prospects of the Yang-tze. Out of much obscurity, it must be confessed that a gleam of hope shines pretty clearly for the future trading prospects of this stream, but the presence of the rebels on both of its banks throughout so large a district of country is simply unfortunate. Nothing has recently transpired to alter the opinion we expressed two weeks ago, that the rebellion was a grievous curse upon the land, possessing as it does no redeeming feature to attract the approval of an outside spectator. The navigation of the Yang-tze kiang presents comparatively few difficulties. The Poyang lake, however, has not come up to the expectations that were formed of it. It is shallow throughout, with the exception of the river's bed that traverses it, so that without an experienced pilot the waters of that lake are not very well available for trading vessels. The expedition, it is understood, found the assistance of Mr. Parkes most valuable, and this not merely owing to his knowledge of Chinese, but to his indefatigable perseverance in seeking for information.

As regards Japan, there is nothing to indicate any change in the state of affairs mentioned in last Overland Mail. There seems to be on all sides a desire to avoid the mistakes which, twenty years ago, we made in dealing with their neighbours the Chinese. The system of always appealing to arms is beginning to be felt as not only unjust, but also as profitless, and this last consideration is at length beginning to have its own weight. The English public will, for some time to come, preserve their acquaintance with Japan through the medium of the illustrated press, an artist having set out on a professional tour through that pleasant land. H.M.S. Actæon will leave this place shortly upon a cruise of survey round about the Japan islands, and will do for those waters what the Saracen has done for the Malay Archipelago. The appointment of Mr. Laurence Oliphant as Japanese Secretary of Legation is likely to result in good, that gentleman's abilities and principles equally fitting him for such a situation.

The past fortnight adds little to our intelligence from Peking. The Emperor, by the last advices, was soon expected to revisit the capital.

In our last overland summary we gave currency to a rumour, which we said contained strong internal evidence of truth, to the effect that the Emperor had been petitioned by the inhabitants of two provinces to remove his court away from Peking, and to carry it into the province of Shensi, with a view to avoiding the humiliation of a return to Peking and of evading that clause in the treaty about the resident ambassador. The real truth, we are now informed, is, that this petition was presented in August last, before Peking was taken, with a view to prevent the court from falling into the hands of the allies, by simply removing to the mountain fastnesses of Shensi in case Peking was attacked by the Allies, and not at all for preventing friendly intercourse with the Western nations. The Emperor answered the petition in the negative. We consider it as well to correct our former statement (which we took from one of our contemporaries on its own merits), as it is calculated to weaken the confidence of the home authorities in the good faith of the Chinese Government, and of their disposition to carry out the Treaty in its integrity.

From Canton there is no particular news.

Turning to Saigon, we have, simultaneously, accounts of victory and distress. Conquerors in the field, the French have yet suffered terribly by disease,—small-pox, fever, and cholera having been prevalent among the troops for some time back. Yet their triumphs are gaily recorded—almost too gaily, which leads to a suspicion that they have been dearly bought. This is the tone in which the success, such as it is, of the French arms is reported:—

"Monsieur le Consul,

"I write in haste to inform you of the brilliant success of our arms in Cochinchina. . . . On the 25th, at daybreak, the 'armée' made an attack upon the grand fort of Ké Hoa, and after a long and severe fight, during which our troops performed prodigies of valour and energy, suffering a loss of more than three hundred men, we carried by assault the central point of resistance of the Annamese army. From this moment the enemy, terrified by the vigour of our attacks, and finding his line of retreat cut off, commenced to fly, abandoning all the defences. The mandarins and soldiers, throwing away their arms, also fled in great disorder. . . .

"To-day the populace came en masse to submit to our rule. We are establishing advanced guards to secure our conquests, and our numerous men-of-war have destroyed the line of forts situated on the banks of the Saigon River, hitherto commanding the water. Free from the tyrannic sway of the mandarins, the labouring classes of this rich country will be able henceforth, under our protection, to pursue their agriculture, and I can assure you that ere long commerce will find here a great centre of action."

From Macao there is little or no news. Endeavours have recently been made to show that the palmist days of Macao are not yet past. We hope not.

In local matters there is little to record. Like the Highlanders of Scotland two centuries back the Chinese people indulge in the dangerous game of clan fights. A clan fight was attempted to be perpetrated in Hong Kong a few days ago, but owing to the interference of the police it was a failure—only one man killed. The Caldwell case is at a kind of standstill; owing to sickness and absence the Commission cannot get up a meeting. The defence has been given in, and nothing now remains but its consideration. The feeling of the community has of late rather been in Mr. Caldwell's favour, and it is true that the Government have lost a valuable servant in his retirement. This we say, of course, without reference to the truth or falsehood of the charges against him. In other respects the Hong Kong world goes on as usual—theatre, cricket, parade-ground, newspaper articles, and horse-riding being all in full vogue, particularly the last.

The emigration office has closed for the season, and Mr. Maxwell, its travelling agent, takes a run to England by this mail on account of his health.—Overland China Mail.

CEYLON.

COLombo, April 29.—During the fortnight the curers and shippers of coffee have availed themselves to the utmost of such glimpses of sunshine as have occurred. Six ships have sailed for London with 38,326 cwt. of plantation coffee, and 6,904 native; together 45,230 cwt. One vessel has also sailed for Sydney, with 1,192 cwt. plantation and 353 native; together 1,545 cwt. The addition thus made to our season's exports consists of 39,518 plantation, and 7,257 native; in all 46,775. This brings our exports from the commencement of the season up to 372,000, against 396,000 to the corresponding period of the previous season; 421,000 in 1859-60, and 412,000 in 1858-59. The decrease is entirely on native, which shows only 82,000 against 121,000; while plantation is 289,000 against 274,000; 266,000, and 289,000 in the previous seasons.

There is a good deal of coffee yet to be shipped, if the weather will only permit its being shipped; and the large crops gathered in the Matelle districts—Kallebokka, Knuckles, &c.—are likely to compensate for the deficiency in the lower and drier districts. But on many of the estates the coffee was on the trees until March, and generally the blossom is late, and the prospects for next crop anything but cheering. In fact we must, we suspect, prepare for a very short crop of plantation. Whether native will retrieve itself remains to be seen, but we can scarcely hope so.

Meantime the financial position of the colony is better than could have been anticipated a few months ago. We yesterday published a table which shows that in the first three months of 1861 the Customs yielded nearly 10,000*l.* more than in the corresponding period of 1860.

It is also generally believed that the revenue of 1860 turned out so well and was so judiciously husbanded that the surplus cannot be much under 50,000*l.*; a sum which will enable Government, to a large extent, to carry out the directions of the Home authorities, by funding the proceeds of the export duties for the special purpose for which they were levied,—that of meeting the interest on railway expenditure. Indeed we believe that the original intention with respect to those duties has been almost if not altogether carried out, and that they have been completely severed from the general revenue.—As regards the railway we have nothing certain from this side to report. We must wait until an easier Money Market enables the representatives of the colony to borrow in London the money required to pay off the shareholders in the company. Meantime Captain Moorsom has renewed his offer of making us a railway for 1,200,000*l.*, and the gallant officer's abilities to fulfil his promise has been ably argued in our columns.

The Governor continues to have the headquarters at Kandy while he visits the various planting districts, to ascertain their wants and the best method of supplying them. We regret to say that the treasurer, Mr. Cauldfield, is seriously—we fear hopelessly—ill, from disease of the heart. It was understood that he was about to retire, and that Mr. Saunders was to act as treasurer. It is now rumoured that Mr. Pennefather is to accompany the Duke of Newcastle to India, in which case we may hope that Major Skinner's claims to be confirmed in the office of Auditor-general of the colony will be favourably considered.

Mr. Justice Sterling goes home by this mail. If not a brilliant lawyer, he was at least a painstaking and a respected judge, irreplaceable in all the relations of life. The place he leaves vacant on the bench is temporarily filled by Mr.

Thomson. The judicial and other appointments will be found noticed elsewhere.

The result of a meeting of the Planters' Association has been that they have recommended an additional penny per bushel on rice to meet the cost of steamers for immigration purposes. It is not at all likely that the idea will be entertained. The Pearl is, however, to be employed for immigration purposes, in breach, we suspect, of the virtual compact with the denizens of the north and east of the island. Captain Graham has reported on the north road, but neither his report, nor that of Mr. Dawson has yet seen the light. The Immigration Board are probably about to imitate the policy of that wonderful body, the Ceylon Chamber of Commerce, whose members go into hysterics at the very idea of giving information to the public that is not at least six months old.

At Kandy there has been a fracas and a concert, discord and harmony succeeding each other.

It is now said that Dr. Simons is about to return to Ceylon. This will save Mr. Boake from the pain which he must have felt in taking the pay and attempting to perform the duties of two offices, each sufficient to employ the best energies of any man or Minister.

Our obituary includes the name of a well known character, Mr. Peter de Silva, clerk of the Kandy coach—the first established in India. We have also to record the death of a young European—Mr. D. Mackellar, who had been only a few months in the country.—Ceylon Overland Observer.

THE STRAITS.

SINGAPORE, April 22.—Brigadier Burn left this on the 9th, in the mail steamer, on sick leave. He embarked under the salute due to his rank. Colonel Babington, now at Pinang, will take the temporary command of the troops serving in the Straits. The Rajah of Tringanu proceeded to Mecca on the 9th in the mail steamer, accompanied by several followers. From the annexed communication it will be seen that the French Naval Commander-in-Chief in the China Sea has established a strict blockade of all parts of the coast of Cochin China with the single exception of the Saigon River.

"Singapore, April 5, 1861.

"Sir,—I have the honour to acquaint your Excellency with the decision recently come to by Vice-Admiral Charner, C. in C. of the French naval force in the China Sea, relative to the blockade of the coast of Cochin China.

"In accordance with that decision the Saigon River alone is at present open to merchant vessels, and the blockade, which was formerly limited to that portion comprised between the 103 degree of longitude, a little to the east of Point Cambodge and the 106 degree near the point of Vi-Noi, is now extended to the whole coast.

"I shall be grateful to your Excellency for any publicity which you may deem it advisable to give to this decision.—I have, &c., Island, Singapore and Malacca."

SAIGON.—H.I.M.'s steamer Granada, Mons. Haselwood, from Saigon the 14th March, arrived at Singapore on the 17th April. By this opportunity we have received the following information: "The outer forts of Mitho are already in possession of the French, and reinforcements having been sent, the fall of that very important place for rice may be hourly expected. In the meantime great quantities of cash have been sent thither, but as these, under existing circumstances, lessen the quantity in Saigon, the value thereof has considerably increased, to which fact the present very extreme rates for rice may be said to be also attributable to a large degree.—Rice was quoted 2 10 dollars, new Benares opium 1,300 dollars.—The French schooner Magenta, bound to Hong Kong, sunk at Cape St. James while at anchor."

DIRECT CADET.—Mr. R. A. Donn passed his examination on the 21st inst. for the Bengal Infantry.

CENTRAL ASIA.

March 9.—The Moollas had written to the other Moollas in the neighbourhood, and were ready to cause a disturbance. Mohamed Ameen also stated in the urzee that he had begged of the Quazee of Kandahar to take some respectable Moollas with him, and to entreat them to accept the fine and to forgive. If he succeeded in this, good and well, otherwise it would be a very difficult job to quiet them. The Ameer having perused the urzee in the durbar, turned towards Sirdar Shere Allee Khan, and said, "See, your brother Mahomed Shurreef Khan has caused another disturbance in Kandahar."—March 10.—The Ameer having sent for the son of Khan Moolah Khan, the Quazee of Cabool, now in Jellalabad with the camp, handed over to him the letter which he had received from Sirdar Mahomed Ameen Khan the other day, and requested him to write a letter for the Quazee of Kandahar, to the effect that he is to try his best and to cool the Moollas' anger. The son of Khan Molla Khan sent for the few mooftees of the court, and having consulted with them about the law, wrote the following letter for the Quazee of Kandahar. "If Sirdar Mahomed Shurreef Khan and his sepoy had insulted the Moollas while they were drunk, then in such case the Sirdar and the sepoy were not liable to punishment, and, according to the Book, if the Moollas would not forgive them they would have to answer for it in both worlds." A letter was also ordered to be written to Mohamed Ameen Khan, telling him to give the enclosed to the Quazee of Kandahar, and to desire Mohamed Shurreef Khan to go to Ghizneen quietly, and there to wait until the Ameer had returned to Cabool.—March 11.—It is ascertained by the Paishkhidmut of the Ameer that a letter was this morning received from Sirdar Mohamed Ufzul Khan from Toorkistan, in which he informed the Ameer that the Jumshadees with some Persian troops from Mamana had made a night attack on Sirdar Ufzul Khan's troops stationed at Khanabad. The chief of the troops at Khanabad, being informed of the Jumshadees' intention, had gone into the fort, which he had previously fortified, leaving the tents, &c., outside; and, on the approach of the Persians, he had received them by opening fire from the guns. Sirdar Mohamed Oomer Khan, the brother of Sirdar Sooltan Ahmed Jan, who was commanding the Persians, seeing that about fifty of his men had fallen in the first fire from the fort, and finding it impregnable, had retreated towards Mamana, carrying with him eight camel-men and syces belonging to Ufzul Hakim's troops, whom he had ordered to be blown up from guns. Sirdar Mohamed Ufzul Khan, having been informed of the above, had ordered four thousand sowars, one battalion and six guns to march under Auleejah Ghoolam Hussun Khan Ufshar and Mohamed Ameen Khan, the grandson of Mah-mood Khan, to Khanabad, and it was reported that Mohamed Ufzul Khan himself intended to go to Khanabad shortly. On the perusal of Ufzul Khan's urzee the Ameer ordered a letter to be written to Sirdar Wullee Mohamed Khan to Cabool, directing him to collect six thousand of Mulkeer people (mercenaries) and to keep himself ready for Toorkistan, as the moment he, the Ameer, returned to Cabool he would send a strong army to Toorkistan.—March 12.—An urzee was received from Sirdar Wullee Mohamed Khan, the Governor of Cabool, in which he informed the Ameer that the Ambassador of the Bookhara Court, accompanied by Shere Allee Khan, the servant of Sirdar Mohamed Ufzul Khan, had arrived quite safe in Cabool on his way to Bookhara, and the following presents, as directed by the Ameer, were made over to the Ambassador in a public durbar for the King of Bookhara:—Khaleelkhanee shawls, two packages; Cashmere shawls, two packs; Cashmere turbans, two packs; one valuable sword with gold hilt, one gold handle knife, two packs of Kum-khab, two ditto of cambric, two ditto of muslin, two ditto of fine white cloth. A khillut, containing a pack of Khaleelkhanee shawls, a ditto of Cashmere shawls, a Kumkhab cloak, and a Mahoot cloak, with six hundred rupees cash for road expenses, were also given to the Ambassador; and one chintz cloak and a muslin turban to each of his followers. The Ambassador, when taking leave, had presented to Sirdar Wullee Mohamed Khan some shawls, cloaks, &c.; and as the road via Bamean was still closed by the snow, he had left for Toorkistan via the Shaik Allee Pass.—March 13.—The following news was received from Kandahar about twelve o'clock at night. Sirdar Mohamed Ameen Khan having been suddenly attacked with a fit, got up from his bed, took his sword, and killed five of his wives. The Khans and Chiefs then close to the palace having heard a noise went into the palace and brought out the Sirdar; as they were bringing him out, he killed on the door of the palace one of his Lallas, a Hindoo servant, and four furrashes (servants employed in cleaning and fitting up the house). The Sirdar was then taken to the durbar room, and hakeems were sent for to look after him. Three days after, when the Sirdar had come to his senses, he was asked how he felt when he was in the fits. Sirdar Mohamed Ameen Khan replied, that on the afternoon of that day he had gone to see a merchant who arrived from Herat, and as he had very kindly offered him a cup of tea he could not refuse, and had accepted it thankfully. From the moment he had taken tea he had commenced feeling giddy and insane. Sowars and sepoys were sent after the merchant, but in vain, as he had left Kandahar the very same day for Herat. The Ameer handed over the news letter to Sirdar Shere Allee Khan, and remarked, "The enemy has left nothing in completing his scheme, but God is great; He has secured Mohamed Ameen Khan to Himself."—March 14.—The following account was received through an urzee from Sirdar Mohamed Ufzul Khan, from Toorkistan. Shooja-ood-deen Khan, son of Meer Shah, Hakim of Buddukhsan, had lately gone to his uncle Yeosuf Allee Khan, the ruler of Ristak, who was keeping him like his own son. As Shooja-ood-deen was an insane man, Meer Shah wrote to his brother not to keep him long, fearing he might play some tricks with him. On this Yeosuf Allee told his brother in reply that it would be very unfair on his part if he were to shut the door against his own nephew, and tell him to go home. It was not very long after this that Shooja-ood-deen made one of Yeosuf Allee's sons turn against his father, and he himself joining with him and getting about two hundred sowars to join them, they laid a plot. On a certain fixed day, Shooja-ood-deen and Yeosuf Allee's son, with two hundred sowars, made a sudden rush into the palace and killed Yeosuf Allee Khan, and thus made themselves masters of Ristak. The Chief and Khans of Ristak lost no time in closing the gates of the palace, and sending the news to Meer Shah to Buddukhsan, and to Sirdar Mohamed Auzim Khan to Khanabad. Mohamed Auzim Khan, who is a great friend with the Hakim of Buddukhsan, ordered his two battalions, two hundred sowars, and two guns, to march to Ristak, with instructions to keep Ristak besieged until Meer Shah had arrived there from Buddukhsan, and if he had already reached there, then to march back to Khanabad. The moment Meer Shah was informed of this tragedy, he with his troops marched out from Fyzabad, a place in Buddukhsan, and surrounded Ristak. As Meer Shah had arrived at Ristak before the troops of Auzim Khan would reach there, he thanked them with the Sirdar's compliments and desired them to march back, as he would soon see the matter settled. At first Meer Shah wrote to his son Shoojaooddeen and his nephew to surrender; but having been told, in reply, that they would not do so until they were promised the rulership of Ristak, he issued an order to his sepoys to kill Shoojaooddeen and all his followers as soon as they had surrendered. Meer Shah sent them word that they were to rest assured that on their surrendering he would make them great men, and punish only those of their followers who had stained their hands in cold blood. Shoojaooddeen, his brother, and all their followers were nicely taken in: they surrendered themselves to Meer Shah and asked his pardon. The moment Shoojaooddeen and Yeosuf Allee's son went to pay their respects to Meer Shah they were cut to pieces, some of their followers were taken prisoners, while the others made their escape. The bodies of the above-named rebels were sent to Buddukhsan to be buried, and the news was communicated to Sirdar Mohamed Auzim Khan.—March 15.—It is ascertained from a letter received from Kandahar that Sirdar Mohamed Ameen Khan having appointed Sirdar Mohamed Ismael Khan as Governor of Kandahar during his absence, had left for Gurrishk with two battalions of infantry, four thousand sowars, and four guns. It is said that Mohamed Shurreef Khan had written to his brother Mohamed Ameen Khan, that Meer Ufzul Khan has got about ten thousand Persian troops, and as every day the troops were arriving from Herat it would be advisable if troops were sent from Kandahar to check their advance from Furrah. The Ameer made over the news-letter to Sirdar Shere Allee Khan, and desired him to make as much haste as possible to send troops to Kandahar.—March 16.—A merchant, who has just arrived from Toorkistan, says that Meer Moozuffer Shah, the present King of Bokhara, has got about four hundred thousand new pice ready in his mint, and about twelve hundred thousand more are going to be coined. The present King is said to be very popular and just. From Kokan the merchant gives the following account. The King of Kokan had sent about twelve thousand of his troops under his Wuzeer, Kanait Shah, to Tushkund, to fight with the Russians if they intended to advance on Kokan, but the poor Wuzeer was suddenly taken ill and died. On this the King ordered the brother of the Wuzeer to take the command of six thousand troops, and to wait in the Huzrut Sooltan's fort, and to send the remaining six thousand to Kokan.—March 17.—The durbar was held as usual in the garden of Ghoolam Heider Khan. Sirdar Shere Allee Khan having consulted with Ghoolam Mohamed Khan Mookhtear, stated before the Ameer that it appeared from letters received from Kandahar that troops are urgently required. Mohamed of Ghizneen and Sirdar Futteh Mohamed Khan were directed to send their available troops to Kandahar. The Ameer, after paying attention a little to the subject, said:—"Do as you like, but send the troops at once to Kandahar." Ubdoolrazak Khan, Moostoufee, was accordingly desired to write two letters, one for Mirza Mullik Mohamed of Ghizneen to collect as many Mulkea people (mercenaries) as possible, and to send them to Kandahar; and the other to Sirdar Futteh Mohamed Khan, son of Mohamed Ukbar Khan at Kelat-i-Ghilzee, directing him to send as many troops as he could spare to Mohamed Ameen Khan.—March 19.—The following are the contents of Sirdar Mohamed Allee Khan's urzee received to day from Bakheel: "On my arrival at Bakheel, I was disappointed to find that Utta Mohamed and his followers had deserted the village and had gone to Mohamed Shah Khan's fort. Having left some troops at Bakheel, I made a forced march and took Utta Mohamed by surprise: here a skirmish took place, in which about twenty men on our side and nearly double the number on the enemy's side were killed and wounded. Utta Mohamed with his family effected his escape from the fort to the Kafir Seah Posh pass, leaving all his property in the fort. His son, with a number of his followers, was taken prisoner and sent to Bakheel." On the perusal of the urzee, the Ameer ordered a letter to be written to Sirdar Mohamed Allee Khan, directing him to send the son of Utta Mohamed to Jellalabad, and after he had made good arrangements at that place, to march back to the camp.—Delhi Gazette.

In consequence of the increased pressure of scarcity in the Jeypore territories, dacoities and robberies have spread to such an extent, that special orders have been given to the surrounding rajahs to station bodies of horse upon their borders, to assist in suppressing them.—Englishman.

MUSKETRY IMPLEMENTS.

Adj. gen.'s Office, Simla, April 11.—It having been brought to the notice of the C. in C. that in several instances musketry instruction implements have been taken from one station to another on the march of a regiment, officers commanding corps in H.M.'s British and Indian services are informed that this practice is directly contrary to regulations. Musketry implements are barrack, not regimental property, and are to be made over to barrackmasters, with all other barrack furniture, whenever a regiment is about to leave a station.

Court Martial.

LIEUT. R. G. SMYTH, BENGAL ENGINEERS.
Adj. Gen.'s Office, Simla, April 3, 1861.—At a General Court Martial assembled at Lucknow on Jan. 3, 1861, Lieut. Ralph Graham Smyth, of H.M. corps of Bengal engineers, was arraigned on the following charge:—

Charge.—For conduct unbecoming the character of an officer and a gentleman, and to the prejudice of good order and military discipline, in the following instances.

I. In having, at Lucknow, on the night of the 11th of October, 1860, at a public entertainment, been in a state of intoxication, and there behaved in such a manner as to lead to his personal chastisement by Mr. J. M. Scott, a resident of that place.

II. In not having taken proper and sufficient measures to obtain redress for the assault on him, as set forth in the first instance, or to clear his character as regards that circumstance with his superior or commanding officer.

Finding.—“Guilty” of the charge preferred against him in the first instance, with the exception of the words in the instance “and there behaved in such a manner as to lead to his personal chastisement by Mr. J. M. Scott, a resident of that place,” of which the court does acquit him, and is “Not Guilty” of the charge in the second instance, of which it does acquit him.

The Court would remark that though it is amply proved that Mr. Scott did strike Lieutenant Smyth, still there was no part of Lieutenant Smyth's conduct which should have “led,” or which warranted Mr. Scott to strike or assault him. It is with this impression that the Court has absolved Lieutenant Smyth from criminality on this point.

Sentence.—To be reprimanded.

(Signed) W. O'G. HALY, Colonel,
Lieut. col., 38th regt.

Lucknow, Jan. 11, 1861.

Revised finding.—The Court having carefully considered the contents of the letter put before it, begs most respectfully to adhere to its former finding.

With reference to the second charge, the Court would now remark, that in giving its finding on that charge, it was guided by the evidence adduced thereon, by which it appears that the prisoner took as his guide the 17th Article of War, and fully complied with the provisions contained in it.

Revised sentence.—The Court now sentences the prisoner, Lieutenant Ralph Graham Smyth, of H.M.'s corps of Bengal engineers, to be severely reprimanded.

President.

REMARKS BY H.E. THE C. IN C. IN INDIA.

The C. in C. is unable to approve either the finding or sentence of this court martial.

The evidence, which was not met by any counter evidence, proved that the prisoner aggravated his offence of being intoxicated at a public entertainment, by conduct towards two defenceless ladies, which, according to the usages of society, can only be considered as ungentlemanlike in the extreme, and of which the direct consequence was that one lady left the prisoner's society, and the other called to a stranger, and in her alarm beckoned generally for assistance.

The prisoner admits that he was so intoxicated that he retained no recollection of his misconduct on the occasion in question; and he actually made an apology for having insulted a lady.

The direct and immediate consequence of the appeal of the lady for assistance, was the assault on the prisoner, set forth in the first instance of the charge.

A disgraceful personal conflict in public then ensued.

The C. in C. is at a loss to understand the finding of the Court, that the prisoner's misconduct did not lead to the assault on him. The Court have disregarded the direct and credible evidence that it did so, which is uncontradicted by any evidence whatever.

As regards the second instance of the charge, the evidence proved that Lieut. Smyth made no report to his commanding officer that he had been grossly insulted by personal chastisement.

The C. in C. cannot agree with the Court that the prisoner complied with the 17th article of war, in the mode which he adopted for setting his character right. It was for Lieut. Smyth's commanding officer, and no one else, to judge how the disgraceful insult which he had drawn upon himself was to be atoned for.

Under these circumstances the C. in C. is constrained to state that the court martial have given a finding and sentence which neither upholds the rights of discipline, order, or gentlemanlike conduct.

The officer commanding at Lucknow will severely reprimand Lieut. Smyth, of the Bengal Engineers, for having been guilty of conduct unbecoming the character of an officer and a gentleman, in having been drunk at a public entertainment at Lucknow, in accordance with the finding and sentence of the Court.

Lieut. Smyth will then be released from arrest and return to his duty.

Batta and Allowances to Officers R.N. in China.

To H.E. the Rt. Hon. the Gov. gen. of India in Council.

MARINE, No. 12.

MY LORD,—Having considered in Council the practice now observed of paying batta and house-rent allowances to officers of the royal navy serving on the East India and China station, under the regulations founded upon the despatch of the late Court of Directors, bearing date March 10, 1852, I have come to the determination that those allowances should cease with respect to all officers hereafter appointed to, or employed with, H.M.'s squadron on that naval station.

2nd. I have therefore resolved in Council that no such batta and no such house-rent allowance shall be paid to any officer who may be appointed or may succeed, after Jan. 1, 1861, to any of the appointments, offices, or stations enumerated or comprised in the above-mentioned regulations, or to any officer, or to the ward-room, or lieutenants' mess of any ship or vessel which shall be commissioned after Jan. 1, 1861, or shall arrive within the geographical limits laid down by those regulations after the same date.

3rd. I have communicated this resolution for the information of the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty, and you will be careful that it is duly observed and carried into effect.—I have, &c.,

Medal for Services in China.

Mty. Dept., Fort William, April 19.—No. 347.—H.E. the Gov. gen. in Council is pleased to publish, for general information, the foll. paras. of a military letter from the Right hon. the Secy. of State for India, No. 106 of Feb. 28:—

1. H.M. has been pleased to give directions that a medal should be prepared to commemorate the successes of H.M.'s British and Indian forces, naval and military, employed in the operations in China, which terminated in the capture of the city of Canton, on Dec. 29, 1857, and also in the operations which have recently terminated in the capture of the city of Peking and the restoration of peace.

2. H.M. has also been pleased to command—
1st.—That a clasp, to be attached to the said medal, inscribed, “Canton, 1857,” be granted to such of H.M.'s forces aforesaid as were employed in the operations undertaken against the city of Canton.

2ndly. That a clasp, to be attached to the said medal, inscribed “Taku Forts, 1860,” be granted to such of H.M.'s forces aforesaid as were employed in the capture of the Taku Forts; and 3rdly. That a clasp, to be attached to the said medal, inscribed “Pekin, 1860,” be granted to such of H.M.'s forces aforesaid as were employed in the capture of Peking.

3. H.M. has further been pleased to command that the medal be the same as that already granted by H.M. in commemoration of the operations formerly undertaken in China, omitting the date 1842 inscribed thereon, and that it be suspended from a ribbon of the same width and pattern as that worn with that medal; and that a clasp, to be attached to the medal, inscribed, “China, 1842,” be granted, in addition to the clasps already enumerated, to such of H.M.'s forces aforesaid then employed in the service of H.M. and of the E.I. Co. who have received the medal granted by H.M. in commemoration of the former operations, and have served in the operations which have recently terminated, in order that they may not lose the reward and record of their former services.

4. The requisite instructions will be issued by the Gen. Cg. in C. to officers comg. H.M.'s forces in China to enable H.E. to give effect to H.M.'s gracious intentions, by the preparation of medal rolls.

5. In the event, however, of any of the corps having returned to India before the receipt of such instructions, your Govt. should direct the preparation and transmission of the medal rolls of such corps.

6. In the preparation of these rolls care should be taken to particularise the officers and soldiers who may be in possession of the China medal of 1842, as in such case clasps only are on the present occasion to be awarded.

Accounts—Punjab.—Periodical Visits to Local Treasuries.

FINANCIAL DEPARTMENT.

From C. E. Chapman, Esq., Offic. Accountant, Punjab, to C. H. Lushington, Esq., Sec. to the Govt. of India, Financial Dept., Calcutta, dated Lahore, Nov. 5, 1860.

SIR,—I have the honour to submit, for the consideration of Government, whether it would not promote greater efficiency in the general department of account, and ensure accuracy in the preparation of individual accounts, if the several accounts or local auditors, according to the arrangement, sanctioned by H.E. in Council in the Financial Department Resolution of Aug. 18, 1860, were empowered and enjoined to make periodical visits to the local treasuries in their jurisdiction.

2. The principle of departmental inspection is recognised in all other branches of the administration, and, unless the same principle is extended to the department of account, one important element of success will be wanting in it.

3. At present the accountant has no opportunity of acquainting himself with the internal arrangement of a district treasury. He can only judge of the efficiency or non-efficiency of its management by the periodical returns submitted to his office; and when these are rendered unpunctually or incorrectly, although he knows that there is something wrong in the working of the district office, he has no other remedy but remonstrance, and, as a last resource, a report to the local Government. It is most difficult to induce district officers to take any interest in this branch of their work, nor is this to be wondered at, considering how numerous and onerous are their other duties. The youngest and least experienced assistant is frequently put in charge of large treasuries like those of Delhi or Umballa, and has to gain his experience as he best may, to the occasional detriment of the interest of Government and the public. Now, without at all interfering with the direct responsibility of the district officer, the accountant might, it appears to me, exercise a more immediate control over the personnel of the district treasuries than he now does, and this by occasional inspections and supervision of the work. Besides this, he would thus obtain for himself a much more practical knowledge of his work, and be in a position to offer occasional suggestions for the more efficient transactions of treasury business.

4. The immediate occasion of the present recommendation is the discovery in one of the Punjab treasuries of a system under which accounts have, for a series of years, been falsified so as to mislead this office.

5. Happily no fraud has been detected, but the following extract from the Report of the Deputy-commissioner, addressed to the Commissioner of his division, will show the extent to which deception had been successfully practised:—

"When the statement above referred to had been completed, they revealed the actual state of the deposit accounts. Innumerable items were shown to have been overpaid, many of them having been repaid two or three times over. The account particulars of balances of deposit hitherto annually submitted were found to be full of errors, and to have been falsified, in order to make them tally with the balances shown in the treasury accounts. And the items on account of road fund, chowkedaree, tullubana, &c., had never been consolidated, in accordance with the standing orders."

6. This state of things, however deplorable, could never have been detected without a careful scrutiny of original records, and this the accountant has no opportunity of undertaking.

7. If the requirement of his department are complied with in respect to forms, vouchers, and authorities, he is obliged to accord his audit to the accounts which are submitted for his examination.

A copy of the letter addressed by me to the Financial Commissioner in connection with the foregoing case is annexed for your information.—I have, &c.

(Signed) C. E. CHAPMAN,
Offic. Accountant, Punjab.

From C. E. Chapman, Esq., Offic. Accountant, Punjab, to R. N. Cust, Esq., Offic. Financial Commissioner, Lahore, dated Lahore, Nov. 1, 1860.

SIR,—I have the honour to state, in reply to your letter, No. 4,406, dated 10th instant, that two of the subordinate clerks of this office are constantly employed in checking the various deposit registers, and it is their duty to see that more is not repaid on account of any particular number than is at the credit of it. When excess payments are discovered, a correspondence is immediately initiated, with the view of effecting recovery or correction. In such cases it is usually found that the payment was made on account of some other number than that originally stated. If the corrected number is at credit, the correction is admitted, and the payment passed into the accounts.

2. It is not possible for this office to determine the validity of the claim which is made. All it can require is a voucher for the charge, and if this is forthcoming, and the account shows that a balance exists against the particular number, the charge is recognised.

3. The subject of deposits has occupied much attention in this office; but it is felt that control to be efficient must be local. The accountant, as you are aware, deals only with accounts or documents which are submitted to him. These may be correctly prepared, or they may be booked so as to pass his scrutiny. He knows nothing personally of the internal arrangements of the several treasury officers; has no opportunity of inspecting original records and treasury offices, and their establishments are generally unknown to him. If the conditions of his department are fulfilled, he must accord his audit to the public accounts.

4. I would submit, with deference, that commissioners might with advantage be required on each occasion of visiting a district personally to inspect and report on the deposit accounts of the treasury, and to apply such remedy for the correction of mistakes as he may consider necessary.

5. In the case of the Jhung accounts, it is satisfactory that, notwithstanding the confusion into which the deposit had fallen from repayments being charged against erroneous numbers, no loss has been occasioned. In the only instances in which bona fide excess payments had occurred, either the Government or the Local Fund were the recipients. The laborious investigation which has been effected by Mr. Blythe, originated in letters written from this office, and paragraph 5 of his communication reveals the system of booking by which the office had been so long misled.

6. Under the instructions of this office, in Circular No. 103, dated April 26, 1860, the three deposit registers (revenue, civil, and foudary), have been consolidated into a single form, and it is hoped that this concentration will facilitate supervision on the part of the Deputy-commissioner and divisional superintendent.

The enclosure of a letter is herewith returned.—I have, &c. (Signed) C. E. CHAPMAN,
Offic. Accountant, Punjab.

Forwarded to the Accountant gen. to the Govt. of India for report.—By order, &c., (Signed) C. H. LUSHINGTON,
Sec. to Govt. of India.

Fort William, Financial Dep., Nov. 15, 1860.
Fort William, Accountant gen.'s Office, General Dep., Nov. 24, 1860.
Accountant gen.'s Report on Docket No. 1,110, dated Nov. 15, 1860, from the Sec. to Govt. of India, Financial Dep.

I quite concur in looking upon the occasional and regular inspection of accounts and books as a very material part of a proper system of financial control, and the local auditors will be in the best position for carrying out this duty, although the Audit Board should also itself organise some general system of inspection. It is probable that this subject will be taken up by the Budget and Audit Committee.

2. The particular mode in which the accounts have been falsified in the Punjab treasury has long been known to have been extensively resorted to in the older provinces. The treasury rules provide for it, by directing payments to be entered by the treasury office at the time of payment against the entry in the receipt register where the amount is credited; but, as observed by the Punjab accountant, if rules for the local detail of business are not attended to, the accountant has no means of ascertaining the circumstance. It is, however, the recognised duty of Commissioners on their tours personally to inspect the treasuries and books, and to see that they are properly kept, and they should be held responsible for the consequences of any omission,

(Signed) E. DRUMMOND,
Acct. gen. to Govt. of India.

From C. H. Lushington, Esq., Sec. to Govt. of India, Financial Dep., to the Offic. Accountant, Punjab.

Fort William, April 10, 1861.

SIR,—In reply to your letter No. 1,796, dated Nov. 5, 1860, submitting a proposition that it would promote greater efficiency in the General Department of Account and insure accuracy in the preparation of individual accounts, if the several accountants (or local auditors according to the arrangement sanctioned by this Government on Aug. 18, 1860), were empowered and enjoined to make periodical visits to the local treasuries in their jurisdiction, I am desired to inform you that the Governor general in Council is pleased to approve of your proposal, and directs that it be acted on at once.

2. The Budget and Audit Committee will be requested to frame some general rules for giving effect to the proposal, which will be communicated to you hereafter.—I have, &c.,

The Madras Railway.

Fort St. George, April 8.—The Government concur in the opinion of the consulting engineer for railways that a "single line of railway between Arcunum and Cuddapah may be expected to meet all the requirements of the country for many years to come." In this view, looking to the very remote prospect of a double line, and to the necessity of economising expenditure in the construction of railways to the utmost, they consider that the foundations, no less than superstructure of the masonry works on the N.W. line, should be restricted to those for a single line only. The consulting engineer will take measures accordingly. It is remarked that the saving for the line from Arcunum to Cuddapah, by adopting the works above the foundation to a single line was calculated by the consulting engineer, in his letter of 11th ult., at 30 per cent. on the estimates, or at three lacs of rupees, the saving by restricting the foundations also to those for a single line will be 40 per cent., or four lacs.

FINANCIAL DEPARTMENT.

The following Extract from the Proceedings of the Government of India, dated March 28, 1861, is published for general information with reference to the Notification of April 17, 1861, published at page 679 of the Government Gazette of 18th idem:—

EXTRACT from the Proceedings of the Government of India, in the Financial Department, dated March 28, 1861:—

From A. D. Robertson, Esq., Acting Sec. to Govt. of Bombay, to C. H. Lushington, Esq., Sec. to Govt. of India.

No. 1,114, dated March 8, 1861.

REVENUE DEPARTMENT.

SIR,—Considerable inconvenience is found to arise from the civil auditor's interpretation of the rule laid down by the Govt. of India, in the letter No. 4,500, dated Aug. 13, 1858, wherein they state that "when an officer had, on application for pension, been declared by the medical authorities to be unfit for further service, that officer should at once be discharged, and that, if a pension was subsequently granted to him, it should count from the several dates mentioned in the Resolution of the Supreme Govt. of Feb. 21, 1856, of which those quoted in the margin* apply to the pensions granted by the local Government.

2. The civil auditor holds that, under the above-quoted instructions, he is at liberty to pass the salary of pensioned officers up to the date of the medical certificate; but, inasmuch as the nature of the medical officer's certificate cannot be foreseen, the heads of departments are precluded from making arrangements for filling up the contemplated vacancy until it is known whether the applicant for pension has been declared by the medical officer fit or unfit for further active service, and it is found frequently necessary to keep him on in the performance of the duties of his office until provision can be made for filling up the situation. But this is never otherwise than a temporary arrangement, and made solely for the benefit of the public service, and it would save references to Govt. and correspondence, were the civil auditor directed to relax his interpretation of the instructions of Aug. 13, 1858, which have already been quoted to the above extent, and to pass the salaries of pensioned officers up to the date of their ceasing to be borne on the effective establishment.

Financial Dept., Fort William, March 28.

RESOLUTION.—The Gov. gen. in Council is pleased, on the recommendation of the Govt. of Bombay, and under the circumstances stated, to allow the salaries of pensioned officers to be passed up to the date of their ceasing to be borne on the effective establishment; but it should be understood that it is the duty of the head of an office, as a rule, to give a man his discharge when his certificate of incapacity for further effective service is rendered, exceptional cases being reported to the local Governments.

C. H. LUSHINGTON,

Sec. to Govt. of India.

* Clauses I. and II. of paragraph 2 of Resolution.

I. In cases of pensions sanctioned by the Government of India or the local Governments, in which the parties applying for pension are still in the employment of Government, it has been usual for the pensions to commence from the date on which the pensioners may cease to be borne on the effective establishment.

II. In cases of pensions sanctioned by the Government of India, or the local Government, in which parties are not in the employment of Government at the time of applying for pension, the pensions commence from the date of the orders sanctioning the pensions.

Official Papers.

THE AMALGAMATION SCHEME.

Fort William, Milly. Dept., April 10.—1. H.E. the Viceroy and Gov. gen. of India in Council publishes, for general information, H.M.'s warrant, dated the 16th of January last, for the formation of staff corps in each of the Presidencies of Bengal, Madras, and Bombay, and the subjoined despatches, recently received from H.M.'s Sec. of State for India, announcing the Queen's gracious intentions regarding the officers and men of H.M.'s Indian forces.

2. H.M.'s Govt. have laid down the general principles of this important measure; but, considering that various questions and points of detail, affecting the interests of the army, might arise, which could be best considered in India, have entrusted the Gov. gen. of India in Council, in communication with H.E. the C. in C. in India, with full discretion to act as may be deemed best for the public service, and have authorised him to frame such orders as may be necessary to give full effect to the intentions of H.M.'s Govt.

3. The Gov. gen. in Council has now the satisfaction of announcing to the European officers and men of the Indian forces the conditions prescribed and the offers made to them upon their amalgamation with H.M.'s general forces; whereby two armies will be united, which severally have rendered the most signal services to their Queen and country.

4. [Despatch 28, para. 3.] H.M.'s Govt. have expressed an anxious desire to preserve the proud recollections of distinguished service which belong especially to the older regts. of each Presidency, and to incorporate with H.M.'s army corps which have so greatly contributed to the acquisition and maintenance of H.M.'s dominions in the East.

5. [Non-commissioned officers and men. Despatch 27, para. 11. Despatch 28, paras. 1, 7, 10, 19, 22, 23, 26. Despatch 29, para. 10.] In order to effect these measures consistently with the determination which has been previously made known to the army, that no man shall have his present terms of service altered except with his own consent, the Gov. gen. in Council, under the authority of H.M.'s Govt., hereby offers to all warrant officers, non-commissioned officers, and men, without exception, belonging to the Eur. art., inf., and sappers and miners, of the three Presidencies, to the Eur. cav. in Bengal, inc. the Lahore Lt. horse, to the German soldiers of the 3rd Bombay Eur. regt., and to all men in the depots of the Indian forces at Dum-Dum, Barrackpore, and other stations, the option of accepting general service on the ordinary conditions of soldiers enlisted for the art., inf., and cav. of H.M.'s line army, with a bounty to all who are not of warrant rank, at the rates to be presently stated.

6. Soldiers who now volunteer will have the option of choosing whether their future pensions shall be reckoned according to the regulations of H.M.'s army, or according to those of the Indian forces. Their choice may be declared at any time within three months of the date of volunteering.

Soldiers who now volunteer will have the privilege of counting their past service towards completion of their contract service and for pension, under whichever regulation they may choose.

7. [Despatch 29, Paras. 2, 10, 12.] The non-com. officers and soldiers of the artillery of each Presidency, who, under the above conditions, may be willing to transfer their services absolutely to the royal regts. of artillery of Bengal, Madras, and Bombay, will be formed into new troops and batteries composed of men serving under the same conditions as those of the royal artillery. The soldiers who may decline to accept the offer now made will be formed into batteries, which will remain under their original conditions, and, as the numbers of the men diminish by casualties, the batteries will be gradually diminished in number, and will finally disappear.

8. [Despatch 30, para. 14.] Non-com. officers and men who have been transferred from other corps to the corps of sappers and miners, and who may now volunteer under the conditions of H.M.'s general service, will receive the rates of bounty stated in paragraph 20. The acceptance of bounty will not involve their removal from the sappers and miners. Those who decline to accept the offer now made may continue with that corps on their present conditions.

9. [Despatch 28, para. 19.] The European cavalry will be formed into three regts. of Light Dragoons of H.M.'s general army, to consist of the men who may now volunteer on the conditions of general service, and these men will have the option of joining any one of the three regts. of Light Dragoons to be now formed. These will be designated respectively the 19th, 20th, and 21st Regts. of Light Dragoons.

10. [Despatch 28, paras. 10, 21.] The non-commissioned officers and men of the European cavalry and the Lahore light horse, who may prefer the existing conditions of Indian service, will be placed in a regt. of cavalry to be formed for that purpose as a local regt., with officers selected from those who may not volunteer for line service.

11. [Despatch 28, paras. 10, 11, 17, 23, 26.] It is desired by H.M.'s Govt. to maintain as integral regts. the three oldest European inf. regts. of the Bengal Presidency, and all of the three regts. of the Madras and the Bombay Presidencies, and to keep the men who are now in each of those corps, and who may volunteer for H.M.'s general service in the regts. which, when transferred to the line, will represent those to which they now respectively belong.

12. [Despatch 28, para. 10.] The men of the 4th and 6th Bengal European regts. and the men of the Bengal European inf. of the depot at Barrackpore will be allowed to volunteer for any one of the three new regts. of the line in Bengal. The men of the Bengal European light cavalry of the depot at Barrackpore will be allowed to volunteer for any one of the three new regts. of the cavalry of the line. The men of the cav. and inf. arm of the depot at Barrackpore, who do not volunteer, will join the local regt. of their arm.

13. H.M. having graciously determined to mark her estimation of the services of her Indian armies by conferring the designation of "royal" upon three of the European regts., and by selecting for this honour one regt. from each Presidency,—the selection of which has been left by H.M. to the judgment and discretion of the Gov. of India—the Viceroy and Gov. gen. in Council has much gratification in announcing that the following regts. will henceforward bear the honourable designation of "royal" regts. :—

The 1st Bengal Fusiliers.

The 1st Madras Fusiliers.

The 1st Bombay Fusiliers.

14. [Despatch 28, paras. 17, 23, 26, 29.] The three older regts. in the several Presidencies will thus be converted into regts. of H.M.'s general army, and will be numbered and designated as follows :—

The 101st Regt. of Foot (Royal Bengal Fusiliers).

The 102nd Regt. of Foot (Royal Madras Fusiliers).

The 103rd Regt. of Foot (Royal Bombay Fusiliers).

The 104th Regt. of Foot (Bengal Fusiliers).

The 105th Regt. of Foot (Madras Light Infantry).

The 106th Regt. of Foot (Bombay Light Infantry).

The 107th Regt. of Foot (Bengal Infantry).

The 108th Regt. of Foot (Madras Infantry).

The 109th Regt. of Foot (Bombay Infantry).

15. [Despatch 28, paras. 17, 23, 26.] The corps transferred to H.M.'s service will retain all honorary distinctions which they have won. These will be borne on appointments, and colours, or in the army list, in such manner as H.M.'s Govt. may think best suited to the arm of the service to which the corps belongs.

16. [Despatch 28, paras. 10, 12, 24, 27.] The non-commissioned officers and men of the infantry, who may prefer the conditions of Indian service, will be placed in one or more regiments of infantry to be formed as local regiments in each presidency, with officers selected from those who may not volunteer for line service.

17. [Despatch 28, para. 10; despatch 29, para. 10.] In the artillery, cavalry (including the Lahore Lt. horse), and infantry of the Indian forces, there are many men who volunteered from regiments of the line. To these men the Gov. gen. in Council allows the option of returning to the regiments, whether of cavalry or infantry, from which they volunteered, if those regiments are now in India; or of transfer to other regts. of British cav. or infantry serving in India, or to the regiments to be now retained of the arm to which such men belong. The men of this class electing to be transferred to British regiments serving in India will not receive bounty, having received it on entering the Indian service. To those who accept the conditions of H.M.'s general service now offered, bounty will be given on the same terms as to the other men in the Indian service. The volunteers here alluded to will be further allowed the option of discharge, if unwilling to remain in the service. Those who prefer the existing conditions of the Indian service will be allowed to remain with a local regiment.

18. The non-commissioned officers of artillery, of the 4th and 5th Bengal European cav., and of the 4th and 6th Bengal European inf., who volunteer for the new regts. of the line, will carry their rank with them, and be supernumeraries in the regts. for which they volunteer; being made effective in their respective ranks, as vacancies occur, in the proportion of three appointments to four vacancies.

19. [General tenor of Despatch 28.] To the warrant officers, non-commissioned officers, and men employed in the several depots of the army, to the non-commissioned officers serving with native regts., and to all other men borne on the unattached list in Bengal, and the list of effective supernumeraries in Madras and Bombay, the Gov. gen. in Council offers the option of accepting the conditions of H.M.'s general service, according to the arm of the service to which they belong; with bounty to all men not of warrant rank, who under the usual conditions of service would be entitled to bounty; or of remaining on the conditions of the Indian service if they prefer to do so.

20. [Despatch 28, para. 10.] The rates of bounty to be issued will be as follows :—

	Rs.
To men who have more than 4 years to serve from Feb. 18, 1861	50
To men who have more than 3 and less than 4 years to serve from same date	40
To men who have more than 2 and less than 3 years to serve from same date	30
To men who have more than 1 and less than 2 years to serve from same date	20
To men who have 1 year or less to serve from same date	10
Any expense caused to a man by his transfer will be reimbursed to him. No kit, or compensation in lieu of kit, will be given.

21. The immediate issue of bounty to men volunteering is hereby authorised, on their making the declaration appended to this G.O. before a justice of the peace or magistrate.

22. [Despatch 28, para. 9.] The earliest measures will be taken in the three presidencies, under the orders of their Excellencies the Commanders in Chief, to ascertain the wishes of the men; and the result will be reported to the Govt. of India without delay. The C. in C. in India may take the necessary measures for carrying out the final arrangements for the new constitution of the European forces of H.M.'s Indian army, and for the disposal of the men who do not volunteer.

23. [Commissioned officers. Despatch 27, para. 3.] In the execution of the measures to bring about the proposed amalgamation, it is the intention of H.M.'s Govt. that the pledge that due regard shall be paid to the rights and claims of the officers of H.M.'s Indian forces shall be scrupulously adhered to.

24. [Despatch 31, para. 2, 4.] H.M. has been graciously pleased to signify her intention to give to every officer of her Indian armies a Royal Commission under the Sign Manual, conferring rank and command in H.M.'s army in any part of the world. Nominal rolls of all the officers of the armies of the three Presidencies will be immediately transmitted by the several Govts. of India to H.M.'s Sec. of State for India, in order to the preparation of the new commissions.

25. [Despatch 29, para. 2, VI.] In order to carry out to the full extent the plan which has been determined upon by H.M.'s Govt. for the assimilation and ultimate consolidation of the Indian regiments of artillery with the royal artillery, the organisation of the Indian regiments will be as follows :—The Bengal artillery will be formed into seven brigades, the Madras artillery into four brigades, and the Bombay artillery into three brigades, in all fourteen brigades, each with the strength of officers detailed in the margin.* Regimental promotions in the artillery requisite to complete the formation of brigades on the new organisation will be made without delay, with effect from the 18th Feb., 1861, the date of the receipt of the despatches by the Govt. of India.

26. [Despatch 27, para. 9.] The officers of artillery holding appointments in the ordnance department, including superintendents of ordnance manufacturing establishments, will be seconded, and the promotions consequent thereupon will be made from the same date.

27. [Despatch 29, paras. 4, 5.] Under the royal artillery organisation, the colonel's allowance is drawn by colonels commandant, and of these there will be seven only under the new organisation in place of twelve, who now draw colonels' allowance in Bengal; in Madras four in place of seven; and in Bombay three in place of five.

Eventually, the assimilation will be carried out in this respect also. The five officers who will be supernumerary in Bengal, the three in Madras, and the two in Bombay, will continue to receive colonel's allowance, and the necessary reduction will be gradually carried out by promoting only three officers to every four vacancies in the number of those receiving colonel's allowance, until the supernumeraries shall have been absorbed.

28. The colonels now to be made colonels commandant, and the colonels in excess of the new establishment, who are also in receipt of the colonel's allowance, will take regimental rank, as colonels commandant, from the date on which they respectively received the colonel's allowance. All general officers not being on the new fixed establishment of colonels commandant, and not drawing colonel's allowance, will be supernumerary or unattached, as at present.

29. [Despatch 29, para. 6.] Colonels of artillery under the new organisation, who, not being colonels commandant, will not draw colonel's allowance, will be permitted to draw in India the pay and allowances fixed for the rank of regimental colonel (except the colonel's allowance). On furlough, they will receive the furlough pay of colonel, viz., 25s. a day, and they will enjoy the privileges of regimental colonels in being permitted to reside in England, if not required in India, without forfeiting their position on the effective list.

* 1 colonel commandant, 2 colonels, 4 lieutenant-colonels, 8 captains, 9 2nd captains, including an adjutant, 24 lieutenants.

Also note that F, an officer of 12 years' service, by joining the staff corps, passed over I, his senior in the army, and in his former cadre.

The general list will then stand thus:—

61. [Despatch 27, paras. 4, 5, 13.] It is intended by H.M.'s Govt. that the regular N.I. regts. in Bengal, Madras, and Bombay, and the regular N.C. regts. in Madras, shall eventually be officered on the irregular system, and therefore that the number of their Eur. officers shall eventually be fewer than at present. This change will be effected gradually, and each regt., after the change shall have been made in it, will be officered from the general lists, and from the staff corps, and as far as may be practicable, officers will be allowed to continue to serve with the regts. to which they have been attached.

62. It will be the anxious desire of the Govt. of India to carry out this important change with due regard to the interest and claims of all officers now serving with the regular native regiments of the army; and, meanwhile, officers commanding regiments, and all officers serving with them, will continue to draw the allowances they now receive.

63. The position and claims of the field officers of the army who are now unemployed, and for whom it may be difficult to find suitable employment, under the new system, are also under consideration by the Governor-general in Council.

64. [Despatch 27, para. 4.] It is intended that the irregular regiments of cavalry and infantry in the three presidencies shall each have six officers, besides the medical officers.

65. [Despatch 27, paras. 12, 34. Despatch 28, para. 14.] It will be observed that in the despatches No. 27, paras. 12 and 34, and No. 28, para. 14, it is distinctly announced that the present and prospective advantages which officers now in the service derive from the military and orphan funds will be secured to them; and further, that retiring pensions, under the Indian regulations, will be scrupulously preserved. Officers ordered to serve out of India with their regts. will be allowed to count such service, in completion of the period required under the Indian regulations for the several rates of pension. Officers who may serve out of India under any other conditions, will be allowed to count for pension, in addition to their service in India, one year for every two years of their service out of India.

66. [Staff Corps; Royal Warrant Clause 1, Despatch 27, para. 6.] The organization and regulations of the staff corps to be formed in the several presidencies are given in full detail in the Royal Warrant and the Despatch No. 27, now published. The object of forming the staff corps is to supply a body of officers for service in India, by whom various officers and appointments, hitherto held by officers borne on the strength of the several corps of Indian forces, shall in future be held: it having been resolved that the practice of withdrawing officers for such employment, while remaining on the strength of their regiments, be discontinued, and that ultimately all officers selected for such employment be transferred to staff corps.

67. [Royal Warrant, clause 1.] These corps will be denominated the Bengal, Madras, and Bombay staff corps respectively, and will consist of such officers as may be required for employment therein, and may be selected by the Govts. of the several Presidencies with the approbation of the Sec. of State for India in Council.

68. [Royal Warrant, clause 2; despatch 27, para. 6.] Officers of the British and Indian armies, now in staff employ in India, not having the substantive rank of colonel, are eligible for admission to the staff corps; and officers of either service under the rank of field officer, not now on the staff, may now or hereafter become candidates.

69. Officers at present holding civil and political appointments of every description, and appointments in all public offices and departments; officers holding military appointments on the general and personal staff; and the appointments of comdt., second in command, and adjt. of irregular and local corps; of adjt. and interpreter and quartermaster of existing local European and Native regts.—will be held to be now on staff employ, and will be eligible, under the conditions hereafter noted, to have their names placed on the list of this staff corps; but officers doing duty with irregular and local regts. will not be regarded as being now in staff employ.

70. So soon as the proposed changes in the organization of the regular native regts. shall have come into operation, the whole of the officers who will be permanently attached to them will be held to be on staff employ.

71. [Despatch 27, para. 6.] There will then be, as at present, two great divisions of employment for officers of the staff corps:—

1st. Purely military, as in regts. of the native army.

2nd. Various civil appointments, as political, public works, &c.

There will also be practically many sub divisions of employment, for each of which there will be, as at present, separate departmental lists.

72. [Royal Warrant, clause 2, Despatch 27, paras. 13, 17.] Officers of the Indian army now holding staff appointments of any description will have the option of joining the staff corps if they do not possess the substantive rank of colonel, or of continuing in staff employment whatever their regimental rank, without joining the staff corps; and in the latter case they will not, as heretofore, be required to vacate their appointments on the attainment of a certain regimental rank. This paragraph does not affect the provisions of paragraph 45.

73. [Royal Warrant, clause 2. Despatch 27, para. 26.] Officers of the Indian army, not now on the staff, not having the substantive rank of colonel, but who within the last three years, or who at the commencement of their present unexpired furlough, may have served permanently on the staff, and who may make application within the next six months, will be considered eligible to join the staff corps on the same terms as those now on staff employ, provided always that they have passed the prescribed examination in Hindoostance, and that they did not lose their appointments through misconduct, and are not otherwise disqualified.

74. [Despatch 27, para. 16.] Officers of the British army, now in staff employment, will have the option of declaring their desire to be transferred to the staff corps, with the consent of the C. in C. in India, within six months from the date of the notification of the Royal Warrant in India; or of retaining their appointments on their present footing, if their services are required by Govt., for the unexpired portion of a period of five years from the date of their appointment, unless the regts. to which they belong shall be previously removed from the Indian establishment.

75. [Royal Warrant, Clause 2, Despatch 27, paras. 18, 19.] Those whose tenure of staff appointments at the time of transfer to the staff corps shall have exceeded one year, will not be subjected to probation or to any introductory test, other than those already prescribed for any department in which they may be serving; but officers who may have held their appointments for less than one year will not be transferred permanently to the staff corps, unless they possess the requisite qualifications to be hereafter laid down, and shall have completed the period of probation to be prescribed. The option of joining the staff corps will be open to those officers only who may be considered by the Govts. under which they are serving to be in all respects fit for the staff corps.

76. [Despatch 27, para. 15; Adj. gen's Dept.; Qr.mr. gen's Dept.; Brigade majors and fort adjutants; Personal staff.] Appointments on the general staff of the army can only be held for five years; they may be held by officers of the staff corps, or by other officers of either army, but will be subject henceforward to the limitations as to rank which are laid down in the "Queen's Regulations and Orders for the Army," in clauses 30 to 33 of the section entitled "Duties of General and other Officers employed upon the Staff of the Army."

77. Officers now holding such appointments will not be required to vacate them for a period of two years from this date, or for a period of seven years from the date of their appointment.

78. [Despatch 27, para. 26.] Officers not having the substantive rank of colonel, now holding appointments on the staff, as defined in paragraph 69, will at once be called upon to declare whether or not they desire to join the staff corps. To enable such officers to avail themselves of the advantages in the way of promotion notified in paragraphs 84 and 85, they must communicate their decision to the Adjutant-general within six months of the date of the publication of the Royal Warrant in India.

79. [Despatch 27, para. 20.] The selection of officers hereafter, for the staff corps, will rest with the Governments in India, but no officer serving with any regiment will be admitted on probation without the consent of the C. in C., or without a certificate from the commanding officer of his regiment, that he has efficiently performed his regimental duty for the period prescribed in paragraph 80.

80. [Royal Warrant, clause 2. Despatch 27, paras. 19, 20.] For the future officers not on the staff will not be eligible for the staff corps unless they be below the rank of regimental field officer, and have served three years with a regt., of which two must have been in India, and have passed the prescribed examination in Hindoostance. They will not be permanently appointed to the staff corps, unless, after due probation, they shall pass the prescribed tests for the branch of the Indian service for which they may be selected. This rule applies equally to officers of the British and Indian armies.

81. [Despatch 27, para. 20.] A subsequent notification will prescribe the period of probation and the tests of qualification in the several departments.

82. [Despatch 27, para. 21.] The promotion of officers, while on probation, will go on in their respective regts.

83. [Despatch 27, para. 21.] Officers of the British army, when permanently transferred to the staff corps, will be removed from the strength of the regt. to which they belonged.

84. [Royal warrant, clause 3, paras. 1 and 2.] The promotion of officers of the staff corps will be regulated as follows:—

Ensigns when permanently transferred to the staff corps will have the rank of lieut. Other officers will have the rank which they may hold in their regiments.

Officers of twelve years' service, of which four must have been in the staff corps, will become captains. After twenty years' service, of which six must have been in the staff corps, they will become majors. After twenty-six years' service, of which eight must have been in the staff corps, they will become lieut.-colonels.

Five years' service in the staff corps as lieut. col. will entitle the officer so employed to the brevet rank of colonel.

85. [Royal Warrant, clause 8, Despatch 27, para. 26. Despatch 27, para. 3.] Officers now in staff employment will be allowed to count, to the extent laid down in the Royal Warrant, as noted in the preceding paragraph, their past service towards promotion, as if it had been performed in the staff corps. One step of rank will be given to every officer whose period of service would qualify him for it according to the above rules. An interval of two years at least must intervene between each succeeding step. But these privileges will be restricted to those officers who, whether now in India or on leave out of India, may declare their desire to be transferred to the staff corps, within six months of the date of the notification of the warrant in India.

86. [Royal Warrant, clause 2.] The officers referred to in paragraph 73 will also be allowed this privilege, should they be permitted to join the staff corps.

87. [Despatch 27, para. 26. Royal Warrant, clause 3, para. 3.] The past service on the staff counting for promotion in the staff corps, will include any service of a permanent nature which an officer now on the staff may, from the date of his first arrival in India, have passed on the staff.

88. [Despatch 27, para. 27; Royal Warrant, clause 3, para. 6.] Officers of the staff corps under the substantive rank of field officer, will be allowed to exchange with regimental officers of the line of the same rank, on the recommendation of the Governments of the several Presidencies, with the concurrence of the Govt. of India and the C. in C. in India, and subject to the confirmation of her Majesty. But it is to be understood that the regimental officer entering the staff corps by exchange will not necessarily assume the staff appointment held by the officer with whom he exchanges. He will merely enter the staff corps on being found qualified for the department of the staff on which the Govt. may desire to employ him. Officers of the staff corps exchanging into a regiment will become the juniors of their regimental rank.

89. An officer of the staff corps whose name is borne on the cadre of an Indian regt., exchanging from the staff corps with an officer of a British regt., other than the new line regts. about to be formed, will give an effective step in the cadre of his former regt.

90. [Despatch 27, para. 22.] It will be discretionary with the Govts. in India, as at present, to employ the officers of the staff corps in such manner as they may think best, in the situations for which their respective qualifications may render them most fitted. The appts. and proms. in the several departs. will rest, as at present, with the Govts. in India, and will be made irrespectively of the rank which the officer may hold in the staff corps. Those appts., proms., and recommendations now in the gift of the commanders in chief remain as heretofore.

91. [Despatch 27, para. 28.] Officers of the staff corps of one Presidency may, with the sanction of the Govt. of India, be employed in any other Presidency.

92. Unattached officers of the Indian service are eligible for the staff corps on the same terms as other Indian officers.

93. [Royal Warrant, clause 8. Despatch 27, para. 32.] Officers of the staff corps while on furlough will draw the pay of their rank, as laid down in the clause of the Royal Warrant for officers out of India, and in case of sickness will have the privilege of drawing for six months the allowances of officers on sick leave in India. They will be allowed to retain their appointments during short periods of leave, not exceeding twenty months, during which time they will only receive the unemployed pay of their rank. With the above exceptions, the officers of the staff corps will be under the new furlough regulations of the Indian army.

94. [Despatch 27, para. 30.] A certain proportion of the senior officers of the staff corps will receive colonel's allowance. Eventually, the number will be fixed in the proportion of one for every thirty officers on the staff corps, but this number can only be filled up as the establishment of colonels on the old footing diminishes, so that the aggregate number of officers receiving colonel's allowance at one time shall never exceed the regulated number of colonel's allowance for each presidency.

95. [Royal Warrant, clause 3, para. 9. Despatch 27, para. 29.] Officers of H.M.'s Indian forces joining the staff corps will be entitled to pensions under the regulations of the Indian service. Officers of the British army, entering the staff corps, will be allowed to retire on the following scale of pension, provided that not less than half of the required periods of service shall have been passed in the staff corps:—

SCALE.	£.	s.	d.
After 20 years' service in India	191	12	0 per annum.
" 24 " " " "	292	0	0 "
" 32 " " " "	456	5	0 "

These periods of service will include the proportions of leave of absence in India or elsewhere, laid down in the new furlough regulations, viz.:—

2 years in 20 years' service.	3	25	"
" " " "	4	30	"

96. [Royal Warrant, clause 3, para. 10. Despatch 27, para. 31.] All officers of the staff corps in England, who may not wish to retire, but are unable to return to India, and officers removed from the effective list of the staff corps, who may not be entitled to retire on the above scale of pension, may, provided they have served three years in India in the staff corps, be placed on a half-pay list on the same rate of half-pay and on the same conditions as officers of a similar rank in the British army. Officers belonging to the India forces, who may avail themselves of this privilege, will give an effective step in the cadres of their regiments. Officers placed on half-pay will be eligible to return to effective service either in the staff corps or in regiments of the line. In the former case their names will not be restored to their old cadres.

97. [Despatch 27, para. 33.] No unemployed general officer of the staff corps, who is not required by the Governments in India to remain there, will be allowed to receive pay on the Indian scale for a longer period than three years. At the expiration of that period he will be restricted to the pay fixed for officers of his rank "out of India." This rule in no way affects the colonel's allowance.

98. [Despatch 27, para. 33.] Officers of the staff corps under the rank of major-general, whom the Government of India may not see fit to employ in any capacity, will not be allowed to draw pay for more than four years, of which one year may be on the Indian scale, and three years on the scale fixed for officers "out of India," after which period they will be placed on half-pay, or on pension, according to the scale of their rank, if entitled thereto.

99. [Royal Warrant, clause 8. Despatch 27, para. 23.] The pay of officers of the staff corps whilst unemployed has been fixed at the following rates:—

	Whilst required to remain in India.	Out of India.
General officers	Rs. 1,295 5 0	£1 5 0
Brevet colonel and
Lieut. col.	827 14 0	1 0 0
Major	640 14 0	0 16 0
Captain	374 1 6	0 10 6
Lieutenant	225 12 0	0 6 6

100. [Despatch 27, para. 23.] The pay and allowances to be established for the several staff appointments in all departments of staff employ, will be announced in a subsequent notification, and meanwhile the staff salary and other allowances of all appointments will remain unchanged.

101. [Royal Warrant, clause 3, para. 4, 5.] Officers of the staff corps are eligible for brevet rank, and will take their places on the general gradation list, in common with the rest of the army. Those holding military appointments will take military command according to their army rank, but officers whilst holding only civil appointments will not be entitled to assume such command. Civil appointments are those in any civil branch of the army, or under the civil administration of Government.

102. Officers of the staff corps will succeed to colonel's allowance according to their seniority as lieut.-colonels in the staff corps. Lieut. colonels entering the staff corps on its first establishment will take rank for colonels' allowance according to the dates of their commissions as substantive lieut.-colonels. All officers entering the staff corps will take with them the substantive rank they held at the time of joining it. Should two officers of the same rank enter the staff corps and be promoted on the same day, they will stand in the corps according to the dates of their previous substantive commissions. But officers of the staff corps will take precedence, and exercise command among each other according to their army rank.

103. All promotions in the staff corps, in the case of officers who may join the staff corps, within six months of the publication of the Royal Warrant, will take effect from Feb. 18, 1861, the date of the receipt of the warrant in India.

104. [Royal Warrant, clause 7.] The power of removing officers from the effective list of the staff corps will be exercised by H.M. through the Secy. of State for India.

105. The provisions of para. 90 are also applicable to appointments in the ordnance, survey, and public works departments.

106. [Despatch 81, paras. 5, 6.] The promotion of officers of the Indian armies, on the occurrence of vacancies, will be notified, as heretofore, by the Govts. of India in the Official Gazette, and will be stated to be "subject to H.M.'s approval." Periodical lists of these promotions will be submitted to the Sec. of State for India, that measures may be taken for the preparation and signature of corresponding commissions. Pending the receipt of these commissions, the officers provisionally promoted by the Indian Govts. will enjoy the pay, provision, and privileges of the rank to which they may have been advanced.

VICTORIA R.

[G.O., paras. 66, 67.] Whereas it is expedient to provide a body of officers for our service in India, by whom various offices and appointments hitherto held by officers borne on the strength of the several corps or regiments of our forces in India shall in future be held; and whereas our Secretary of State for India in Council has resolved to charge upon the revenues of India the sum necessary to provide the pay, half-pay, and pensions of such body of officers on the scale hereinafter contained, our will and pleasure is, that a corps be formed in each of the presidencies of our Indian dominions, to be denominated the Bengal, Madras, and Bombay staff corps, respectively, to consist of such officers as may be required for such employment, and are selected for such purpose by our Governments in India, with the approbation of our Secretary of State for India in Council.

[G.O., paras. 68, 72, 73, 75, 80, 86.] It is also our will and pleasure that all officers now holding, or who immediately before the commencement of their present unexpired furlough may have held such appointments, and in future officers belonging to any of our land forces serving in India, under the rank of regimental field officer, who shall have served three years with a regiment, of which two shall have been in India, shall be eligible to enter such staff corps, but such officers will not be permanently transferred to the staff corps, unless fully qualified, and until they shall have passed such periods of probation as may be determined on for the branch of the Indian service for which they may be selected. Officers will receive commissions in the staff corps on their names being submitted to our Secretary of State for India.

It is our further will and pleasure, that the proportion and pay of the staff corps shall be regulated as follows:—

1. [G.O., para. 84.] Ensigns when permanently transferred to the staff corps to have the rank of lieutenant. Other officers to have the rank which they may hold in their regiments.

2. Promotion in the staff corps to be governed by length of service.

[G.O., para. 84.] Officers after twelve years' service, of which four must have been in the staff corps, to become captains.

After twenty years' service, of which six must have been in the staff corps, to become majors.

After twenty-six years' service, of which eight must have been in the staff corps, to become lieutenant-colonels.

Five years' service in the staff corps as lieutenant-colonel to entitle the officer so employed to the brevet rank of colonel.

3. Officers now in staff employment in India, joining the staff corps on its formation, shall count their previous staff service towards promotion to the following extent:—

[G.O., para. 85.] One step of rank will be given to every officer whose period of service would qualify him for it, according to the above rules. An interval of two years at least must intervene between each succeeding step.

4. [G.O., para. 101.] Officers in the staff corps will be eligible for brevet rank in common with the rest of the army.

5. [G.O., para. 101.] Officers of the staff corps holding military appointments will take military command according to their army rank, but officers whilst holding only civil appointments will not be entitled to assume such command.

6. [G.O., para. 88.] Exchanges may be allowed between officers of the staff corps under the substantive rank of field officer and regimental officers of the same rank on the recommendation of the Indian Governments. Officers of the staff corps exchanging into a regiment will become the juniors of their regimental rank.

7. [G.O., para. 104.] The power of removing officers from the effective list of the staff corps will be exercised by us through our Secretary of State for India.

8. [G.O., paras. 93, 99.] Officers of the staff corps will receive pay according to the following scale:—

	Whilst required to remain in India.	Out of India.

[G.O., para. 99.] Every officer when in active employment will also receive, in addition to the above pay, such a sum as will make his total pay and allowances up to the sum assigned by the Govts. in India, with the approval of the Sec. of State for India in Council, as the consolidated pay of the office which he may hold. Eventually, a certain proportion of the senior officers of the staff corps will receive colonel's allowance.

9. [G.O., para. 95.] Officers of the staff corps will be allowed to retire on the following scale of pension, provided that not less than half of the required periods of service shall have been passed in the staff corps:—

SCALE.	£	s.	d.
After 20 years' service in India	191	12	0 per annum.

Officers of H.M.'s Indian forces joining the staff corps will be entitled to pensions under the regulations of the Indian service.

10. [G.O., para. 96.] Officers of the staff corps in England who may not wish to retire, but who are unable to return to India, and officers removed from the effective list who may not be entitled to retire on the above scale of pension, will be placed on a half-pay list, provided they have served three years in India in the staff corps, on the same rate of half-pay and on the same conditions as officers of a similar rank in our army.

11. It is also our will and pleasure that this warrant shall be administered and interpreted by our Sec. of State for India in Council, who shall be the sole and standing authority upon the matters therein contained.

Given at our Court at Windsor, this sixteenth day of January, 1861, in the twenty-fourth year of our reign.

By her Majesty's command,
(Signed) CHARLES WOOD.

DESPATCH No. 27.
India-office, London, Jan. 18, 1861.
Military, No. 27.

To H.E. the Rt. Hon. the Gov. gen. of India in Council.

My Lord,—I have the honour to forward for your information and guidance copies of a Royal Warrant authorising the formation of staff corps for each of the three Presidencies in India. You will cause the institution of these corps to be notified in such manner as may seem to you best calculated to make the provisions contained in the Warrant generally known, and to afford to such officers as may wish to join the new corps the opportunity of doing so.

2. I proceed, at the same time, to communicate to your lordship the general views of H.M.'s Govt. as to the measures to be adopted in reference to the officers of H.M.'s Indian army.

3. [G.O., para. 23.] In the execution of those measures the pledge that due regard shall be paid to the rights and claims of the officers of H.M.'s Indian forces will be scrupulously adhered to.

4. [G.O., paras. 61–64.] The events of the late mutiny have impressed upon H.M.'s Govt. the absolute necessity of a large reduction of the native army, and, with a view to that economy which is imperatively called for by the state of Indian finance, it appears to them that the number of officers hitherto attached to the native regts. organised on what is called the regular system, may be considerably reduced. Your lordship has recommended that six European officers should be employed with those regts. which are formed on the irregular system, and your lordship has already received the sanction of H.M.'s Govt. to this arrangement. I am of opinion that a very considerable saving will thus be effected, as nearly one-half the charge of a regular regt. consists of the pay and allowances of its officers. I am inclined to believe also that the efficiency of the regts. will in no respect suffer, whilst an opportunity will be given of raising the character and position of the native officers, and probably of affording an opening for the employment of natives of higher position, which I consider to be an object of considerable importance.

5. [G.O., para. 61.] The irregular native regts., both of infantry and cavalry, have hitherto been officered by officers specially appointed to them. There is also a large number of appointments of different kinds—political, civil, &c., held by officers, and comprehended under the general name of staff employment. For both these descriptions of employment, officers, though borne on the strength of their regts., have been taken. Indeed, the number of officers borne on the strength of regts. has been increased beyond that required for regimental duty, expressly in order to allow of their being so taken away. In addition to this, application was some years ago made by the Government in India to the Home Government that officers in the regts. of the line stationed in India might be similarly employed, and arrangements were made as to the number and rank of the officers of such regiments in order to allow of this being done.

6. [G.O., para. 66.] This system of withdrawing officers for such employment while permanently remaining on the strength of their regiments has been condemned by various high authorities as impairing the efficiency of the regiments; and it is the intention of H.M.'s Government that it should be discontinued, and that, ultimately, all officers selected for such employment should be transferred to staff corps, which will be formed expressly for this service. There will be, as at present, two great divisions of employment for officers of the staff corps:—

1st. [G.O., para. 71.] Purely military, as in regiments of the native army.

2nd. Various civil appointments, as political, public works, &c.

There will also be practically many subdivisions of employment, for each of which there may be, as at present, separate departmental lists.

[G.O., para. 68.] The staff corps will be drawn from the two classes of officers which at present furnish officers for staff employment, viz., the officers of H.M.'s general army serving in India, and those of her Indian army.

7. [G.O., para. 46.] The list of general officers of the Indian army and their promotion will remain exactly as at present. It will be desirable to provide for the early consolidation of the list of officers attaining this rank in the general and Indian branches of H.M.'s service; but this subject requires further consideration, and will form the subject of a separate despatch.

8. [G.O., paras. 47, 48.] The promotion of field officers will go on as usual, in separate lists of "majors," "lieutenant-colonels," and "colonels regimentally" of cavalry and infantry, but a gradual reduction will be made in the number of regimental colonels entitled to colonels' allowances, in due proportion to the reduction in the number of regiments. The extent to which this reduction is to be carried will be determined hereafter; but it must be commenced at once in Bengal, by promoting only three lieutenant-colonels for every four vacancies in the rank of colonel regimentally.

9. [G.O., paras. 26, 45.] Officers of the Royal or Indian corps of engs. who may be employed in the public works or survey depts., and officers of the Royal or Indian regts. of art. doing duty with batteries of native art., or employed in the ordnance dept., or as superintendents ordnance manufacturing establishments in India, will not be required to relinquish their regimental position, but art. officers holding appointments in the ordnance dept. will be seconded, and officers of either of these regts. accepting any other description of staff employ than those above specified will be subject to the same rules as officers of inf. or cav. of the line or local services respectively.

10. [G.O., para. 11.] The Act 23 & 24 Vict., cap. c., of the last session of parliament, prohibits the further enlistment of troops for the local European army of India, and under the operation of that Act the European regiments of the local army would, in course of time, be extinguished. But it is the desire of H.M.'s Govt. to preserve in the ranks of the British army the names and traditions of certain of the older European regiments of the late East India Company's service, and to convert these regiments at once into regiments of H.M.'s line army.

11. [No. 28; G.O., para. 5.] The details of the measures by which this object is to be effected are communicated to you in a separate despatch of this date; and it is sufficient to state here that no soldier of the local army will have the conditions of his service altered without his own consent, and that the proper establishment of officers for the converted regiments will be filled up with officers of the local army who may volunteer to transfer their services to the line, and who will thenceforth rise by seniority in the regts. to which they may be posted.

12. [G.O., para. 65.] The present and prospective advantage which these officers derive from the Military and Orphan Funds will be secured to them, and they will be allowed retiring pensions under the present rule (2 years' future service out of India counting as 1 year in India in completion of the service required for the several grades of pension).

13. [G.O., paras 50, 58, 61; G.O., paras. 49, 59, 60, 72.] In my Despatch No. 31, of this date, you are informed that commissions from her Majesty, conferring rank and command in her armies, will be given to all the European commissioned officers of H.M.'s Indian army; but these commissions, like those which they now hold from the C. in C. in India, will not contain an appointment to particular regiments. The European commissioned officers of cavalry and infantry will be placed on two general lists of cavalry and infantry for each Presidency. Those officers who may not join the staff corps or regiments of the line will be available for any duty to which they may be appointed, either continuing to serve with the regiments to which they have been attached, or in staff employment or otherwise, at the discretion of the Governments of India. The promotion of officers who have been posted to regiments will go on to the rank of lieutenant colonel, in conformity with the usages of the Indian army, by regimental seniority, and that of unposted officers in the manner specified in my despatches, Nos. 343 of 30th Sept., 1859, para. 5, and 287 of 31st July, 1860.

14. [G.O., paras. 58, 59, 60.] Officers of the local army who may be transferred to the staff corps will, thenceforward, be promoted under the rules of that corps. Their names, however, (which may be printed in italics in the Army List), will remain on the rolls of the Indian army, and the promotion of the officers who do not join the staff corps will be unaffected by their removal, and will be made in the same manner as if these officers had not joined the staff corps. The same rule will apply to promotion in the general lists of field officers, on which the names of officers so transferred will be placed in the same position which they would have held had they not joined the staff corps. Thus, until the death or retirement of such officers, their names will remain on the rolls of the Indian army to regulate the promotion of their juniors.

15. [G.O., para. 76.] Appointments on the general staff of the army, specified in the margin,* can only be held for five years, either by officers of the staff corps or by other officers, and will be subject to the limitations as to the rank of the officers holding them, which are laid down in the "Queen's Regulations and Orders for the Army," in clauses 30 to 33 of the section entitled "Duties of General and other Officers employed upon the Staff of the Army."

16. [G.O., para. 74.] Officers of regiments of the line now in staff employment other than the appointments specified will have the option of joining the staff corps with the consent of the C. in C. in India, within six months from the date of the notification of the warrant in India, or of retaining their appointments on their present footing, if their services are required by your Government for the unexpired term of a period of five years from the date of their appointment, unless the regiment to which they belong shall be previously removed from the Indian establishment.

17. [G.O., para. 72.] Officers in the local army holding such appointments, if they do not join the staff corps, may be allowed to continue in staff employment without vacating their appointments on the attainment of a certain rank, or will be at the disposal of Government for such other service as they may be competent to perform.

18. [G.O., para. 75.] Officers now holding staff appointments, who have held them for short periods only, will not be transferred permanently to the staff corps unless they shall possess the requisite qualifications, and until they shall have completed the period of probation that may be prescribed for the department in which they may be serving.

19. [G.O., paras. 75, 80.] The option of joining the staff corps referred to in the foregoing paras. will be open to those officers only who may have fulfilled the conditions prescribed for original appointments previously to their being transferred to it, and who may be considered by your Govt. to be in all respects fit for the staff corps.

20. [G.O., paras. 79, 80, 81.] The selection of officers for the staff corps will rest with the Governments in India. No officer, however, should be admitted on probation without the consent of the C. in C., and without a certificate from the commanding officer of his regiment that he has efficiently performed his regimental duty for the prescribed period. I desire that, after communication with the Governments of Madras and Bombay, your Government will prepare a scheme of the tests and periods of probation suitable for the several departments of military and civil staff employment.

21. [G.O., paras. 82, 83.] The promotion of officers, while on probation, will go on in their respective regiments. Officers of the British army, when permanently transferred to the staff corps, will be removed from the strength of the regiment to which they belonged.

22. [G.O., para. 90.] It will be discretionary with the Govts. of India to employ the officers of the staff corps in such manner as they may think best, in the situations for which their respective qualifications may render them most fitted. The appointments and promotions in the several departments will rest with the Govts. in India, and will be made irrespectively of the rank which the officer may hold in the staff corps.

23. [G.O., paras. 99, 100.] Officers of the staff corps, whilst employed, will receive, in addition to the pay of their rank, such a sum as will make up the salary and allowances which may be assigned to the office which they hold. When unemployed, they will receive pay or half-pay on the scale fixed in the Warrant, according to their military rank. It is desirable that you should at once prepare a list of all officers in staff employ, and of the situations filled by them, with the amount of salary which you consider suitable for each appointment respectively.

24. The aggregate number of officers of the staff corps will be strictly limited, with a due allowance for furlough and sick leave, to the number of appointments which the Govts. of India require to be filled by officers of that corps.

25. In these, as in all other matters, the proceedings of the Govts. in India will be subject to the approval of the Secy. of State for India in Council.

26. [G.O., paras. 78, 87, 83.] It is provided in the Warrant that officers now in staff employment in India, on joining the staff corps on its formation, may count, to a certain extent, their past staff service towards promotion only, as if it had been performed in the staff corps. This privilege will be restricted to those officers who may join the staff corps within six months of the date of the notification of the Warrant in India.

27. [G.O., para. 88.] The exchange permitted by the 6th Rule of the warrant between officers of the staff corps under the substantive rank of field officers and regimental officers of the same rank can only be made with the sanction of the Govt. and Com-in-Chief in India, and will be subject to confirmation by her Majesty. No officer will be allowed to exchange into the staff corps unless he be duly qualified for the department of the staff on which the Govt. desire to employ him.

28. [G.O., para. 91.] Officers of the staff corps of one Presidency may, with the sanction of the Govt. of India, be employed in any other Presidency.

29. [G.O., para. 95.] The periods of service specified in the 9th rule as a title to pensions of various amounts, will include the proportions of leave of absence in India or elsewhere, laid down in the new furlough regulations, viz.:—

2 years in 20 years' service,
4 " in 30 "

30. [G.O., para. 94.] The 9th rule provides that a certain proportion of the senior officers of the staff corps shall receive colonel's allowance. Eventually, the number will be fixed in the proportion of one for every thirty officers on the staff corps, but this number can only be filled up as the establishment of colonels on the old footing diminishes, so that the aggregate number of officers receiving colonel's allowance at one time shall never exceed the regulated number of colonel's allowance for each Presidency.

31. [G.O., para. 94.] The 10th Rule specifies the circumstances and conditions under which an officer of the staff corps may be placed on a half-pay list, analogous to that of a regiment of the British army. Such officers will be eligible to return to the effective service, either in the staff corps or in regiments in the line, and will enjoy all the privileges of officers on the half-pay of the British army.

32. [G.O., para. 93.] Officers of the staff corps, while on furlough, will draw the pay of their rank, as laid down in the clause of the Royal Warrant, for officers out of India, and in case of sickness will have the privilege of drawing for six months the allowances of officers in India. They will be allowed to retain their appointments during short periods of leave, not exceeding twenty months, during which time they will only receive the unemployed pay of their rank. With the above exceptions, the officers of the staff corps will be under the new furlough regulations of the Indian army.

33. [G.O., paras. 97, 98.] No unemployed general officer of the staff corps, who is not required by the Govts. in India to remain there, will be allowed to receive pay on the Indian scale for a longer period than three years. No unemployed officer of the staff corps under the rank of maj. gen. will be allowed to draw pay for a longer period than one year on the Indian scale, and three years on the lower scale, after which period he will be placed on half-pay.

34. [G. O., para. 65.] The best method of dealing with the Military and Orphan Funds of the three Presidencies is now under the consideration of H.M.'s Govt. The Governments of India will be prepared to assume the liabilities of the Funds, as far as may be requisite to maintain existing pensions, and to secure to the subscribers and their families the benefits to which they are entitled under the present system.—I have, &c.

India Office, London, 18th January, 1861.
Military, No. 28.

To H.E. the Rt. Hon. the Gov. gen. of India in Council.

My Lord,—In my military despatch, No. 348, dated 5th Sept., para. 15, I communicated to you the intention of H.M.'s Govt. that "the European non-commissioned officers and soldiers who have enlisted for the Indian forces up to the present time will continue to serve in India during the term of their engagement, on precisely the same conditions and with the same privileges in regard to pension as they now enjoy, and that at the expiration of their contract period of service they will, if fit, be permitted to re-enlist for general service, with the privilege of counting their past service for pension under the regulations of H.M.'s army." And in reiterating that pledge in my despatch, No. 414, of 31st October, I added that it is not contemplated by H.M.'s Govt. to transfer any soldier of H.M.'s Indian forces without his own consent, to a regiment of the line. [G.O. para. 5.]

2. At that time it was the intention of H.M.'s Government to retain, for the present, the existing designations of the European regiments of H.M.'s Indian army, to recruit such of them as are to be retained permanently with men raised for general service on the ordinary conditions of infantry and cavalry soldiers enlisted for H.M.'s line army, and when all the soldiers engaged for local service had been replaced by general service men, to complete the assimilation of these regiments with the regiments of infantry and cavalry, respectively, of the British service.

3. [G.O., para. 4.] Her Majesty's Government were anxious to preserve the proud recollections of distinguished service which belong especially to the older regiments of each presidency, and to incorporate in H.M.'s army those corps which have so greatly contributed to the acquisition and maintenance of H.M.'s dominions in the East.

4. They were not unaware that some difficulties might have been found from placing in the same regiment men under different conditions of service; but, fully relying on the steady behaviour of the men, they felt confident that by judicious conduct on the part of the officers any bad result might be avoided.

5. They were of opinion that, in this manner, the discontinuance of a local force might gradually be effected with the least disturbance of the existing positions and relations of officers and men.

6. Objections, however, have been raised to this course on legal grounds, and her Majesty's Government have consequently determined on the adoption of the plan which I shall now proceed to explain to your lordship.

7. [G. O., para. 5.] They are unwilling, by allowing the local corps to die out, which would be the necessary consequence of merely ceasing to fill up their numbers by recruits, that the names of such corps as the three older regts. of each Presidency should cease to be borne on the rolls of H.M.'s army, whilst they feel it to be indispensable that no man, except with his own consent, should have his present terms of service altered.

8. The first object will be attained by maintaining these regiments as regiments of the line, the second by retaining in a local corps such men as prefer to continue their service only in India.

9. [G. O., para. 22.] Her Majesty has been graciously pleased to sanction the necessary increase of the establishment of her army; and orders are transmitted herewith from H.R.H. the Gen. Com-in-Chief to his Excellency the Com-in-Chief in India, who will take the necessary measures for this purpose which depend on him.

10. The plan which they have determined upon is as follows:—

[G. O., paras. 5, 12, 17, 20.] To offer to the non-commissioned officers and men of the 1st Bengal fusiliers the usual bounty given to a man volunteering from one regt. to another, if they are willing to accept service on the terms of H.M.'s line forces, and to form a regt. of the line from such volunteers, with the addition of such men of good character of the

* This Despatch has already appeared in our issue of the 6th instant.

4th and 6th regts. of Bengal European inf. as may volunteer to be transferred to it on similar terms and with similar bounty.

[G. O., para. 16.] The men who may not volunteer on these terms will be transferred to the 4th regt. of European inf., which will remain a local corps.

[G.O., paras. 11, 17.] To make to the non-commissioned officers and men of the 2nd Bengal fus. and of the 3rd Bengal Eur. inf. a similar offer to that made to the 1st Bengal fus., and to pursue a similar course in forming from them two new regiments of the line.

11. [G.O., para. 11.] The men of the 1st and 2nd Bengal fus. and of the 3rd Bengal regt. of inf., who volunteer for line service, will be kept in the regts. representing those to which they respectively belong, and those who volunteer from the 4th and 6th regts. must be divided, so as to equalise, as far as possible, the number in each of the three line regiments. If the numbers fall short of 830 in each regiment, the complement can be made up by men from regts. leaving India or by recruits.

12. [G. O., para. 16.] If the men declining these terms are more than enough to fill up the 4th Bengal European regt., the 6th Bengal European regt. must likewise be retained as a local regt.

13. [G. O., para. 52.] It is necessary that the officers of these three general service regiments should be generally under the conditions of service of line officers, and that they should be permanently attached to their regiments. It is considered to be desirable that they should be taken from among the officers of the local armies, and, as far as possible, from the old regiments, which will be respectively represented by the new ones.

14. [G. O., para. 50, 56, 58, 65.] By my despatch of this date, No. 27, you have been directed to place all the officers of the European and native regular infantry and cavalry of each Presidency on general lists, and you will invite from these lists the number of officers required for the new line regiments to volunteer for general service in these regiments, on the same conditions as line officers, except that the system of purchase which prevails in the army of the line will not be allowed in these regiments. The present and prospective advantages which officers derive from the Military and Orphan Funds will be secured to them, and they will be allowed retiring pensions under the Indian regulations, counting their service in India in full, and one year for every two years of their future service out of India, in completion of the periods of service required under those regulations for the several grades of pension.

15. [G.O., para. 55; G.O., para. 53.] These officers will be formed into cadres, of the strength noted in the margin,* exclusive of regimental staff, and will be appointed by the Commander-in-Chief to do duty with the several new regiments, and they will eventually receive new commissions from her Majesty in those regiments, bearing the same dates respectively as the commissions which they now hold. Such of them as may have belonged to the three older local regiments will be appointed respectively to the new regiments representing those to which they belonged. And it should be secured to them that they shall hold a position in the new regiments as far as possible the same as that which they held in the old ones.

16. [G.O., para. 50.] The names of these officers will remain on the General List, printed in italics to regulate the promotion of their juniors, in precisely the same way as if they had been transferred to the staff corps, under the conditions detailed in my separate despatch on this subject.

17. [G.O., paras. 11, 14.] The three older regts. of the Bengal Presidency will thus be converted into regts. of H.M.'s general army, and will be numbered and designated as follows:—

The 101st Regt. of Foot (or 1st Bengal Fusiliers).

The 104th Regt. of Foot (or 2nd Bengal Fusiliers).

The 107th Regt. of Foot.

[G.O., para. 15.] They will be permitted to bear on their colours and appointments the honorary distinctions won by the regiments of the Indian army which they will respectively represent.

18. In my despatch, No. 374, dated 9th Oct., you were directed to form into three regiments of European light cav. the five existing regiments of that arm in the Bengal Presidency, and, assuming this consolidation to have been completed, measures will be taken, analogous to those above prescribed, for the conversion of these regiments into three regiments of light dragoons of H.M.'s general army.

19. [G.O., paras. 5, 9.] Such of the non-commissioned officers and men of each of the three regts. as may accept the offer of bounty on the conditions of general service will form the basis of a new regt. of dragoons, which will be made up hereafter to the complement of 500 sabres. The three regts. will be respectively designated as follows:—

2 Majors.

12 Captains,

14 Lieutenants,

10 Ensigns.

A colonel will be appointed hereafter to each regiment.

19th (Lt.) Drags. (now 1st Bengal Eur. Lt. Cav.)

21st (Lt.) Drags. (now 3rd Bengal Eur. Lt. Cav.)

20. [G.O., para. 51. G.O., para. 55.] The officers of the three regts., having been placed on a general list under the instructions of my despatch of this date, No. 27, will be permitted to volunteer for general service in the regts. representing those to which they formerly belonged, and any vacancies that may then remain in the cadres of officers, calculated on the establishment of a dragoon regt., as per margin,* exclusive of regimental staff, will be filled up in the following manner:—

The 19th light dragoons by volunteers from the remaining officers of the Bengal cavalry.

[G.O., para. 51.] The 20th and 21st light dragoons by volunteers from the officers of the Madras and Bombay cavalry, respectively.

21. [G.O., para. 10.] The non-commissioned officers and men who may prefer the conditions of local service will be placed in the 4th Bengal European light cavalry, which will be reformed for that purpose, with the officers who belonged to it, as a local regiment.

22. [G.O., para. 5.] The measures for the conversion of the European regiments in the Madras and Bombay presidencies into regiments of the line will be similar to those prescribed for adoption in Bengal, but with such modifications as circumstances render necessary.

23. [G.O., paras. 5, 11, 14, 15.] At Madras, the non-commissioned officers and soldiers accepting the conditions of general service will be formed into three regiments of the line, which will be designated as follow:—

102nd Regt. of Foot (or Madras Fusiliers).

105th Regt. of Foot (or Madras L.I.)

108th Regt. of Foot, and they will bear on their colours and appointments any honorary distinctions belonging to the old regiments which they will respectively represent.

24. [G.O., para. 16.] The men who may not accept the offer of bounty will be placed in a separate corps for local service, which may be designated the Madras European Regt.

25. [G.O., para. 16.] To this corps officers of the three European regts. who may not volunteer for general service, and, if required, other officers from the general list, will be appointed to do duty.

26. [G.O., paras. 5, 11, 14, 15.] In the Bombay presidency the three new regiments of the line will be formed in the manner above described, of volunteers from the three existing regts. of European inf., including the German soldiers of the 3rd European regt., who will also be permitted to volunteer, and will be designated respectively—

The 103rd Regt. of Foot (or Bombay Fusiliers).

The 106th Regt. of Foot.

The 109th Regt. of Foot.

They will bear on their colours any honorary distinctions which have been won respectively by the 1st, 2nd, and 3rd Bombay European regts.

27. [G.O., para. 16.] The men who may not accept the offer of bounty will be placed in a separate corps for local service, which may be designated the Bombay European regiment.

28. [G.O., para. 54.] Officers will be provided for these regiments in the manner above described, with reference to Bengal and Madras, except that in the formation of a cadre of officers for the 109th Bombay regiment of foot the claims of the German officers whom, after receipt of my despatch, No. 154, of Sept. 5, the Govt. of Bombay may have thought it necessary to retain with the 3rd European regt., will be considered. Such of these officers as may desire it will receive commissions in their present grades in the 109th foot.

29. [G.O., paras. 9, 14.] The new regiments added, in the manner above described, to the establishment of H.M.'s army, will be available for general service, and will be twelve in number, as follows:—

19th Regt. of (Light) Dragoons.

20th Regt. of (Light) Dragoons.

21st Regt. of (Light) Dragoons.

101st Regt. of Foot (or 1st Bengal Fusiliers).

102nd Regt. of Foot (or Madras Fusiliers).

103rd Regt. of Foot (or Bombay Fusiliers).

104th Regt. of Foot (or 2nd Bengal Fusiliers).

105th Regt. of Foot (or Madras Light Infantry).

106th Regt. of Foot.

107th Regt. of Foot.

108th Regt. of Foot.

109th Regt. of Foot.

DESPATCH No. 29.

India-office, London, Jan. 18, 1861.

Military, No. 29.

To H.E. the Rt. Hon. the Gov. gen. of India in Council.

My Lord,—I have the honour to communicate to your Excellency the details of a plan which has been determined upon by H.M.'s Govt. for the assimilation and ultimate consolidation of the Indian regts. of artillery with that of the Royal artillery. It provides the means of maintaining the efficiency of the artillery force in India, while it involves no interference with the present course of promotion in either service.

* 1 lieut.-col., 2 majors, 9 captains, 9 lieutenants, 9 cornets, including one troop for the depot. A colonel will hereafter be appointed to each regt.

2. The following are the conditions of the plan which has been determined upon:—

I. [G.O., para. 31.] That the existing regiments of artillery in the three Presidencies of India shall remain distinct from each other and from the royal artillery as long as any of the officers now in them shall continue to be borne on their rolls.

II. [G.O., para. 33.] That no new appointments shall be made to the three Indian regiments.

III. That on the occurrence of vacancies in any of the three Indian regiments or in the royal artillery, appointments of the young officers should be made to the royal artillery.

IV. [G.O., para. 34.] That after all the subalterns in any of the Indian regts. of artillery have been promoted, on the occurrence of the next vacancy in the grade of second capt. in that corps, the senior subaltern of the royal artillery should be promoted to that grade.

V. [G.O., para. 35.] That the same process should be followed in each grade successively, until all the Indian regts. of artillery have disappeared, after which the whole corps will be royal artillery.

VI. [G.O., para. 25.] That in order to carry out this measure to the full extent, the organization of Indian regts. of artillery will be assimilated to that of the royal artillery. The Bengal artillery will be formed into seven brigades, the Madras artillery into four brigades, and the Bombay artillery into three brigades, in all fourteen brigades, with the strength of officers detailed in the margin,* which is believed to be the establishment of a brigade of royal artillery.

3. The assimilation of the Indian with the royal artillery involves considerable alterations of rank. Thus in Bengal seven of the colonels will become colonels commandant, nine lieutenant-colonels will become colonels, thirteen captains will become lieutenant-colonels, and three captains and nine second captains will become supernumerary. This will cause a stoppage of promotion in the grades of second captain and lieutenant. But there are at present four lieutenant-colonels, four captains, and nine second captains in the ordnance department, and these, being seconded in accordance with the instructions in the 9th paragraph of my despatch, No. 27, dated this day, will more than compensate for the absorption of the three captains and nine second captains above-mentioned.

4. [G.O., para. 27.] Under the royal artillery organization, the colonel's allowance is drawn only by colonels commandant, and of these there will be seven only in the place of twelve, who now draw colonel's allowance in the Bengal artillery.

5. [G.O., para. 27.] Eventually the assimilation must be carried out in this respect also. The five officers who will be supernumerary will continue to receive that allowance, and this necessary reduction will be gradually carried out by permitting the succession of only three officers to every four vacancies in the number of those receiving colonel's allowance, until the supernumeraries shall have been absorbed.

6. [G.O., para. 29.] Cols. of artillery, under the new organization, who, not being cols. comdnt., will not draw col.'s allowance, will be permitted to draw in India the pay and allowances fixed for the rank of regimental col. (excepting the col.'s allowance). On furlough, they will receive the furlough pay of col., viz., 25s. a day, and they will enjoy the privileges of regimental cols. in being permitted to reside in England, if not required in India, without forfeiting their position on the effective list.

7. [G.O., para. 30.] Such of the officers as may be willing to serve out of India, and may be permitted to do so, will receive commissions in the royal artillery, and will draw the pay and allowances fixed by her Majesty's regulations for that arm of the service, according to the situation and locality in which they may be serving; but their promotion will continue to go on in their original regiments. They will be permitted to reckon one year's service towards retiring pension on the Indian scale for every two years of employment out of India.

8. I have lately carefully considered the best mode of keeping up in efficiency the strength of batteries and companies of artillery required for service in India.

9. The number of men of the local artillery was much reduced under the operation of the G.O. of 20th June, 1859, which offered the option of discharge to all soldiers of the late East India Company's Service.

10. [G.O., paras. 5, 17, 32.] At Bombay the establishment of European artillery has been subsequently recruited to very nearly its proper complement; but in Bengal and Madras the numbers are still much below the establishment. The enlistment of recruits for local service to complete the establishment is prohibited by the late Act of Parliament, and there are legal objections to filling up the vacancies with men enlisted for the royal artillery. Under these circumstances, it appears advisable to separate at once the men of the local artillery, who are willing to transfer their services absolutely to the royal regiments of artillery, from those who may prefer the conditions of local service. To the former you are authorised to offer the usual bounty on their transfer to the Royal artillery, and the volunteers who may accept these conditions will be formed into new troops or batteries of royal artillery, which will be filled up by recruits enlisted for that regiment, of whom a large number are now under training at Woolwich, and will be ready for embarkation in the course of next summer.

11. [G.O., para. 32.] Officers will be provided for these batteries from the officers of the Bengal, Madras, and Bombay artillery respectively, and will receive commissions in the royal artillery concurrent with those which they now respectively hold in their regiments.

12. [G.O., para. 77.] The soldiers of the Indian artillery, who may decline to accept the offer, will be formed into batteries which will remain under their original designations and conditions; and, as the numbers of the men diminish by casualties, or by completion of the period of service, they will be consolidated into a smaller number of batteries, and will finally disappear.—I have, &c.,

DESPATCH No. 30.

India Office, London, Jan. 18, 1861.

Military, No. 30.

To H.E. the Rt. Hon. the Gov. gen. of India in Council.

My Lord,—1. In continuation of my despatch, No. 29, of this date, on the subject of the assimilation of the Indian regiments of artillery with that of the royal artillery, I have the honour to communicate to you the following plan for the assimilation of the regiments of Bengal, Madras, and Bombay engineers with that of the royal engineers:—

2. In the case of these regiments it will be necessary to deal with the officers only, as there are no engineer soldiers in India under that designation, and the regiments of native sappers and miners must continue, as at present, on the footing of local corps, having the requisite complement of commissioned and non-commissioned officers appointed to do duty with them.

3. The process by which the local regts. of engineers will die out, and their places be filled by officers appointed to the royal engineers, is precisely similar to that already described for the artillery.

4. [G.O., para. 44.] All fresh appointments will be made to the royal engineers, and when all the subalterns of any of the three Indian regts. have become captains, the next vacancy in that regt. will cause the promotion of the senior subaltern of royal engineers, and the same process will be followed in the higher grades until all the local officers have disappeared.

5. The ultimate effect of this measure will be to add seven battalions of officers to the royal engineers, of which three will take the place of the Bengal regt., and two each will be in substitution for those of Madras and Bombay.

6. [G.O., para. 36.] The engineer corps of H.M.'s Indian forces will be immediately formed into three battalions for Bengal, and two each for Madras and Bombay, of the established strength of a battalion of royal engineers as follows:—1 colonel commandant, 2 colonels, 5 lieutenant-colonels, 8 captains, 8 2nd captains, 24 lieutenants.

7. The effect of this measure will be to give considerable promotion in the existing regiments. In Bengal the number of field officers will be increased from 15 to 25. In Madras and Bombay from 9 to 16. In Bengal three colonels will become colonels commandant; four lieutenant-colonels will become colonels; nine captains will become lieutenant-colonels; three 2nd captains will become captains, and three lieutenants supernumerary. In Madras and Bombay two colonels will become colonels commandant; three lieutenant-colonels will become colonels; seven captains will become lieutenant-colonels; five 2nd captains will become captains, and three lieutenants will become 2nd captains.

8. [G.O., para. 38.] On the other hand, the Bengal corps will lose two colonels' allowances, and the Madras and Bombay corps will each lose one colonel's allowance. The number of officers receiving these allowances will be reduced to that fixed by the new organization by omitting to fill up one out of any four vacancies in the manner prescribed for the artillery, in my despatch, No. 29.

9. [G.O., para. 39.] Colonels of engineers, not being colonels commandant, will be in the same position as colonels of artillery, as described in the 6th para. of my despatch, above quoted.

10. [G.O., para. 40.] All the officers of the Indian engns. will receive commissions in the Royal Engns., but, as before explained, will rise by seniority in their respective regts.

11. [G.O., para. 41.] They will not be required to serve out of India, unless at their own request, but will be eligible to serve anywhere, receiving the pay and allowances fixed for Royal engns. in similar positions, and courting one year towards retiring pension on the Indian scale for every two years' service out of India.

12. [G.O., para. 42.] The places of Indian engineer officers who may elect, and who may be permitted to serve out of India on the above terms, will be filled up with officers of the royal engineers who may be willing to undertake the several duties required from engineer officers in the depart. of public works.

13. [G.O., para. 43.] The engineer corps of the several presidencies will continue to be, as at present, principally corps of officers, having no European soldiers attached to them. But engineer officers may be posted, as at present, as far as they can be made available, to the corps of native sappers, which must be maintained on the present footing, which, in many points, resembles that of irregular native infantry.

14. [G.O., para. 8.] It is very desirable to continue the practice of posting a large number of European non-commissioned officers to the native companies of sappers and miners. These men have hitherto been obtained by selection from the men enlisted for arty. and inf., and have been liable to be remanded to their regts. on misbehaviour.

15. The men so selected have undergone a special course of training at Chatham, and, after serving in India with the sappers and miners, and acquiring some knowledge of the native language, a portion of them who were able to pass the requisite examination were apptd. overseers in the public works dept.

16. I have communicated with H.R.H. the General C. in C. regarding the best method of providing men for this duty, and for keeping up the supply of vacancies in the public works department, a considerable portion of whom have hitherto been drawn from the local European sappers. H.R.H. is of opinion that it would be advisable to try the experiment of obtaining volunteers from the royal engineers, such men, as volunteers, being required to sign a declaration of their willingness to be remanded, in the event of their being guilty of gross misconduct, to the royal artillery in India, as there are no companies of royal engineers in that country. Should a difficulty arise in obtaining sufficient volunteers from the royal engineers, volunteers may be taken from the line, and trained at Chatham, like the engineer soldiers, who have hitherto been selected from the artillery and infantry recruits of the Indian forces.

17. These men could be remanded, in the event of misconduct, to any line regiment in India.

18. A further communication on this subject will be made to you hereafter; and in the meantime I request that you will furnish me with an estimate of the number of men required to be supplied annually for the above purpose.—I have, &c.,

DESPATCH, No. 31.

India-office, London, Jan. 18, 1861.

Military, No. 31.

To H.E. THE RIGHT HON. THE GOV. GEN. OF INDIA IN COUNCIL.

My Lord,—I have the honour to acknowledge your Excellency's despatch, No. 264, dated Oct. 8, informing me that you have decided on discontinuing the issue of commissions by the Govts. in India to the European officers of H.M.'s Indian armies, and submitting for the consideration of H.M.'s Govt. whether the form of commission issued by the C. in C. in India should be modified, and whether the officers of H.M.'s Indian forces should not be placed on the same footing in respect of their commissions as the officers of H.M.'s line army.

2. [G.O., para. 24.] These questions having been considered by H.M.'s Govt., I have to convey to you their approval of the discontinuance of the issue of local commissions to the officers of H.M.'s Indian forces, and to intimate to you that H.M. has been graciously pleased to signify her intention to give to every officer of her Indian armies a royal commission, in substitution for those which he now holds from the Govts. of India, and from the C. in C. But, whereas the commissions heretofore issued by the Govts. of India usually appointed the officers named therein to particular Indian regts., the commissions about to be granted by H.M. will, like those now granted by the C. in C. in India, confer rank and command in H.M.'s army in any part of the world, but will not appoint the officers holding them to any particular corps or arm of the service.

3. A form of the commission to be adopted for this purpose is forwarded for your information.

4. [G.O., para. 24.] In order to the preparation of these commissions, I desire to be furnished immediately with nominal rolls, showing the dates of the commissions held severally by all the officers of the armies of the three presidencies.

5. [G.O., para. 106.] The promotion of officers of the Indian armies, on the occurrence of vacancies, will be notified, as heretofore, by the Governments in

* 1 colonel commandant, 2 colonels, 4 lieutenant-colonels, 8 captains, 9 2nd captains, including an adjutant, 24 lieutenants.

India in the Official Gazette, and will be stated to be "subject to H.M.'s approval."

6. [G.O., para. 106.] A list of the promotions made in each Presidency will be submitted twice a month to this office, in order that measures may be taken for the preparation and signature of corresponding commissions; and, pending the receipt of these commissions the officers provisionally promoted by the Indian Govt. will enjoy the pay, provision, and privileges of the rank to which they may have been advanced.

I have, &c.,

GENERAL ORDER BY H.E. THE C. IN C. IN INDIA.
Adj. Gen.'s Office, Calcutta, April 10.—In publishing to the army the G.O. No. 332 of 1861, by H.E. the Gov. gen. in Council, the C. in C., with the view to carry out the final arrangements for the new constitution of the European forces of H.M.'s Indian army, as laid down in that order, and for the disposal of men who do not volunteer for general service, issues the following instructions:—

2. [Non-commissioned officers and soldiers.] The volunteering of soldiers in H.M.'s Indian army for H.M.'s general army will commence on the date of publication of this order at stations, and will close at the expiration of seven days, by which time the non-commissioned officers and soldiers must have made their election for the line or local service.

3. Officers commanding divisions, brigades, and stations, where there are British troops of H.M.'s Indian army, will appoint an officer of H.M.'s service, if possible a field officer, to superintend the volunteering for the new regiments.

4. The above-mentioned officers commanding will then call on the British non-commissioned officers and soldiers of the artillery, cavalry, and infantry, of H.M.'s Indian service, to volunteer with the specified bounty, for the royal artillery, and the new regiments of cavalry and infantry, or to elect to remain in the local service.

5. Soldiers of the art., cav., and inf., desirous of volunteering will present themselves before the superintending officer, and a justice of the peace or magistrate, who will sit together, and make before the latter officer the declaration appended to the Govt. Order No. 332 of 1861, to serve in the Royal Artillery, the _____ Regt. of Foot, or the _____ Regt. of Light Dragoons. When the volunteer shall have made this declaration, the superintending officer will enrol his name in the Royal Artillery, or the new regt. for which he has volunteered, after which the superintending officer will pay him his bounty.

6. Officers superintending the volunteering will apply to paymasters, or to local treasuries at stations where there are no pay offices, for the funds required to meet the payment of the bounty to volunteers.

7. Officers commanding divisions, brigades, and stations, will, as the soldiers of cavalry and infantry volunteer, form them into separate troops and companies, arranging, as far as possible, that the men who have served together before in the same troop or company shall continue so to serve together; and appointing the requisite number of officers to each troop and company. The men will take with them their arms and equipments of all kinds.

8. As soon as the C. in C. is informed of the number of officers and men who volunteer for general service, he will issue the necessary order for the formation of the new regiments of the line. Meanwhile the new troops and companies formed of the volunteers will remain under the orders of their old commanding officers.

9. Officers superintending the volunteering will pay particular attention to para. 11 of the G. G. O.,

No. 332 of 1861, which directs that the men who are now in each of the three oldest regts. of cavalry and infantry, and who volunteer for H.M.'s general service, shall join the new regt. which represents their former corps.

10. Should, however, the soldiers of a British regt. of H.M.'s Indian service volunteer in a body, or in such numbers as would render it preferable that they should not be formed into new troops and companies, in this case they will retain their original formation as a regt., receiving at once their new designation; for example, the 1st regt. Bengal European light cavalry would become the 19th light dragoons—the 1st European Bengal fusiliers would become the 101st regt. of foot (Royal Bengal fusiliers), and so on. Officers of a regiment so volunteering, electing to remain in the local service, would continue to do duty with the regt. till relieved.

11. The non-commissioned officers of the old regts. will have the prior claim to be appointed to their representative new regts.

12. As stated in paragraph 18 of the Government Order No. 332 of 1861, the non-commissioned officers of all arms of H.M.'s Indian service, volunteering for H.M.'s general service, will carry their rank with them to the new regiments to which they may volunteer; and should they be supernumeraries, will continue to receive their pay, succeeding to vacancies in the proportion of three to four.

13. Soldiers who now volunteer will have the option of choosing whether their future pension shall be reckoned according to the regulations of H.M.'s army, or according to those of the Indian forces. Their choice will be declared any time within three months from date of volunteering. They will also have the privilege of counting their past service towards completion of their contract service, and for pension under whichever regulations they may choose.

14. Boards will be held hereafter to record and close the services of volunteers in their old regiments and their choice of pension rules.

15. [Officers.] Officers commanding the stations where the 1st and 2nd Bengal fusiliers and the 3rd Bengal European regiment are quartered, will invite the officers of those regiments to volunteer into the regiments, respectively, representing those to which they now belong, as ruled in paragraphs 51, 52, and 53 of G.O. No. 332; that is to say, the officers of the 1st Bengal fusiliers for general service in the 101st Bengal fusiliers, the officers of the 2nd Bengal fusiliers for general service in the 104th Bengal fusiliers, and the officers of the 3rd European regiment for general service in the 107th Bengal infantry.

16. Officers commanding divisions, brigades, and stations, will, without delay, ascertain the wishes of officers of cav. and inf. of the local service in regard to volunteering to fill vacancies in the new line regiments of cav. and inf., should there be vacancies in them; and will transmit immediately to the Adjutant-gen. of the army rolls of officers who elect for the line; officers of the old local regts. having the prior claim, to be appointed to the representative new regts.

17. Officers commanding divisions, brigades, and stations, will report, as soon as possible, to the Adjutant-gen. of the army by telegram, and more fully by post, the number of officers and men who have volunteered for H.M.'s general service, as well as those who have elected for local service.

18. [Formation.] For the sake of the health of the troops, soldiers volunteering or electing for local service will not be moved during the hot season. Consequently, the soldiers of the 4th and 5th Bengal light cavalry, and of the 4th and 6th Bengal Eur. inf., as well as those of the recruit depot at Barrackpore, volunteering for general service, will not join the new regts. for which they have volunteered, till the weather permits.

19. The soldiers of the 6th Bengal Eur. regt., and of the cav. and inf. of H.M.'s Indian service at the depot at Barrackpore, who volunteer for any of the three new regts. of cav. and inf. of the line, will be formed into a "provisional battalion," of which the number of troops and companies will depend on the number of volunteers.

20. The officers commanding at Fort William, and at Barrackpore, and Dum Dum, will appoint the requisite number of officers and non-commissioned officers to these troops and companies. When the number of volunteers is known, the C. in C. will officer the provisional battalion.

21. The provisional batt. will be stationed either at Barrackpore or Dum Dum, as barrack accommodation will allow, till the weather permits the volunteers to join their new regts.

22. [Artillery.] Officers commanding divisions, brigades, and stations, will transmit to the Adjutant general of the army the names of officers of the artillery willing to serve out of India, on the conditions specified in para. 30 of G.O., No. 332.

23. The officers mentioned in the preceding paragraph, and officers from the Bengal artillery, who will receive commissions in the royal artillery, concurrent with those which they now hold, will be appointed to the new batteries about to be formed.

24. The detached state, and the peculiar nature of artillery, prevent the C. in C. from, at once, ordering the formation of distinct bodies of volunteers, as in the cavalry and infantry; but as soon as H.E. shall have learnt the number of volunteers, as well as of the men electing for local service, he will issue the necessary orders for the organisation of both bodies:—in the meantime the soldiers of both these classes will continue to serve in their present troops, field and heavy batteries, and reserve companies.

25. Officers commanding divisions, brigades, and stations, will transmit, with the least possible delay, by telegram, and more fully by post, the names of officers of art., electing to serve out of India, and a numerical return of the volunteers for the Royal Artillery, forwarding duplicate rolls to the commandant of Bengal Artillery.

26. [Engineers.] The position of officers of engineers is defined in para. 41 of the Govt. Order No. 332, but the election for general or local service by non-commissioned officers of the Bengal Engineers will be carried into effect in the same way as prescribed for the other branches of the service.

27. Warrant officers, non-com. officers, and men employed in the several departments of the army, non-com. officers serving with Native regts., and all other men borne on the unattached list, will have the option of accepting the conditions of H.M.'s general service, with the specified bounty to all soldiers below the Warrant grade. Their commanding officers, and the heads of departments, will, at the earliest opportunity, take the prescribed declaration from the volunteers, and will give them the bounty, transmitting nominal rolls of the volunteers to the adjt.-gen. of the army.

28. [Local troops.] Officers commanding divisions, brigades, and stations will form into troops and companies the non-commsd. officers and soldiers of the cav. and inf. of H.M.'s Indian service who elect for local service; and will appt. to them the requisite number of officers, including field officers if required by the number of troops and companies. Men who have served together before in the same troops or companies are, as far as possible, to continue so to serve together. Returns of all troops and companies so formed will be forwarded, immediately, to the Adjutant-general of the army; and, meanwhile, they will remain and do duty at the stations where they are formed till the season will permit of their being organised into regts. of each arm, should their numbers admit of it.

29. The officers, non-commissioned officers, and men of the Lahore light horse will conform exactly to the rules laid down in this order for the officers, non-commissioned officers, and men of the regiments of Bengal European light cavalry, as regards volunteering for the line, or remaining in the local service.

30. The commander-in-chief feels convinced that officers commanding divisions, brigades, and stations, will use their most strenuous exertions to insure arrangements prescribed in this general order being carried out without confusion or irregularity; and that they will take special care that the changes in regiments shall not in any way affect good order or the comfort of officers or soldiers, whether they elect for her Majesty's general army or the local force.

31. Sir Hugh Rose requests his Excellency the C. in C. of the Bombay army and the Major gen. commanding the Madras army, to cause the instructions contained in this G.O. to be carried out, making them applicable to the British troops of H.M.'s Indian army, and to local requirements within their commands; and to have the goodness to inform him by telegram, and more fully by post, of the results of the volunteering, as regards both officers and men.

By order of H.E. the C. in C.,

Adj. gen. of the Army.

"SPINNING TOPS is a feat of sleight-of-hand in which the Japanese excel. In their shops great varieties of these toys are to be procured. In some kinds, what appears an ordinary humming-top, on being spun suddenly throws out a little family of smaller tops, all spinning around the mother top. The wonderful exhibitions of skill which I have seen described of a Japanese spinning a top which was made to run up the edge of a sword-blade and then retire along the same thin line of surface, are simply impossible and inexplicable on any principle of mere sleight-of-hand or manual dexterity. I am inclined to refer such feats to the secret apparatus of a thin hair guiding the top over a concealed groove on the edge of the sword. I noticed one kind of spinning-top which illustrated this mode of explanation. On receiving from the hand by means of a coil of cord its rotatory motion, it slowly unwound a piece of hair and descended an inclined plane between a double edge forming a small channel or groove in which the point worked its way, until the end of the hair-line again wound itself around the top and brought it slowly back in its upward ascent to its original starting-place."—Ten Weeks in Japan.

THE GANGES CANAL.

THE Indian Government has acted wisely in publishing the correspondence that has lately taken place on the subject of the beneficial results that have already been attained by even the partial completion of the great Ganges Canal. That stupendous monument of engineering enterprise has, notwithstanding the numerous untoward circumstances which have impeded and delayed its construction, fully justified the sanguine anticipations of its originators, and the high reputation it has conferred on Sir Proby Cautley. That the natives should have regarded the design with suspicion and contempt, and have watched its prosecution with mingled feelings of jealousy and astonishment, is no more than might have been anticipated from their inveterate superstition and profound ignorance on all matters of science. Their distrust, besides, was the more excusable when not a few British officers of intelligence and experience were equally confident of failure and equally loud in their predictions of disaster. It was said that the levels were wrongly calculated, that the works were not massive enough to withstand the rush of waters after the melting of the snows and during the principal rainy season, that in time of drought the effect of the canal would be to drain the wells and all other existing means of irrigation, and finally that malaria would be engendered on the banks and spread far and wide on either side. Undismayed by these dismal forebodings, the Government continued to repose undiminished reliance on the skill and perseverance of the engineer officers superintending the works, and the event has proved that its confidence was well placed. It is frankly admitted that at the commencement of the last agricultural season there were some defects which greatly impaired the utility of the canal for a time; but at a later period its beneficent action was unmistakable, "and the breadth of land within reach of its waters presented a wonderful contrast with the country generally." In the Meerut division the Commissioner reports that "the standing crops are as full and as fine as they could have been in the most prosperous of seasons." This satisfactory result was entirely due to irrigation. "The land was ploughed with the aid of water taken from the canal, the seed was sown with the same aid, and would not have germinated without it, and the produce is what the Commissioner has described it to be, only because it has been irrigated from the canal. Had there been no canal there would have been no crops on broad lands which are now covered with wheat and other cereals in large abundance." These general observations are more than confirmed by the special report of Captain Turnbull, Superintendent-General of Navigation. From this it appears that the water-rate assessed on the Ganges Canal during the past year was probably not less than £60,000, but these figures give a very inadequate idea of the benefit thence derived by Government alone, and none at all of the almost creative blessings conferred upon the people. It is estimated that six hundred square miles were covered with cultivation by means of the canal water, and that nearly three hundred and forty millions of pounds of grain were, in consequence, brought into the market. Now, every pound of grain will maintain one man, or one woman and a child, for a whole day, so that the above quantity of food, "which could not otherwise have been produced this year," may have saved nearly one million and a half of human beings for a whole year from the horrors of starvation. Fodder, too, has been thus procured to preserve the cattle in the adjacent districts, and it is calculated that a circulation of coin has been caused to the extent of £1,200,000 sterling. Negatively, Government has been saved a loss of quite £200,000, which it would otherwise have been obliged to remit in land revenue, and the Canal has further rendered very important service to the famished population of the North-West Provinces, by affording a speedier transport of grain than the bullock-carts, which would have been the only other means of conveyance. In short, to adopt the Lieut.-governor's own words, "the beneficial effects of the Ganges Canal in mitigating the scarcity of food and the severity of distress cannot be over-estimated;" and, as a natural corollary, his Honour insists that "it will be both good policy and good economy to push on this magnificent work to completion with the utmost vigour, even though at the risk of some present financial inconvenience." But why should there be any inconvenience of a financial nature? It is clearly expedient that public works of a productive character should be prosecuted without intermission, and for this purpose the proper course to pursue is to raise money by a specific loan. It is surely unreasonable to expect that the annual revenues of the country will suffice to meet such heavy extraneous demands in addition to the ordinary and inevitable expenses of government. And it must be remembered that the Ganges Canal is only one of several undertakings, each requiring immediate and urgent attention. Lord Canning, perchance, may shrink from the responsibility of terminating his tenure of office with a loan of ten or twelve millions; but we trust that his successor will not hesitate to inaugurate his viceroyalty by a measure that will increase the resources of the country and augment the material prosperity of the people without in any way adding to the burden of taxation.

INCIDENCE OF THE TRADE-TAX IN THE CITY OF LUCKNOW.

IN the latter part of the month of February we had occasion to make some general remarks on the incidence of the trade-tax in the Province of Oude, and we thence drew the inference that trade must be conducted on a very small scale, and that consequently no great expectations were to be founded on native enterprise. "In the great cities," we went on to observe, "there are, undoubtedly, a few persons possessed of almost fabulous wealth, but they are not numerous enough to provide capital for any really great undertakings." We are now in possession of Mr. Wingfield's report on the incidence of the trade-tax in the City of Lucknow itself, and have seldom perused an official paper of a less encouraging nature. The entire population of the capital of Oude is stated at only 340,744 souls, of whom the males are "estimated" at 183,381, and of these again 80,000 "may be presumed" to be adults. It will be seen that it is all guess work. The population is "taken" at a certain amount, "which the Chief Commissioner would have thought below the mark," but no reason is given for his being ultimately satisfied with that estimate, and the other calculations are based upon "ifs" and "may bes"—the only thing definite being the statement that "60,000 have been taxed." The actual number, however, is 60,510, though the Chief Commissioner had previously "represented it at about 70,000, and in the returns of the incidence of the tax first submitted to him, it was entered at 75,000." Being struck with the disproportion of this number to that of the adults, the Chief Commissioner caused the returns to be more carefully scrutinised, when it was discovered "that they had been incorrectly prepared, the original registers of persons liable to the tax having been taken as a guide, in forgetfulness of the fact that of the persons entered therein about 15,000 had been struck out by the authorities or the punchayuts as too poor to pay." Such "forgetfulness," we trust, was punished by the instant dismissal of the individuals capable of such gross carelessness; but in any case an exordium of this character is fatal to all confidence in the trustworthiness of the report. The entire sum to be paid by the city was assessed at £30,000; but this amount being afterwards considered excessive, a reduction was authorised to the extent of £3,000, including an item of £648. 6s., "being the amount taken off some heavily assessed mohallahs and laid on others, contrary to the Chief Commissioner's instructions." More blundering in such a simple thing as this! After all, the total demand "must here be reckoned at £26,988." But why must it be so "reckoned?" Was that the amount of the demand, or was it not? However, not even this miserable "reckoning" was realised. Up to the date of the report only £23,716. 8s. had been collected, and after being told that £1,440 are "pronounced" irrecoverable, and that the remainder "may be" classed as doubtful, we arrive at the conclusion that "probably the greater part will have eventually to be remitted." From the receipts, small as they are, there is a deduction to be made of £609 for expense of collection up to the end of December, and "it is estimated" that £60 more will be expended. "This," says the Chief Commissioner, "is a very moderate charge." Well, it is very nearly three per cent., and we "reckon" that is quite sufficient under all the circumstances of the case. The average rate for each payer is set down at Rs. 4-7-4, while for the whole province it was only Rs. 1-14-5. The only classes which are assessed higher in the country than in the capital are those of sugar-boilers and washermen. The former trade is conducted on a smaller scale in Lucknow than in the adjacent districts, because the price of fuel is higher in a large city; and the village washerman "is said" to carry on a more prosperous business than his town fellow-tradesman, because he has generally a monopoly, while the latter is exposed to much competition. There are some branches of industry which are peculiar to the capital, such as makers and sellers of brocade, gold and silver tissue, braidings, tinsel garlands, pickles, soap, and carpets, tallow-chandlers, stone-cutters, seal-engravers, makers of mirrors, spectacles, and hookahs, cloth crimpers, brokers, commission agents, &c., &c. The regular confectioners who keep shops have been rated at Rs. 3-9 per head, but as there are upwards of 800 perambulating sweetmeat sellers in the city, the average is reduced to Rs. 2-14. The occupation of weavers is described as also being more profitable in the districts than in Lucknow, though just before we were assured that the sugar boilers and washermen were the only two classes which constituted an exception to the rule that the city averages are higher than those of the districts. The reason why the village weaver is more prosperous than the townsman is one that interests our manufacturers in no common degree—it is because in Lucknow "European fabrics are in greater demand than native." If this be really the case, there is fair ground for anticipating a large increase of our export trade to India when the people generally become "well-to-do." The highest personal assessment falls upon a timber-dealer, and a general contractor is likewise singled out by the payment of £100. Both these individuals probably owe much of their success to the rebuilding of the city since its final subjugation. The pressure exerted for the realization of the tax does not appear to justify the complaints of oppression that were said last year to be rife in Lucknow. In all, only three hundred and twenty-three petitions were sent in, and of these only four were complaints of oppression, not one instance of which was ever proved. The number of persons arrested was eighty-two, and no more than thirteen cases occurred of attachment of personal property for default of payment. Still, there remains the fact that the wealthy and populous city of Lucknow on a trade-tax of three per cent. yields rather less than £24,000 per annum, representing an aggregate income of under £800,000, or about £13 4s. 5d. for the annual income of each of the 60,510 tax-payers, while in the districts it is about £6. 6s.—in the one case indicating an average weekly profit of 4s. 5d. and in the other of 2s. 5d. Alas, for the wealth of Ormus and of Ind!

LOYALTY TO ORDER.

On the 16th of April last there was a grand durbar held at Government-house, Calcutta. The talookdars of Oude, actuated, we are requested to suppose, by an irresistible desire to let off a little of that allegiance which was boiling in their tawny bosoms, volunteered a journey, in the hot winds, to the metropolis—a pleasure excursion of, say, some seven hundred miles. They were, of course, well received; the usual preparations for an oriental levee were made, and the somewhat faded properties of Government-house furbished up for a grand occasion.

The throne is set; the doors are opened. Then the subject talookdars hasten to lay before the Viceroy of India an address of decidedly inflated loyalty, and that potentate, in language of equal inflation, proceeds to tell them that Britain is invincible and irresistible, and beneficent and merciful as she is great; in short, all the national adjectives: and that though Oude certainly was in complete anarchy a few years ago, and in ungrateful rebellion some years later, yet that now, he is happy to say, it presents all the features of a little Paradise! What a pleasing occasion! What a satisfactory spectacle! The inauguration of a new Saturnian reign.

Now, we do not at all mean to say that Oude is not better governed than before the rebellion; on the contrary, we rejoice to believe that many of the mistakes which were made on our first occupation of the country have been rectified; the status of society we found there has been, in a measure, restored; and we are refraining from the folly of pushing civilisation, too hastily, on the acceptance of an uncivilised people. This policy will in the end no doubt bear its fruit in the decreasing hostility of the conquered race. But we think the English public should know that demonstrations, such as this Calcutta durbar, are of no political signification, afford no test of native sentiment, nor do they tend, as we believe, to raise the dignity or increase the influence of the representative of the British Crown. Interesting and imposing spectacles as they may seem from this distance, they entirely fail to attract, or even to amuse, the Indian population, because their artificial nature is thoroughly understood. We do not mean to assert that this particular demonstration was actually ordered in so many words, by the authorities, but we undoubtedly believe that the whole thing was essentially, from beginning to end, a Government affair. Public exhibitions of the kind in India originate in the pardonable vanity of high officials, who desire to bring their administrative acts prominently to notice. Natives of influence and position are gently sounded. It is whispered to them that certain measures might be taken which would be considered an acceptable compliment to the supreme power. The taste for flattery and fawning, indigenous to all Orientals, is tickled into liveliness, and stimulated by delicate hints and suggestions into action.

The Viceroy, we will say, is on his tour. He approaches a town. The magistrate assembles the principal merchants and inquires, would they not like to illuminate? They would not really, of course, wish to do so, because it costs money, and they do not care two straws for the Government, or the Viceroy, or his policy, or anything else that seems so remote from their own immediate interests, or with which they are so imperfectly acquainted. But these same merchants can perfectly understand that it is just as well to keep straight with their own magistrate. So they all agree to subscribe. The town is illuminated, and the Gazette subsequently signifies how gratified his Excellency was with his reception, and how creditable the spontaneous loyalty of the inhabitants of the place is to the administration of the principal civil functionary. And the magistrate can conscientiously say, after all, that he never ordered the illumination. Such are all these public demonstrations. They are essentially impostures; they appeal to Austrian rather than to English sympathies, for their nature is unknown to this country. It by no means follows that they are accompanied by sullenness or animosity on the part of the people; we merely assert that, being artificial and manufactured, as a test of popular feeling they are utterly worthless. The particular demonstration which has called forth this article seems only to differ from its fellows in having been planned with worse taste, executed with less artistic skill, and concluded with smaller appreciable result, than any of which we have recollection.

The recent sentimentalism of excessive delicacy towards the feelings of native princes is, as we all know, in full blossom now in Hindostan. Was it quite in unison with this principle, or indeed with ordinary good taste, to fix upon Calcutta as the best locality for the reception of a loyal address from Oude? It must have been highly gratifying to the deposed King at Garden Reach, that the lawless Barons of his kingdom should select the very threshold of his last asylum as a suitable spot from which to congratulate the British Power on the supersession of a system whose main fault was its inability to cope with, and punish, their own villainous misconduct.

As to the address itself, nothing could be more sickeningly fulsome or more strikingly false. It bears traces of the pen of some unemployed Moonshree, a fervid candidate for a Government situation. A few of the finest things, we dare say, were put in, unknown to himself, in Mr. Yule's office. And who suggested the idea of an address? Why, the thing in its nature is associated with committee meetings, public dinners, circulars, handbills, and all the apparatus of public feelings in England: and, in the same degree, is repugnant to Oriental notions, and an innovation on the customs of Eastern Courts, where the presentation of something far more substantial than sonorous paragraphs is always expected. Then, in the name of common decency, why, if there was to be an address, should it be made by Maun Singh; unless, indeed, to stamp more deeply the character of meretriciousness on the whole proceedings? There was one, amongst the more deeply tainted of the rebels of Oude, who varied his insolent violence by mean efforts to betray his friends. But that man was the protégé of the Christian Knight of Nepal, and was too powerful to be treated otherwise than with mercy by the British Government. Rightly, indeed, as the prince of sham loyalists, should he come forward to preside on such an occasion—but in no other character. A contemporary, whilst recognising the pinchbeck character of the exhibition, seems to think that much was retrieved by the dignity of Lord Canning's reply—"Out of the whole mass," says he, "of brilliant and frothy pomp, Lord Canning seems to stand out the only tangible figure, in stern and noble relief." We cannot agree. Of personal dignity we do not speak. It is a secondary matter, and indeed a matter of opinion. But what is there "stern" and "noble" in the substance of the reply itself? Where is the sternness in unmeaning compliment and exaggerated self-laudation,—where the nobility in statements which are literally contrary to fact? It is worse than farce to tell Maun Singh that "sharp punishment swept the guiltiest from among the Oude Talookdars." It is equal to farce, we sincerely trust, to tell the English public (to whom, by the way, the speech is addressed) that perfect order, tranquillity, and social happiness reign in a country which at present, from unavoidable circumstances, is endowed with only the rudest institutions. That Oude scrambles on pretty well, and is likely to do better, may be fairly asserted. But the country is only just emerging from barbarism, and it has suffered from the disadvantages inseparably connected with a speculative administration. New plans look admirably on paper, but a people naturally suffers more or less till its Governmental system is in fair working order. Everything in Oude must, as yet, be rough and crude in the extreme: law, police, and, especially, the magisterial proceedings of these precious talookdars. It cannot be expected that uneducated petty tyrants, flushed with a recent rebellion, can be otherwise than most unsuitable persons to entrust with the exercise of judicial powers. Appointing them was a necessary evil, and good in the end may come of it; but their conduct must, we should think, tend at first to compromise the character of Government institutions. There is plenty of room for honest hard work in Oude, but little cause, as may be readily supposed, for these outpourings of self-congratulation.

It remains to add, that as the mantle of Sir Henry Elliot has not descended on the shoulders of any one in the present Foreign Department, the Hindoostanee translations of vice-regal eloquence are ludicrously unidiomatic, and baldly unintelligible to a degree which would be droll if it were not derogatory. A complete ignorance also exists as to the niceties of oriental etiquette, touching precedence, &c., so that these public ceremonials seldom occur without some mistake, which proves the cause of endless heart-burnings and jealousies. Can we wonder that, though all the officials, in full costume, were present at this wonderful durbar, native Calcutta was represented by only sixteen of its inhabitants!

EASTERN BENGAL RAILWAY.—The directors in their report observe with satisfaction the confidence expressed by Mr. Purdon that the works will be completed within the estimates. Everything is being pressed forward by the Government and the officers of the company to endeavour to open, if possible, in May next. The large payments in full made by the shareholders, in anticipation of calls, have enabled the directors hitherto to postpone the final call. It has now, however, been made payable in July. Six locomotive engines were shipped two months ago, and the remainder of the rolling stock is in course of manufacture, and will be shipped as finished, so that the whole may arrive in India before next May, in time for the opening of the line. The Government of India were now giving aid to increase the large prospective local traffic of the railway, by improving old and constructing new roads to act as feeders to it. The pecuniary expenditure already ordered to be paid by the Government as a beginning for this purpose amounts to Rs. 2,41,500, and it appears to be the intention of the Government to lay out further sums for the same purpose. The capital account to 31st of December last shows that £653,826 had been received, and £561,260 expended, leaving a balance of £92,561.

PREFACE.

The Mutiny Act and Articles of War having undergone considerable amendment in the present Session of Parliament, it has appeared to the authors a fitting opportunity to lay before the military profession a concise treatise on the laws under which they serve.

In so doing they have not confined their attention to Courts-martial, but have endeavoured to provide the soldier of every rank and every service with the means of ascertaining his privileges as well as his duties and liabilities.

The Acts relating to the Militia have all been enumerated, but their bulk renders it impossible to give them at length in a work like the present. The Government having pledged themselves to consolidate the Militia laws next Session, perhaps there may then be some hope of presenting them to the reader in a comprehensive form. The Militia Bill of the present session, as it introduces some new and important provisions, is given at length in the Appendix.

A full abstract of the Laws affecting Volunteers and Yeomanry Corps occupies a separate chapter, and the Act whereby they are enabled to acquire lands for practice grounds (which at the time these words are written is yet before Parliament), will likewise be added.

A shorter and more popular notice of these Acts might have been more agreeable to the majority of readers, but in the hope of making this book useful as a book of reference, not only to Volunteers, but to magistrates and other civil dignitaries, it has been deemed more advantageous to ensure accuracy by quoting the words of the enactments, than by curtailment to risk the omission of important matter. Any reader disinclined to peruse the Acts at length, may find any subject on which he desires to inform himself by reference to the Index.

The question of Tolls on the Metropolitan Bridges having lately excited some controversy, a notice of the exemption clauses in the several Acts will be found in the Appendix, where also the late General Order relative to retired pay to Adjutants of Volunteers has been subjoined.

The authors feel that they owe some apology for publishing a law book in the present novel form; but after much consideration and many friendly suggestions, they have preferred to compress matter which would well have filled a more bulky volume, into this handy and inexpensive shape, in order to bring it within the reach of every one.

Before concluding this preface, the authors are bound to record their obligations to that very useful and elaborate work, "Hough's Military Precedents," without the assistance of which their labour would have been much extended. They have also to acknowledge the assistance of "Simmons on Courts-martial;" "D'Aguilar on Courts-martial;" and H. B. Thompson's "Military Forces of Great Britain."

It is important to observe, that when used in early life, it effectually prevents all aches in the teeth and gums, effaces spots and discoloration, eradicates scurvy, and, in a word, soon realises the chief attribute of beauty—a Fine Set of Pearly Teeth.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

THE Bombay Mail of the 11th of May brings two highly important documents from Calcutta, both of which are republished in our columns. Our military readers will probably take the greatest interest in the one ascribed to Major Chesney, and which is now under the serious consideration of the Government. The object aimed at is to induce, if possible, a thousand officers of the old Indian army to retire, by offering them liberal pensions in addition to what they are already entitled to receive. The following are the rates held out as a bait to tempt to an honourable retirement all such as are weary of their lengthened exile, but who care not in their mature years to enter upon a new career of military service:—

	per an.
To all officers of 40 years' serv. & upwards...	£500

" 36 " " " "	420
" 34 " " " "	380
" 32 " " " "	340
" 30 " " " "	300
" 28 " " " "	260
" 26 " " " "	220
" 24 " " " "	180
" 20 " " " "	100

As the advantages of this scheme are confined to the Cavalry and Infantry, to the exclusion of the Ordnance Corps, it would be impossible to obtain a thousand officers who have completed twenty years' actual service. It is therefore suggested that "all officers of more than 12 years' service, but who are not entitled to a captain's pension, be offered the annuity equivalent to expectation in each case of succession to captain's pension, with an annuity of £120 additional, provided that in no case a total higher pension be awarded than to which an officer entitled to a captain's pension would receive. It being also understood that officers are not precluded from taking advantage of the existing regulations regarding half-pay, and receiving the annuity now offered in addition." It does not appear, however, that officers on the invalid establishment will participate in this liberal arrangement, but considering how few is their number and how dreary the prospect of remaining, as it were, imprisoned for life in India after all their old comrades have left for other lands, it is earnestly to be hoped that the Government will take a generous view of their case, and allow them to benefit by Major Chesney's well-intentioned and skillfully-constructed scheme.

If less deeply and personally interesting to a particular class of the Anglo-Indian community, Mr. Laing's Financial Statement is unquestionably of far greater general importance than even the retirement of a thousand experienced and veteran officers. Assuming the correctness of the data, it must be admitted that this exposition of the financial position of the Indian Government is far more satisfactory than the most sanguine imagination could have anticipated only a few months ago. Mr. Laing positively declares that the "yawning chasm" that seemed to open before our eyes has been filled up, or at least that it will be bridged over before the close of the current financial year. The deficit at the close of 1860-61 he acknowledges to be £6,000,000, which could only be met in one way, by "sticking the spurs well in and going straight at it"—a thoroughly English mode of getting over a difficulty. There was no hope of putting off the evil day by borrowing money—"no chance of craning, no time to look to the right or left." Thus driven into a corner the Government came to its senses, and discovered that if the income could not be made to cover the expenditure, the expenditure must be brought to fall within the income. In homely phrase it resolved at last to cut its coat according to its cloth, and do without silk lappels for a time. The first step contemplated is the reduction of the military estimates by £3,500,000. There is ample room for retrenchment in that direction. In the past year the cost of the Indian army has been actually £5,250,000 more than it was in 1856, previous to the mutiny. Henceforth the native army will not exceed 140,000 men, while the European force will remain at about 70,000 men, showing a reduction of 200,000 sepoys and military police since 1859. The permanent annual expenditure under the head of Military charges will probably not exceed twelve millions in India and two millions at home. The Indian Navy also comes in for its share of retrenchment. It has cost nearly one million a year for very little purpose, but in 1861-62 it will be cut down to one half that sum, and will ultimately be abolished. Nor are economical considerations forgotten under the head of the Civil Administration. The actual saving, indeed, is small, because of the increased cost of opium, salt, and Income-tax, and the necessity of affording temporary relief to the starving population of the North-Western Provinces, but it is not the less real and permanent. In short, the total reduction for the year under all heads amounts to £3,599,750; the total expenditure for 1861-62 being £41,544,699, as against £45,154,449 in 1860-61.

On the other hand there is a positive increase of receipts. The Land-tax, notwithstanding remissions to the extent of £360,000 on account of the famine, stands at £18,951,156, whereas in 1860-61 it was £18,762,447. The Incometax was estimated at two millions, but the nett annual produce will not exceed £1,400,000. In salt there will be a large increase, or very nearly £600,000. Opium is almost equally productive, and is expected to yield about half a million over last year's receipts. The increase on stamps is nearly £400,000, but on miscellaneous items there is a falling off to the extent of £750,000. The total revenue for 1861-62 is estimated at £41,294,595 as compared with £39,285,731 in 1860-61—giving a clear balance of £2,008,864. The deficit is thus reduced to £260,104, but as £500,000 have been assigned to Civil Works in excess of last year's expenditure, it is obvious that there is a surplus of £239,896, because that half-million is to be defrayed, not from the public treasury, but from local taxation. After all, it is needless to examine this item too closely. If the Indian expenditure for the current financial year do not exceed the income by a larger amount than a quarter of a million, there will be no occasion, as Mr. Laing observes, to send a new Chancellor of the Exchequer from England to devise new taxes. The Income-tax is pronounced to be, financially, a failure, and the License-tax is postponed for a season until these two sources of taxation can be brought into one channel. Such is a meagre outline of Mr. Laing's financial statement, which, we regret to add, appears to have been expressed in the worst possible taste, being disfigured with ill-chosen metaphors, and with familiar, if not vulgar, illustrations.

In conclusion, we may add that Sir Charles Wood last night brought in a Bill to obtain powers from Parliament to raise a loan of £4,000,000 on the security of the revenues of India.

THE INDIAN BUDGET.

In the Legislative Council on the 27th April the whole of the members were present. After various petitions and other formal business had been disposed of,

Mr. Laing rose, in pursuance of notice, to make his financial statement. He said that it now became his duty on behalf of the Government to submit a statement of the finances of the country for the year commencing 1st May, 1861. The subject was far too grave and serious a one to admit of any unnecessary preface or introduction. India had been at a standstill for months past, waiting until the present financial statement should declare her to be bankrupt or solvent. England, too, had cast an anxious eye towards us with a view of ascertaining whether we were to be the source of strength or weakness. Knowing, then, the great importance of the task which had devolved upon him, and feeling that all superfluous comment would be out of place, he would at once proceed to state facts, and facts alone. And the first question which must arise would probably be, "How do we really stand?" Many now present would remember the occasion on which his lamented predecessor in office, Mr. Wilson, made his statement for 1860-1, twelve months ago. Mr. Wilson, on that occasion, showed that a deficit had existed, and gradually accumulated for a long series of years, to the extent of two and a half millions a year, and during the mutiny considerably larger. During the years intervening between 1857 and 1860, the sum of thirty-eight millions sterling was added to the national debt of India. Mr. Wilson proposed several measures for meeting this deficiency, but, unfortunately, his hopes had not been fully realised. The actual deficit in February last on the past year's budget amounted to £6,678,000. This deficit had been principally met by reducing the cash balances. Mr. Wilson's principal sources of additional revenue were expected to be derived from the Income and License-taxes, and £3,500,000 was named as the probable revenue derivable from these taxes. Now, only one of these taxes had actually been enforced,—namely, the Income-tax, and that only for a portion of the year. He believed, however, that if these proposed taxes had been in full operation for the whole year they would not have reached Mr. Wilson's estimate. He placed the probable estimate for both taxes throughout the year at about two millions. Admitting that these taxes had been collected for the past year, there would, nevertheless, be a deficit of five and a-half millions. Hon. members were probably aware that a very different state of affairs was quoted by Sir C. Wood in the House of Commons. The statement made on that occasion was based on mistaken notions, on anticipated results rather than facts; and instead of the reductions expected, the result here showed an increase in the expenditure for 1860-1 on previous years. In fact, the income expected to be derived from the new taxes was overestimated, the expenditure was underestimated, and that statement was in error to the extent of nearly five millions; and the close of the year 1860-1 found us with a deficit of £6,000,000. This result was most unsatisfactory. The cash balances in the Treasury were low, which did not improve the prospect. They could not look to England for relief beyond raising money for carrying on useful works. The deficit had to be met by themselves, and they had no time to look about them. That council was not a place for personal remarks, but he had one observation to make, and that was that, though in a long statement it was impossible to avoid egotism of expression, he did not mean to arrogate to himself credit that was equally due to others. He utterly disclaimed the idea. It must be evident to all that one in the position of the Governor-general of India was, for good or evil, the mainspring of all the policy of that Government. It was not for him to speak of Lord Canning, but if it had been said that he was not eager for financial reduction he had been misrepresented. Ever since he (Mr. Laing) had been in India his lordship had expressed a constant and uniform desire for reduction, and it would be injustice to his colleagues in the Council not to say that they were all actuated by the same feelings. Too much praise could not be given to the Military Finance Commission, who, under Colonel Balfour's auspices, had, through evil report and good report, done their utmost to assist the Government in their financial difficulty. As for the marine reductions, without Captain Rennie's active assistance they would never have been effected. The great saving proposed now was in the reduction of the native army. Before the mutiny in 1857, the Indian army amounted to Strength { 45,522 Europeans.

232,224 Natives.
Cost ... £11,500,000 in India.
£1,250,000 in England.

It appeared that in 1858-9 the cost rose to maximum, viz., £24,750,000, and £1,000,000 extra for military police. In 1860-1 the cost was reduced to £15,279,000 in India, and £2,750,000 in England; or, in all, £18,000,000; still leaving a deficiency of 5½ millions over 1857. The native army in August last still consisted of 210,000 men, with 60,000 military police; or, the total armed native force was 10,000 more than before the mutiny. But by the reductions now proposed to be made—military police altogether got rid of, excepting about 7,000 in Bengal—the native infantry would be reduced to a uniform strength of 712 natives of all ranks per regiment. These reductions had actually been, or were in process of being, carried out. The final result would reduce the native army to 140,000, or, with the military police, to 150,000 fewer than a year ago. In the European force no material change would be effected, but in the Ordnance, Commissariat, and barrack departments large reductions would be made. He spoke of them with confidence, not as based upon mere conjecture, but estimates that had been carefully gone through by the Military Finance Commission. The financial result of these was a total reduction in army expenditure of about £3,500,000—from £15,279,000 in 1860-1, to £12,800,000 in 1861-2, of which about £12,200,000 would be the permanent expense, and about £600,000 a temporary outlay for gratuities in disbanding troops, &c. It was true that a great part of this reduction had been effected by the taking up of reserve stores, but he could see no reason why, when all the gratuities, &c., had been paid, the permanent cost should exceed twelve millions, or as low as it was before the mutiny; because, although the nominal expenditure was 11½ millions, that reduction had been so effected as to keep the European forces at a lower strength than was prudent. The country, however, had had a lesson on that subject, and was not likely to commit the same error. These Indian charges had been based upon actual estimates, but in the Home Military charges only a small allowance had been made for known reductions of forces in depôts. He hoped that much greater reductions would be made, and that India would no longer be considered as a rich mine from which a revenue was to be derived, but as a country where English capital and energy would be invested for the mutual benefit of both countries; and in order to attain this, strict justice in money matters was essentially necessary. With regard to the sister service a great reduction had been made. Without any disparagement to the courage of the navy and marine, there was no doubt that the whole fleet could scarcely have stood against one single broadside of a modern line-of-battle ship, and it would have been absurd for an embarrassed Government to keep up a navy merely for the name of the thing. Several steamers had been thrown out of commission, and arrangements for naval duties on an economic but efficient scale entered into with the Home Government, and the consequence was a virtual reduction from £854,850 in 1860-1 to £536,000 in 1861-2. River steamers would still be carried on, but in his opinion it was scarcely politic for the Government to run against private companies whose interests had been guaranteed by them at 5 per cent. The next important point was the Civil administration, and in this there was a virtual reduction of £50,000, after allowing for about £350,000 increased charge of opium, salt, and Income tax, and £150,000 for the Famine Relief Fund. The greater part of these reductions had been effected in the police, which previously had been as inefficient as expensive, but some reduction had also been made, owing to the energy of the Civil Finance Commission, in private establishments, which though small in themselves amounted to a considerable whole. "For this large reduction in civil expenditure they were very much indebted to the Civil Finance Commission, who had aided in reducing outlay, rooting out abuses, and revising estimates with the most meritorious zeal." These reductions depended very much on the new audit system, and nothing could be more conducive to the beneficial working of that system than true, consistent economy. In public works, as far as military ones were concerned, there was a saving of £400,000, but in civil ones there would be an increase of £225,000. Including local funds, the expenditure on works of improvement would be £540,000 more in 1861-2 than in 1860-1. Then came the subject of roads in cotton districts. There would be a great expense in opening up these roads, but there was a great necessity for them. It was their duty in the present state of affairs in America to strain every nerve to place India in the market, and by underselling slave labour by free labour to make the cause of freedom triumphant, and show that England had not sacrificed her West Indian colonies and her millions of money for a mere fiction. Irrigation and canals, too, would require attention. Nothing was more lamentable than that the prosperity of the country should be retarded for want of water, and one of the most gratifying results of financial prosperity would be the power to attend to works of improvement. In the meantime the interest of the national debt had increased, owing partly to a recent loan in England. Again, the guaranteed interest on Bombay amounts to £130,000, instead of £120,000; again, the difference on Railway Exchanges last year amounted to £473,000, and he thought that this might certainly be saved. The contracts would have to be renewed, and he trusted that the objectionable clause would be removed and no other such provision be made at all. The same might be said with reference to the guaranteed interest. The details of all these reductions were long and complicated, but care would be taken to print such as were of public interest, so as to enable those who felt any concern in them to check them. The general result would be a reduction of £3,599,720, bringing the expenditure of 1861-2 to £15,221,691, instead of £18,826,681, as it was in 1860-1. He would next call attention to the revenue. The first important item was land, and here was an increase instead of a deficiency. The land revenue in 1860-1 had been £18,762,447, and in 1861-2 it would be 18,951,156, allowing £300,000 for famine in the N.W., the total loss by famine being about £600,000. This increase had been caused partly by a greater number of sales in Bengal, and partly by the enhanced value of land in general. With regard to the Income-tax, the estimated receipts for 1861-2 were £1,948,004, but deducting arrears from 1860-1, the gross amount would be about £1,750,000, from which would have to be taken the expenses of collection and some other outlays. The expenses of collection, taken at 10 per cent., would be about £165,000, and the other items would bring the sums expended up to £361,000. The net proceeds of the Income-tax would therefore be £1,388,000, or, in round numbers, £1,400,000. In the Customs he had allowed £20,000 for the stagnation in the import trade, and £40,000 for the immediate lowering of the duty on twist and yarn from 10 to 5 per cent., his reasons for which he entered into at length. He would have been glad to have reduced the duties on other goods generally, but in the present state of the finances it would not have been prudent. The salt revenue was the next in importance, and here a small increase in the duty was made, which would give an increase in the revenue of £598,370. The increase of the duty last year of half a rupee had yielded £789,000, in addition to a gain of £100,000 on imported salt, so that nearly £900,000 had been gained by a small increase, which had in no way checked the consumption. Another small increase was now made of four annas in Bengal, Madras, and Bombay, and eight annas in the North-West, which would give an increase in revenue of £598,370. Improvement in roads and railways had increased the consumption of salt, and the Government had thought it would be fully able to stand a small increase. The increase expected had been calculated by taking the present rate of consumption and allowing a small sum for diminution. With regard to opium, he would remind the Council that prices had lately been unprecedented. Bengal, taken at last year's figure, would have given £400,000, and at present prices it would give £1,500,000. The Government, however, had calculated it at the lesser price, and allowed a return of £450,000. Upon stamps, on which there was nothing which would require that he should go into any lengthened details, there would be an increase estimated at £383,370. This brought him to the point at which this branch of his statement would close, with those items which could not be classed under any of the special heads now brought under review, and on these, owing to the falling in of several windfalls in the last year, which would not recur—such, for instance, as a payment of £340,000 paid in by the Rajah of Patiala on account of ceded territory, there was a total decrease of £750,000. There were other heads of revenue to which he need not now particularly refer, as they remained about the same. They had now before them the means of testing for themselves the result at which on these estimates he had arrived. The total revenue of 1860-61 had been stated at £39,285,731, and that for 1861-62 would be found to amount to £41,294,505, giving a gross increase for 1861-62 of £2,008,864. A reference to the details of expenditure now before them, and to the full statement, which will be found below, would bring them, including the interest payable on railways (less the estimated earnings of the lines, which has been taken at a calculation which made that estimate very moderate and safe), to the final result of the financial year 1861-62 in the form of a deficit of about £500,000. Strictly that interest on the railways ought not to be included, but whether properly a charge on capital account or not, it was better to meet the charge and fairly to make ends meet in such a manner as to get rid, once and for all, of the apprehension of any new taxation. There was the deficit, and the money had to be raised, whether it be carried to the one account or the other. The fear of new taxes was a most mischievous one, and the best of all guarantees against their infliction was the absence of any deficit. All credit had an end; public debts, like all others, must eventually be somehow met, and only then could the community rest satisfied that Government would not make fresh demands upon them, when they did not want the money. If they could this year so arrange that they could show a small surplus they would get rid of this embarrassing fear of new taxation. And if they could do so this year they had then a fair chance of maintaining finances in equilibrium. It might be objected that to a certain extent these estimates depended on chances, such as the item of opium, but against the probabilities of falling value in that article they had other items of steady increase, as in the value of lands, and in the increasing prosperity of the people, showing itself in increased revenue from salt customs and the like. It was quite reasonable to expect in future years still better results, and with continued perseverance in further reductions, it would not be necessary hereafter to bring out English Chancellors of the Exchequer, or if English Chancellors came they would not need to cudgel their brains and expend their energies in inventing new taxes or finding out new sources of revenue. If, then, he carried them with him so far, he would ask them, looking this fact of a deficit in the face, to "go in and finish it." They wanted to meet this half million. The Government were ready with a Licence Bill, and the country was prepared to receive it. It had been long before them, and the Bill had already passed that Council up to its third reading. Now, although it had been estimated that this tax, if moderately enforced, would yield the half million they needed, he must confess he did not wish to see it enforced as a crude measure, but to deal with it more fully and broadly, and to couple it with the Income-tax, into his own views of which as a mode of Indian taxation he went at some length, declaring the truth and stability of the principle it involved, but questioning its applicability in its present form to India, under present conditions. His arguments require greater length of statement than can be given them in a rapid summary; but his conclusion stood that he would not at present add to an objectionable Income-tax descending to incomes of £20 per year, a yet more objectionable rider in the form of an additional licence. But there stood the deficit. The Government want this half million, and they had an obvious resource in docking by half a million the assignment made for Public Works. This would, however, be a thousand pities. He would far rather in every way accelerate those works. Not perhaps the grand works which showed so well in the eyes of the world, but minor works which went to make up the great sum of the people's prosperity—village roads and village water-cuts, which should bring into full production every acre of India's teeming soil, and enable every natural product to be brought readily to supply the wants, and interchange the varying productions of her industrious people. To this end he would desire to give the power of local taxation, and to spend its results in the improvement of the districts in which the money was raised. There was one tax on production which seemed especially suited for a general impost; that was on tobacco, respecting which, last year, every inquiry to that end had been made. But it was found that Government could raise from it no large sum but by the creation of a most objectionable and huge monopoly. There were as many varieties of objections as of districts; in one the land tenure barred the possibility of taxation by acreage; in another the garden system of ryottee cultivation was in the way of any satisfactory collection; and in others the vicinity of native States gave every encouragement for smuggling. They decided it was preferable to leave to local authorities the realisation of small sums, small as to the national necessities, but ample as to the development of local resources. They would leave a tobacco tax, then, to local instrumentality, but not tobacco alone, but the whole of local productions, and local wants were open to the same ready and useful means of realisation. With only one condition local Governments might be left to such self-regulation. They must submit those regulations to the supreme approval or veto, and where an Act of Imperial law was needed to carry out any such local requirement such Act must be procured from the Central Government. He cited, as an illustration, the desire of some town or district to make a road to some railway running in their direction, and which road could be provided by the imposition of an octroi duty. Such an impost must be submitted to the Government, for it might be that an octroi duty might be an injustice if it brought within its range not only the vegetables for the daily consumption of those for whose immediate advantage such road was to be made, but also some production which was the staple only of a thorough trade; not at all a production of the special district, but an important object in the general trading policy. He might here say that this principle had already received every encouragement from many local Governments, and all would feel more alacrity in contributing to the needs of the State in their own locality and for their own special needs when assured that their contributions were not to be lost sight of altogether by being deposited in the all-devouring gulf of Imperial expenditure. He proposed, then, to transfer to these local governments this half-million. In addition, however, to raising what was needed for such immediate necessities as he had pointed to, he would give credit to these Governments for their actual savings of expenditure, and the benefits of such a system was not confined to mere monetary considerations; it would give the local governments new spirit and higher aims when they felt themselves no longer altogether dependent on, and lost in, the bureaux of Calcutta. Doubtless the ultimate power of social systems was the power of the purse strings, and at present they held the purse. Let Bombay and Madras prepare their local budgets and carry on their own internal improvements subject to, but not interfered with by, the central Government, and their Councils would find not only useful but dignified occupation; and he questioned whether, for instance, Madras would then long continue to expend £160,000 per annum to watch the expenditure of £160,000. Such anomalies as a cost of 30 per cent. for administration could not last long if the details were before efficient local Governments. Nothing remained to him, then, but to sum up in two sentences the result of all he had laid before them. The deficit of last year was, in round numbers, £6,000,000, which, for the ensuing year, was met by reductions amounting to £3,589,780, and by an increase in revenue of £2,008,864, leaving a sum of half a million transferred to local efforts. They estimated to spend half a lakh per month on railways for the ensuing year, and allowing for the £6,000,000 thus to be expended, and about £950,000 to be paid as prize money and bounty, &c., in the military changes which were being effected, he found that as on May 1st, 1861, the cash balances stood at £12,850,000, there would be on the 1st of May, 1862, in the treasury £13,719,000. Without trenching further on the patience with which the Council had listened to him, he would merely urge that it was far beyond any mere statement of figures that the spirit and purpose of such a mode of Government extended. He traced in the village system of India the spirit of the self government which, fostered and developed in the West, had made the Westerns what that day saw them there in Council in Calcutta, and the decadence and neglect of which had left the spiritless and oppressed Oriental what he was, and through ages past had been. He hoped yet the revival of the olden and more self-reliant system, and he had visions of an India, not perhaps in our days, but surely to come, in which whilst Western science opened up communications, and enterprise and capital developed the prolific old resources and discovered new ones, the Native element should expand by the action not of schools only, but of events, be taught by books and railways, and yet more powerful living ensamples, and awake to that political life which finds a herd of slaves, and makes a nation of freed men. It was good to have a certain policy and a high aim. Much remained to be done, but success was contagious. If by energy and forethought this deficit was extinguished in six months, we should hear no more of many a harassing grievance that now disturbed the well-being of the State. It was not that they sought mere relief from debt, but that in the words of prophecy their "works might be so done in justice and mercy that they shall stand fast for ever." Time permits us to report no more of his conclusion, pretending, as he said, to no other eloquence than that of facts, than that he declared his perfect confidence in the estimates on which these statements were based; that he found in all ranks of the Governmental Service the same prompt support and obedience as in the ranks of an army where each soldier obeyed the command given, even though in his own mind he questioned the soundness of the judgment on which it was based. In this matter the credit of the Government was at stake, and they would be found in the carrying of it out prompt to recognise merit, but not prompt to receive excuses. The facts he had put before them were solid facts, not shams. It was not for him to anticipate the public verdict, but he awaited it with confidence as coming from reasonable and intelligent men. He felt certain that an examination of his statement would not discredit the Government, and he concluded a very clear and well-expressed statement, which never flagged or became confused, in the one hour and thirty-five minutes which it occupied.—Englishman.

THE HONOURABLE A. SCOTCE, member of the Legislative Council for Bengal, has been permitted to resign the civil service from the 1st of May. Mr. C. B. Trevor, of the Sudder Court, is spoken of as his successor.

MR. PATERSON SAUNDERS, JUNR.—The Government of India have sanctioned the appointment of Mr. P. Saunders on a salary of Rs. 1,000 a month, to visit the districts of Bengal likely to produce cotton, such as Assam, the Garrow Hills, the Sunderbunds, the Chittagong Hills, the South-West Frontier Agency, and the Darjeeling Morung. Mr. Saunders is to act in communication with the local officers.

THE INDIGO PLANTERS' ASSOCIATION announce that their income this year will be upwards of Rs. 16,000, and the ordinary expenses, at the rate of Rs. 900 a-month, will amount to about Rs. 11,000, leaving a balance of Rs. 5,000 available. An income of at least Rs. 30,000 is expected from the Association when extended so as to represent all landholding and commercial interests.

 B This is exclusive of receipts from local funds, amounting to £223,900 in 1860-61, and £230,035 in 1861-62.
 C This includes arrears of 1860-61. The net revenue per annum from the Income-tax is about £140,000.
 D This is obtained after allowing £200,000 for loss on diminished imports of manufacturers, and £40,000 for reduction in twist and yarn.
 E Bengal opium has been estimated at the same amount for 1861-62 as for 1860-61—viz., Rs. 1,748 per chest; but at the present market price the estimate would be 41,300,000 higher.
 F The miscellaneous receipts in 1860-61 included £340,000 from the Rajah of Puttcalah, and other large sums which are not regular revenue, and do not recur in 1861-62.
 G This includes £350,000, not in 1860-61, for increased cost of Opium, Salt, and Income-tax.
 H This includes £150,000 for Famine Contingencies.
 J The Expenditure from Local Funds, amounting to £223,900 in 1860-61, and £206,000 in 1861-62, is included in both cases. The total outlay on New Works of Improvement, Imperial and Local, will be £540,000 more in 1861-62 than in 1860-61.
 K Army—This consists of £12,199,340, the Estimated Expenditure for a year of the Force now established, and of £600,780, being the Estimate for Gratuities, Bounty, Pay, and other expenses, until the reductions ordered are fully carried out.
 C. H. LUSHINGTON, Secretary to the Government of India.

MISCELLANEOUS.

DELHI, April 24.—Major James Skinner, of the Retired List, eldest surviving son of the late Col. James Skinner, C.B., has just passed from among us. He died early this morning, and will be buried this evening. Major Skinner was as well-known as a thorough sportsman as for his unbounded hospitality. The weather has become very oppressive, an easterly wind rendering tatters useless, or nearly so, and the heat during the day is fearful. All who can get away are off to the Hills, anticipating an awfully trying and sickly season. We have had signs of rain again; but they have cleared off without affording the long sighed for moisture.

NEPAUL.—Perhaps you are aware that the experimental issue of bank-notes by the Maharajah Jung Bahadoor has not met with the success he anticipated when he hoped that they would be as acceptable as notes of the Bank of Bengal are in Calcutta. Among the vast multitude of rebel leaders and their followers, certainly not less than 700, who entered Nepaul, there are now only sixty-four remaining, most of whom have been attacked by the cholera, which has lately so generally prevailed here. Jung Bahadoor has imposed a sort of tax or black mail upon the Shahabad man, Oude Begum, and the Bithoor leader, and their followers. This measure, on the part of the Durbar, will probably drive the rebels to come out and ask mercy from the British Government. A large number of Nepaulese subjects have been arrested at Goruckpore for committing dacoities in that district. Maharajah Jung Bahadoor lately proposed to order the Durbar Vakeel at Calcutta to place himself in communication with the ex-Ranee Chunderbutty's establishment, which our Resident, Colonel Ramsay, has written to him to abstain from carrying into effect, remarking that such course may lead to embarrassment.

CAPTAIN PELLY'S TRAVELS.—At the last meeting of the Bengal Asiatic Society, Captain L. Pelly, introduced by Sir Bartle Frere, read an account of his journey across Afghanistan since the war. Starting from Trebizond he passed through Turkish Armenia by Erzeroum and Byazeed and thence to Khoee, Tabriz, and the Koofan-koh to Teheran. There he was secretary to the Persian Legation. From Teheran his route lay along the southern side of the Elburz range to Meshed; thence through the hill track lying along the Turcoman frontier to Khaff, and thence across the Desert of Ghorian to Herat. From Herat he moved by Sebzuer and Ananburva; and thence, by the borders of Jarish and Leista, to Hurnah, rejoining the main road to Candahar at Shahpeze, whence he proceeded along the plain of Buckwai, crossing the Khash road into Washeer, and thence diverging northward to the Helmund at Seah Guz. From this point he again struck into the Candahar road near Ghivishk, and so reached the former town by Kooshkinakoo. Captain Pelly gave a sketch of Dr. Forbes' murder, as detailed by the eldest son of the chief who murdered him. From Candahar the road taken was through the Kuzzuck Pass, across the valley of Pesheen and so to Quetta or Shawlkoti. From this point the route lay near the head of the Bolan Pass to Mustoong; thence to Khelat itself; and so by Bhagwan and Khozdan, down Beloochistan to the Indian Ocean, where Captain Pelly crossed the frontier into British territory within a few miles of the Port of Kurrachee. The lecturer bore testimony to the general correctness of General Ferrier's work, and spoke of the admiration evinced by the Afghans at the truthfulness and impartiality of Mr. Kaye's history. Captain Pelly was unarmed, and rode in his uniform through Afghanistan.—Friend of India.

POST-OFFICE APPOINTMENTS.—Consequent on Mr. Riddell's retirement to England, Dr. G. Paton is appointed Director-General of Post-offices in India; Mr. C. K. Dove, Postmaster General of the N.W. Provinces; Captain G. M. Battye, Postmaster-General of Bengal, and Mr. R. F. Saunders, C.S., Postmaster-General of the Punjab.

VOLUNTEERING FOR GENERAL SERVICE.—Colonel Darwall, commanding the 3rd European regiment, having reported to the brigadier that with a few exceptions the whole regiment was willing to volunteer for general service in her Majesty's 107th foot, Brigadier C. Troup, C.B., and Colonel Priestly, the officer superintending the volunteering, met the regiment on parade on May 1st, and the brigadier addressed a few words to the men to the effect that their Colonel had reported the above to him, and after begging them to consider well before they decided, he called upon all those who declined to volunteer for her Majesty's 107th foot to come to the front. Thirty-one men came forward and elected for the local service—two desired to return to the regiments from which they had originally volunteered, 1 wished for his discharge, and three hundred and seventy elected for her Majesty's 107th here; the strength of the corps here is four hundred and seven of all ranks. The brigadier then addressed a few complimentary words to the new 107th, and called upon them for three cheers for the Queen, which was responded to by both officers and men most heartily and lustily. The brigadier has issued the following brigade order inaugurating the 107th:—"AGRA, Wednesday, 1st of May, 1861.—Garrison and station orders by Brigadier Colin Troup, C.B., commanding. Her Majesty's 3rd Bengal European regiment having this morning, with but few exceptions, volunteered in a body for general service in her Majesty's 107th regiment of the line, the brigadier commanding has much pleasure in recording his high approbation of the ready and soldier-like manner in which the men have come forward, and under the power delegated to him by the provisions contained in para. 10 of G. O. C. C., 10th April, 1861, the brigadier is pleased, from this date, to designate the 3rd Bengal European regiment, her Majesty's 107th regiment of foot, and in doing so, he offers to the regiment his most hearty congratulations and best wishes, and feels certain that wherever the 107th may be employed they will ever maintain that soldier-like and gallant bearing for which they were distinguished in their late regiment." The Artillery company here have also, with five or six exceptions, volunteered for general service; nearly if not all the men who volunteered for H.M.'s 42nd highlanders have claimed their discharge.—Delhi Gazette.

SINGULAR PHENOMENON.—Information brought by Chokedar of the village Suleempore, in the Thanah of Futtiabhad, Zillah Agra, April 22nd, 1861. Joogun Khan Chokedar of above village, stated that on the night of the 21st April, when the whirlwind (andee) blew, it came about that through all the village, on grainstores, (kulleyan) on roofs, on fields, fire came blowing and fell, the villagers rushed to put this out, first they began to throw water on it, but soon touched it and examined it, when it appeared that it did not burn their hands, nor were the roofs, gran, stores, or clothes burnt. The same story was told by the Chokedars of Bujeedpore and Bumrolee Rutna, Pergunah Futtiabhad. Further inquiries are on foot.—("True Copy.") A. L. M. PHILLIPS, Magistrate.

DR. N. CHEVERS is appointed Principal of the Bengal Medical College, but will act meanwhile as Inspector of Gaols. The appointment is the best that could have been made.

SIR WILLIAM DENISON, the newly-appointed Governor of Madras, and previously Governor-general of Australia, arrived at Calcutta from Madras by the P. and O. Co.'s steam-ship Bengal, on a visit to the Viceroy, on the 26th April.

DARJEELING, April 14.—Nearly all the troops have been returned from Sikkim, and hundreds of coolies are daily bringing up the guns, shot, shell, powder and Commissariat stores. Major Renny's regiment is expected to leave this tomorrow. Cholera is carrying off a great many of our coolies (between this and Punkabarrie); the corpses of these are rotting on the roadside; of course it is not any one's place here to bury them; this may affect the whole of Major Renny's excellent corps. The officers and others are about leaving, to join their respective appointments.

THE FAMINE AT AGRA.—The number of starving poor relieved in the district of Agra during March was 94,000, of whom 24,359 were men, 34,036 women, and 30,001 children. Twenty-nine destitute children were placed in the Agra Orphanage. The number of deaths reported was 242. There was a slight fall in the price of grain. Government had called on the proprietors of forty-two villages to account for their remissness in not reporting cases of destitution, and in not helping the police to search out the dying and relieve them.

JESSORE.—We (Englishman, May 3rd) regret to learn that a serious outbreak occurred three days since in Jessore, consequent upon the attempt of Mr. Falcon, the deputy magistrate, to arrest a riot in execution of a decree. We have no further particulars than that the ryots made an attack upon the magistrate's police-guard, who were compelled to fire upon them, and several men were killed. Mr. Lushington has gone up; and troops have been ordered up forthwith from Barrackpore.

MAJOR J. H. ST. JOHN, of the 92nd Highlanders, succeeds to the vacant appointment of military secretary to his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief in India. We presume from this that Captain T. J. Francis, of the 3rd Dragoon Guards, has resigned the appointment, although there has been no official announcement of the fact as yet in general orders.

MADRAS.*MISCELLANEOUS.

PRESENTS FOR HER MAJESTY.—The Neilgherry Chronicle states that the Rajah of Mysore has sent Dr. Campbell, the darbar surgeon, to England, to present her Majesty with a most magnificent assortment of jewels, consisting of seven sets of personal ornaments in gold and set with the most costly diamonds, pearls and rubies, besides eight fancy articles likewise richly studded with precious gems. He has also sent several horses gorgeously caparisoned in the Eastern style, cows, bullocks, bulls, &c., of the best breeds, with a life-size portrait of the Duke of Wellington. The nuzzur is in acknowledgment of the concession of the right of adoption.

MALABAR COAST, April 10.—The C company of the 1st battalion Madras Artillery, and No. 7 horse battery attached to it, arrived at Cannanore yesterday morning. A few miles distant from the cantonment the bands of the two native regiments stationed here proceeded to meet, and marched them in. The following officers are present with the company:—Captain A. J. Ogilvie (commanding), Lieutenants J. G. Marshall, W. Manderson, C. E. Pritchard, and Neill, and Assistant-Surgeon F. Pearl, M.D., of the D troop horse artillery, in medical charge. The latter officer is to remain here until the arrival of Assistant-Surgeon J. Bilderbeck, who is now at Bangalore, appointed to the medical charge thereof. Yesterday morning one company of the 3rd Regiment Palamcottah Light Infantry, under the command of Captain P. S. Cunningham, left Cannanore for the relief of one company of the 18th Regiment Madras Native Infantry, now on outpost duty at Calicut. Major-General J. Fitzgerald relinquishes the command on or about the 18th instant, Brigadier W. C. McLeod, appointed to the command of these provinces, being expected at Cannanore, by the coasting steamer from Bombay, on or about that date.

"JALIKAT."—The mild Hindoos have their bull fights almost as fierce as those enjoyed by the Spaniards. In Madura they indulge in the "Jalikat," a sport which consists in making a bull infuriated, and then letting him loose with cloths or money tied to his horns, which become the property of any person who can succeed in removing the same. The "Jalikat" was prohibited in 1555, but again allowed by the present magistrate. It has been fatal in one case. The Sudder Court has recommended its authoritative prohibition by Government.

THE GREAT COTTON HARBOUR for South Bombay and West Madras is Sedashighur in the Beikul Cove. Since 1857 Sir Arthur Cotton has urged the carrying out of a scheme for improving the harbour, erecting a light-house, cutting a canal, and making a breakwater, at the prohibitory cost of upwards of a million sterling. After a personal visit to the spot, Sir George Clerk has wisely recommended the erection of a small landing pier, the construction of a road along the left bank of the river, and of a road up the ghauts, to bring down the cotton. Where the road passes through the Bombay territory, Sir George Clerk's Government will undertake it. The greater part of the work will be done by the Madras Government. Estimates have been entered in the budget of 1861-2 for the purpose, but the road up the ghauts will not be completed this year. This road, and a branch railway from the main line to Sholapore to meet it at the top of the ghauts, would, at a trifling expense, lay open the finest cotton district in India to the coast.

THE DUTY ON SALT IN MADRAS has been raised to one rupee four annas per maund, under instructions from the Government of India. The duty can be raised as high as Rs. 3 per maund by an order of the Executive, but in Bombay Mr. Erskine found it necessary to introduce a Bill to raise the duty and excise to Rs. 1-4. But for the earnest objections of Sir C. Trevelyan and Lord Elphinstone, the duty would have been raised to this limit by Mr. Wilson. The salt duty and excise throughout India now stands thus:—Bengal, Rs. 3-4 per maund; North-West Provinces, Rs. 3 ditto; Madras and Bombay, 1-4 ditto. The increase of duty and excise in Bombay and Madras will probably add £150,000 annually to the revenue. Before 1857, and these days of financial deficits, any attempt to raise the price of salt would have elicited a howl from Mr. Bright and his followers in Parliament.

BOMBAY.*MISCELLANEOUS.

COLONEL STILES, H.M.'s 3rd European regiment, received the following farewell address from General Cunynghame on his leaving the station to assume command of the Neemuch brigade: "The Major-General on his return to Kurrachee regrets that his first duty is to take leave of Colonel Stiles, who, after a successful tour of staff and regimental duty, has been called to take upon himself a still higher command. The difficult duties which Colonel Stiles has performed with such efficiency and zeal have justly earned for him the consideration of superior authority, and the Major-General would be wanting in his duty did he not express his sense of the way in which Colonel Stiles has filled the position of a firm and impartial commander, and of a friend of his officers and men. The ready support which he has invariably tendered to his general proves how highly qualified he is to undertake superior command, and his unremitting attention showed his earnest desire for the benefit of her Majesty's service. The Major-General cannot but regret the departure of Colonel Stiles, but at the same time he rejoices excessively at the superior position and duties which he has been called upon to fill."

THE HON. H. W. REEVES, Member of Council, has obtained leave of absence for six months, on medical certificate, to proceed to England, and leaves by the mail of the 12th May. The vacancy in the Council will not be filled up, as it has been ruled that when a Member of Council goes on leave it is not necessary to appoint a successor. The rule under which a Member of Council obtains leave is, "under medical certificate for a period not exceeding six months, retaining his office and receiving half his salary, which shall be paid to him during such absence; but if his absence shall exceed six months his office will be vacated." The half-salary amounts to Rs. 2,066-10-8 per mensem.

SCINDE.—Cholera is reported to be decidedly spreading in the Shikarpoor Collectorate. At Sukkur, however, we are glad to hear it is decreasing. Sixteen fatal cases are reported to have occurred at the early part of the week, but during the last few days of the week ending April 10th a change took place, and it is hoped that the disease would soon disappear. Eighty-seven cases had occurred in the town of Roree, of which, however, only twelve proved fatal. Cholera is spoken of as having broken out in Larkhana, and the treatment of the cases by Mr. D'Souza, the assistant apothecary, is described as to have been most successful. The disease is said to have broken out in the villages of Mehur, Gajeedaree, Chunna, and Bindee, in the Tigi Kardarate; in Chunna twelve, and in Bindee fifteen deaths have occurred in the Kardarate of Sukkur.—Sindian.

MR. E. I. GRANT, Assistant Superintendent of Police at Nassick, has been removed from his appointment, by order of Government.

RECALL OF THE ROYAL ARTILLERY.—In consequence of orders having been received from home, for the immediate return to England of Major Crauford's battery (No. 7, 13th battalion) of royal artillery stationed at Poona, Colonel G. J. L. Buchanan, commanding the royal artillery in the Bombay Presidency, proceeds home by the Mail steamer of the 27th May. Major Crauford's is now the only battery of royal artillery remaining in this Presidency. We also hear that the whole of the remaining batteries of royal artillery still in India are under orders to proceed to England, as soon as ships can be taken up for their conveyance.

BOMBAY CHAMBER OF COMMERCE.—The disruption in the mercantile community, which led to the temporary secession from the Chamber of Commerce of a number of influential members and the formation of the Commercial Association, is now at an end, and all differences completely healed. At a recent meeting of the association, it was resolved to dissolve that body, the members being received back into the Chamber, and everything to go on as if no breach had ever taken place.

DEATH OF DR. LOWRY.—We regret to have to announce the death on Tuesday evening, the 30th April, at his residence in the fort, of Dr. James Lindsay Lowry, a medical practitioner of Bombay, after a brief illness of only a few hours' duration.

GOA.—The Pope has at last confirmed the nomination of a Portuguese Ecclesiastic of great reputation in the Church of Rome in the office of Archbishop of Goa, which, in consequence of the opposition of the Propaganda, has now been vacant for upwards of fourteen years.

MUSCAT.—The Honourable the Governor in Council has appointed Lieutenant W. M. Pengelly, I. N., to be British Agent at Muscat.

IMPORT DUTY ON COTTON YARN.—The Bombay Government Gazette Extraordinary notifies, under instructions from the Governor-general of India in Council, that on and after the 29th April the import custom duty on cotton twist and yarn shall be reduced to 5 per cent. Government have thus repealed so much of the late Mr. Wilson's financial scheme as imposed an extra duty of 5 per cent. on British twists and yarns introduced into this country. The duty is now placed at 5 per cent., as formerly, instead of 10 per cent., hitherto charged. It was found that the additional tax was paid by the producers in England, and the trade suffered in consequence.

SCHEME OF THE AMALGAMATION COMMISSION FOR THE RETIREMENT OF THE INDIAN OFFICERS.

[The following important document, for which we are indebted to the Englishman, though not officially communicated to that journal, is thoroughly authentic. The plan is said to have originated with Major Chesney, and, after being adopted by the Amalgamation Commission, it is now under the consideration of the Government.]

2. Whatever may be the number of officers required for the remodelled Indian service, it is evident that no place can be found for a considerable number—the senior officers—who have been thrown out of employ. Whatever may be the claims and competency of these officers, there will be no means of finding suitable employment for them, since the irregular regiments which are to form the line of the new army are already provided with competent commanders, who could not be displaced with justice.

3. But without reference to the present employment of officers, or to their relative fitness, the measures connected with amalgamation, and the substitution of the irregular for the regular system, will necessarily throw out of employment a very large number of officers in addition, as the following data will plainly show. Not that such officers may not be employed as supernumeraries; they will, however, be regarded as unnecessary while so employed, and will be absorbed as rapidly as possible; and that the amalgamation may be a thoroughly successful measure, it is of great importance to be able to offer such terms to the army as may at once dispose of these superfluous officers on satisfactory terms to themselves, and without loss to the State:—

4. The total number of officers of the cavalry and infantry of the Indian service is	4,975

Deduct the number of young officers deficient, who belong principally to these branches of the service or say 4,400 officers to be provided for.

These officers are to be employed in three ways:—

1st.—With the new line regiments of infantry and cavalry.

2nd.—With the native army.

3rd.—On the other departments of the staff.

5. As regards the staff, the actual future demand for officers to serve upon it cannot be exactly ascertained, but a fair approximation may be made.

The latest returns show 1,982 local and 252 line officers on the staff.* If from the first-named number be deducted the officers of the ordnance corps, who are not to be considered now, and the officers attached to irregular troops, who will be allowed for separately, there will remain 1,097, or say 1,100 officers on staff employ in all remaining departments.

This number may be considered somewhat in excess of the future requirements of the State, as it includes the large number of officers employed in the military police, which force is shortly to be disbanded: 248 officers are so employed, and it is probable that a portion of them will have to be otherwise disposed of, while the remainder may be engaged for the new civil constabulary to be organised in place of the military police. Assuming that the reduction on this account may amount to 100, there will remain 1,000 officers on the staff. The officers employed with levies and other irregular troops having been already deducted above from the total number of the staff, to obtain the balance of 1,100, any reduction in this branch of the service need not be considered here.

6. A further reduction of staff appointments may possibly be looked for from the general military reductions now taking place, which, together with a more economical distribution of troops, may admit of a smaller general staff being sufficient; but against such possible reductions must be set the steadily increasing demand for European agency and supervision in all departments of the state, which has been in operation for many years, and must be expected to continue. The public works department alone might furnish employment for a large number of additional officers, and there are, doubtless, other openings of which the Government might avail themselves with advantage. Putting these considerations against each other, the Commission do not see much ground for anticipating a general reduction, and they propose to assume the total number of staff officers of the local army at 1,000.

7. The next item to be considered is the number of officers required for the native army. The Commission have no certain information on this head, and they understand that the future strength of the native army has not yet been finally determined by Government; but they believe they are not far wrong in assuming that strength to be 210 regiments for all India, including cavalry.

8. Allowing a proportion of one-fifth for furlough, and assuming that the line and native regiments do not require any substitutes for their furlough officers, the total number of officers to be employed will be:—

With the new line regiments:
8 regiments of dragoons at 32 officers ...	96
9 regiments of infantry at 41 officers ...	369

2,975

Total number of officers to be employed... 4,400

Difference ... 1,425

9. A correction must be made from this number on account of the young officers learning their duty, who are not yet qualified for staff employment. The total number of unposted officers of cavalry and infantry was 395 on the 1st

Bengal..... 175

January, 1861. But of these many must be quite qualified to do duty with native regiments; indeed, some of them have actually been appointed to permanent staff situations. The commission therefore think it reasonable to assume that not more than half this number, or 200 officers, may be considered as non-effective, which leaves 1,225 effective officers to be disposed of.

10. This number of supernumerary officers may be further reduced, if, as the commission understand, her Majesty's Government intend to fill up the place in his regiment of every officer of the line who joins the staff corps, by transferring to it a local officer of the same rank, as long as any remain in excess of the required number.

11. This arrangement appears very fair to the local officers, and would be highly desirable for the financial interests of the State. There are now about 250 line officers on the staff. If their places were filled up by local officers, the superfluous number of the latter would be reduced to that extent. If these line officers prefer not to join the staff corps, then they must vacate their appointment, which would be filled by officers of the local service, so that either way the same amount of relief would be afforded. It may be doubted, however, whether any large number of volunteers for the line will be forthcoming. The officers of the Indian service are generally of so much longer standing than those occupying the same positions in line regiments, that few of them could afford the sacrifice of position that would arise from exchanging as junior of their rank into the line; so that volunteers will probably be confined chiefly to the young officers who have lately entered the services. No great amount of relief can therefore be expected from this arrangement.

12. The Commission, however, consider that of the 1,225 officers who will be supernumerary to the required strength, a small number may be profitably employed for the present with the native regts., in addition to the regular establishment now to be fixed for them; and they observe that it is possible that for some time to come the native army may not be reduced to the limit they have assumed above, of 210 regts. It seems probable, therefore, that the total number of officers who will be in excess of all requirements will be about 1,000.

13. It must be admitted that the presence of such a body of officers in the army,—for whom it will be impossible to find suitable and necessary occupation, and who will be regarded as supernumerary and unnecessary, who are to be merely suffered to remain, because they cannot be got rid of forcibly, and who would have to be gradually absorbed by retirements and deaths,—it must be admitted that such a body presents a very great, if not the greatest, difficulty, in the way of the amalgamation of the armies; and it can hardly be questioned that the Govt. would gladly entertain any proposal which might enable these officers to retire on terms advantageous to themselves, and which would not involve undue cost or risk of cost to the State.

14. The Commission are led to suppose this from the offer lately made of £50 a-year in addition to pension, to each officer retiring, but they doubt whether such a proposal will effect its object in expediting retirements, or whether any one will retire who would not have done so without the inducement. It offers a small advantage to a man who has just qualified for a pension, but those who have only a short period to wait for obtaining a higher pension will gain more by waiting than by accepting the offer.

15. A proposal has been made to the Commission to recommend that all superfluous officers should be allowed to take unlimited furlough, retaining their places in the army for promotion, and, eventually, for colonel's allowance. Such a plan would undoubtedly diminish the charges of the State, but it would be attended with a very serious inconvenience. It would almost put a stop to retirements, since no man would retire who could live at home on furlough; the officers on furlough would receive the advantages of promotion and higher pay in their respective turns without giving any equivalent service; while their succession to colonel's allowances would involve a great injustice to the working officers in India. The Commission consider, therefore, that this proposal is not deserving of serious consideration.

16. Nor do the Commission think that the proposition which has been put forth in certain quarters to place all unemployed officers on garrison pay, admits of being seriously considered. Such a measure could not be held to be consistent with the guarantee given to the army that its privileges should be maintained. It would cause extreme discontent and great hardship, and after all would afford very trifling relief to the finances.

17. The Commission have been favoured with a rough scheme by Lieut.-Col. Hannington, by which each officer would receive in addition to his pension an annuity equivalent to his expectation of colonel's allowance, considered with reference to his age and the probable period of service remaining to complete before succeeding to that allowance. A table of the value of these expectations, drawn up by Lieut.-Col. Hannington, is attached to this report, and the Commission regret that the dangerous illness of this officer has deprived them of the valuable assistance which his well-known talents as an actuary would have afforded them in working out the details of this scheme. It might have thus presented itself as more acceptable than the one they are now about to submit. As it now stands it is certainly an excellent plan, but two objections to its adoption occur to the Commission.

18. The first is that the value of the expectation of an annuity diminishes so rapidly as the time is deferred at which the annuity is payable, that the offer would present but little attraction to any but the very old officers. Thus, if an officer aged 54 would succeed to the colonel's allowance in a year, the annuity equivalent to his expectation would be £604; but if he had eleven years to wait, it would be only £192, and if he had twenty years to wait, it would be hardly anything.

19. Secondly, although the State would pay no more to each individual than his expectation was worth, yet there would be a greatly increased expenditure on the whole, since the expectations of those who do not retire would be considerably increased. Thus if A be a colonel, and B and C the two senior lieut.-colonels; then, if B be bought out in the way proposed, C becomes senior, and obtains the allowance on A's death. B, by receiving the equivalent of his expectation, has got its proper value, and the charge to the State, as far as he is concerned, is not increased; but C now also receives his off-reckonings, which he would otherwise not have done.

20. If, on the other hand, those who accepted the annuities were to keep their places on the list, with respect to the succession of off-reckonings, they would retard promotion by living in a good climate, and by putting a stop to the actual retirements which might otherwise have taken place.

21. The proposal which the Commission have now the honour to submit on their own behalf, and to which they respectfully invite the earnest attention of Government, is based on the two following considerations:—

22. In ordinary circumstances when an officer retires, his place is at once filled up by promotion made in every grade junior to his, and a new ensign is appointed; thus the charges for effective officers continue as before, while the State has the increased charge of a pension. Therefore the retirement of every officer on a pension is in such circumstances an additional expense to the State.

23. But at the present juncture, and as long as there are any officers on the strength of the army in excess of its requirements, no new appointments will be made when a vacancy occurs; and, further, a large proportion of officers will now belong to the staff corps, and their promotion and pay will not be in the least affected by, or dependent upon, such retirements. Retirement of unemployed officers will, therefore, be attended with very considerable saving, and it will be advantageous to the Government to expedite the retirements of all superfluous officers by offering considerable additions to their pensions, such additions being nevertheless kept below the savings to be effected by the retirements.

24. [Para. 8.] It has been shown that the officers of the staff corps and the new line regiments, who will all be unaffected by promotion in their old cadres, will amount to 2,725 out of 4,400, the total number to be provided for, that is 2,725-4,400ths, or about six-tenths of the whole, will not gain actual promotion by the retirement of their seniors. If, therefore, it be assumed that on the retirement of a lieutenant-colonel two out of the four officers to be promoted are in the staff corps, and gain no increase of pay thereby, the assumption, on an average of cases, will be within the truth.

25. Taking, therefore, as above stated, an average of cases, it may be correctly assumed that one of the following six cases will occur each time a lieutenant colonel retires:—

1. The major and captain of the cadre which receives the promotion will be in the staff corps;
- or, 2. The major and lieutenant will be in the staff corps;
- or, 3. The major and ensign " "
- or, 4. The captain and lieutenant " "
- or, 5. The captain and ensign " "
- or, 6. The lieutenant and ensign " "

26. The annual saving that will accrue in each case is shown below.

30. And it must be observed, that the savings shown have been calculated on the supposition that one-half or five-tenths of the officers to be promoted by a step would be in the staff corps; whereas, it has been shown that six out of every ten officers will be on the staff, so that the savings will actually be greater than have been stated. Further, it may be observed, that the cases supposed which show the least saving, No. 6 of each table, are those which are least likely to happen, as there will be fewer ensigns on the staff than any other class.

31. It may be thought, perhaps, that the assumption, which has been made throughout this report, that all the officers on staff employ would be in the staff corps, is not a fair one. But the commission believe that the superior advantages in respect of promotion and leave offered by that corps will attract to it all staff officers but a very few. The rate of promotion fixed for it, which is much in advance of the average rate at present obtaining in the army, will alone, they believe, be an ample inducement.

32. It may be thought interesting to consider what would be the effect of deaths upon the scheme here set forth, and this may, therefore, be briefly stated. If the retiring officer dies, the saving stops, as far as his case is concerned; his pension stops, and the Government has had a saving for just as long as he lived. If one of the persons promoted dies before the annuitant, then it is evident that a fresh set of promotions will be made, causing fresh savings, which are irrespective of, and additional to, those already made; and the saving that was annually gained in the first case will be gained still. In fact, this is as much as to say that when reduction is taking place the death of an officer costs less than to pension an officer.

33. The advantages of the scheme now submitted have so far been based upon the supposition of what would happen, should any one out of one thousand officers retire; but it is evident that if the retirements occur extensively, the saving would become proportionately greater. Thus, supposing that 500 out of the 1,000, who were not in the staff corps, were to retire, then, of the remaining officers of the army, not 6-10ths only, but 2725-3900ths or 7-10ths would derive no benefit from regimental promotion, so that as retirements increase the Government gain. And, lastly, if the scheme were to prove thoroughly successful, and the whole of the officers not in the staff corps were to retire, then, since all the remainder would be quite unaffected by the consequent promotion, it is evident that the gain would be maximum, and the whole difference between the pay and the pensions* of the retiring officers

 * Lieut-Colonel... £873
 Major ... 676 would be saved to the Captain ... 258 State without any deduction.

34. It is impossible to calculate the exact saving that would accrue from this result, or from any specified number of retirements; it is obviously a question which cannot be solved by an actuary, since the data to work upon are wanting; for it is not yet known who will go to the staff corps, and who in consequence will be left unemployed. The commission are therefore unable to prepare a scale of pensions exactly equivalent to the savings to be effected; but the one which they now submit has the merit, they believe, of being within safe limits in regard to Government risks, while at the same time they think it would prove sufficiently liberal to attract a large number of officers, if not the whole number which it is desired to dispose of.

35. The commission propose that pensions, additional to those they are already entitled to receive, be offered to all officers of the cavalry and infantry who do not join the staff corps or the new line regiments at the following rates:—

To all officers of 40 years' service and upwards £500 per an.
 " 38 " " " 460 "
 " 36 " " " 420 "
 " 34 " " " 380 "
 " 32 " " " 340 "
 " 30 " " " 300 "
 " 28 " " " 260 "
 " 26 " " " 220 "
 " 24 " " " 180 "

36. These rates, as the commission have already explained, are not based upon actual calculations, since no calculations can be made, but upon the following considerations:—

1st.—The lowest sum, that to be given to an officer of twenty years' service, is fixed as the smallest which the commission believe would prove high enough to effect its object.

2nd.—The highest sum fixed is somewhat within the value of the expectation of colonels' allowance after forty years' service.

3rd.—The increase has been made uniform throughout, at the rate of £20 per annum for every additional year of service, which is nearly the rate of increase of govt. pensions.

37. The average service for obtaining colonel's allowance, as derived from the services of the twenty junior colonels of Bengal infantry last promoted is 41 years and 6 months; an officer, therefore, of 60 years' service will usually be within 1 year and 4 months of obtaining it; and assuming him to be 58 years old, the value of an annuity equivalent to his expectation is £567, so that the terms here proposed are less by £67 than it would be worth while to pay as a mere speculation, supposing that there were to be no saving effected, as there will be under the present peculiar circumstances.

38. As an illustration of the propriety of the proposed extra pensions shown in the other parts of the scale, the pension to be given after 32 years. £340 may be taken. Here the expectation of succeeding to the colonel's allowance would be 9 years and 6 months, and if the age of the annuitant were 50 years, the value of the expectation would be £255, or £85 less than the sum now proposed, the mean saving to be derived being, however, £375, as shown in para. 26. The saving, too, is on the supposition that only one officer retires, whereas it has been shown that if all the superfluous officers were to retire, the saving would be £919, in every case of the retirement of a lieutenant-colonel on the pension of his rank.

39. The periods of service set down in the scale are calculated from first entry into the service without deduction for leave. The expectation for colonel's allowance has been calculated in this way; and if leave were deducted, the number of men of 40 years' service would be very small indeed. The regular pension would, of course, be given for actual service as heretofore.

40. The table in the margin shows that there are not altogether in the cavalry and infantry of the three armies. 1,000 officers who have completed 20 years' actual service, and it would therefore be necessary to offer terms for retirement to some of the younger officers in order to complete the required number of retirements. The commission beg therefore to recommend that all officers of more than 12 years' service, but who are not entitled to a captain's pension, be offered the annuity equivalent to expectation in each case of succession to captain's pension, with an annuity of £120 additional, provided that in no case a total higher pension be awarded than that to which an officer entitled to a captain's pension would receive, it being also understood that officers are not precluded from taking advantage of the existing regulations regarding half-pay, and receiving the annuity now offered in addition. Thus the commission propose slightly more advantageous terms to the younger officers; they do so believing that it will be necessary to offer them such attractions to induce retirements.

41. Having thus stated the particulars of their scheme, the commission proceed to notice the different points connected with it which must be attended to, to render it perfectly successful.

42. First, it is absolutely essential that retirements should be limited to the number of officers in excess of the requirements of the State under the new arrangements. If that precaution is not observed, every additional retirement will be at a loss instead of a gain to the public purse. The commission have shown that at any rate there will be at least 1,000 officers more than are wanted. They recommend that the retirements be limited to that number, and that should more applicants come forward, the pensions be assigned to the one thousand senior in respect of service calculated from the date of first commission, in the three Presidencies who may apply by a certain date.

£617 And the average saving on a number of steps will be £375, as shown in the margin.

27. Should the retirement be that of an officer in the regiment grade of major, then, as before, the probable number of officers to be promoted who are in the staff corps, will be on the average:—

 and the annual saving to the State will be in each case as below:—

And the average saving on a number of steps would be £325 per annum each, as shown in the margin.

£421	28. A correction has to be introduced in making these calculations, since it might and often would happen, that the retiring officer was entitled to the pension of a grade higher than that in which he was serving, the saving in such case would be reduced by the amount of the increased pension.

29. It may also be objected that an officer retiring, might be already on furlough, and on the lower rate of salary. This would certainly happen occasionally, but, on the other hand, a similar proportion of the officers to be promoted would be on furlough also, who increased Indian rates would likewise be saved.

43. Next, it will be necessary for the interests of Government that the retirements should be simultaneous; otherwise those officers who might defer their retirements till a large number had left the service would have reached a much higher position by the consequent promotion, and have thus obtained higher pension. To obviate this, the Commission recommend that officers be allowed to retire at any time within the limit to be presently stated; but that their pensions, with respect to their rank, be determined by their rank on the 18th February last, and that any increase of pension which may accrue from promotion occurring on or after that date should be deducted from the extra pension now to be granted. An example is given in the margin, of the case of an officer of twenty-four years' service, supposed to be promoted to lieutenant-colonel by the retirement of his seniors after the 18th February, 1861, and from whose extra pension a deduction is to be made accordingly. But the Commission recommend that the deduction should be made only as regards extra pensions derived from promotions, and that if an officer becomes entitled by the completion of a period of service to a higher grade of pension, he should be allowed to receive it, as well as the increased scale of additional pension now proposed; provided always that he retires by the date to be fixed.

Deduct difference between pension of Lieutenant-colonel, and that of Major to which he was entitled on 18th February, 1861 ...	£95

44. A few officers have already retired since the publication of the offer of £50 extra. The Commission recommend that all these should be admitted to the benefit of the new scale, provided of course that they are among the senior thousand who are to be eligible.

45. It will be observed that the Commission have recommended that the one thousand seniors, with respect to length of service, should be entitled to the extra pensions, and it may be objected that such an arrangement would open these benefits to staff officers who are already well off; whereas the scheme is ostensibly framed to alleviate the position of those officers who are so unfortunate as to be without employment, and whose retirements from the service it is desirable to effect; there is no possible use, it may be said, in offering inducements towards retirement to able staff officers for whom there is abundant employment, and whose absence would be a loss to the State. The Commission feel the full force of this objection, but no way of selection or elimination in the bestowal of those pensions seems feasible. It is quite impossible to say who are the thousand most unlucky men in the army. The distinction between men on the staff and men not on the staff would not be a proper one, since regimental promotion has to be considered quite as much as staff salary; an old subaltern with a small staff appointment cannot be considered more lucky than a young captain without one. If staff officers retire, they make way for others to be brought on the staff, and as the scheme provides for the retirement of nearly as many officers as will be superfluous to the future wants of the service, it is obvious that whether staff or other officers retire under the scheme, the remainder will almost all find employment. And with regard to the objection that the services of able officers, who would otherwise remain in the army, might be lost to the State, it may be observed that the pension now offered is not, after all, such a magnificent provision as to be likely to tempt away those who have good prospects before them in India, and who have no other means of support. And it may further be urged that if an officer be dissatisfied with his position under the new regime, it will be well to let him go, whether he be on the staff or not.

46. Some care will be necessary in carrying out the operations consequent upon the retirements.

The Commission recommend the following plan:—All applications to retire, of officers in India, should be made by the 1st October, and of officers at home by the 1st August, and be registered by the first-named date by the Government of India. A list of the one thousand seniors who are eligible to retire could then be announced before the 15th October, by which date all applicants for the staff corps are required to register their names. The staff corps list can then be at once prepared; as it will be possible then to ascertain what additions to those who are eligible to claim admission to the staff corps, should be made from the other applicants (who cannot claim admission, but who desire it), in order to complete the corps to the strength necessary to supply all demands.

47. By such a procedure there would be nothing to prevent an officer from applying for pension, with the alternative of admission to the staff corps if he were unsuccessful in obtaining the other.

48. All officers declared eligible for the pensions should be obliged to retire by the 1st November next, if in India, or by the 1st December, if in England; the pensions should be allotted with respect to the service completed on the date of retirement, or with respect to rank on the 18th February last. Officers would also be allowed to retire at any time before those dates, in anticipation of being included among the senior thousand.

49. The whole of the promotions in succession to those thousand retirements to be made simultaneously, with effect as to rank from the 18th February. The staff and ordnance corps promotions are to be made in the first instance from that date, and thus supercessions will be prevented as far as possible.

50. Some death steps may be expected to occur during the interval between the declaration of this measure and its completion. The promotions consequent upon such deaths should remain in abeyance until the other promotions are made, when they also should be made from the 18th February. Thus, in effect, all promotions from whatever causes would be suspended in the cavalry and infantry until the 1st November or thereabout, and would then be declared, all taking date from 18th February. The increase of pay should, however, be made from the actual date of each promotion occurring. Officers will therefore have their rank antedated, and their allowances will be unaffected. By these means the whole of the re-organised army will start from the same date on an equal footing.

51. A similar procedure would be adopted as regards line steps; officers could succeed colonels' allowances as these fell in, but the consequent promotions would be made after all those treated of above, and with effect from the same date.

52. The Commission believe that by the method here proposed, this important change may be carried out with the least possible disturbance of existent interests. The procedure is, in fact, the simplest that could be adopted, and is best on one general principle.

53. There is a possibility that in consequence of this scheme, officers who intend to join the staff corps might hold back from joining on its first formation, in order to reap first the benefit of the large promotion to be given by the thousand retirements. It is doubtful if many would do so, as such a course would deprive an officer of the advantage of counting his previous staff service towards promotion and rank in the staff corps. It is, however, necessary to guard against such an occurrence, and the commission accordingly recommended that all officers of the Indian service joining the staff corps within the first three years of its formation, should take their place in it with respect to rank only with effect from the 18th February, 1861. Such a rule could not be considered unfair, since staff corps service is much more generally advantageous than other service, while it would prevent an officer from deriving an undue advantage from the promotion to take place in the old cadres of regiments. If such a regulation be established, then the only men who will benefit by the promotion will be those who do not retire and who cannot obtain admission to the staff corps, and these are exactly the classes which most deserve consideration.

54. As the retirement of one thousand officers, many of them in the higher ranks, would greatly accelerate the succession of the remainder to colonel's allowance, the commission consider that it would be quite equitable to reduce the number of those allowances at once to the proportion of one for every thirty officers, which it is now intended to arrive at gradually, and they accordingly recommend that this be done. It may, however, happen that some of the senior lieutenant-colonels may be unaffected by the measure here proposed, as it is possible that no retirements may take place above them. It would be hard to postpone their succession to colonel's allowance to such an extent, and the Commission therefore recommend that such cases be especially dealt with on their own merits.

55. The Commission have anxiously considered the question whether officers of the Ordnance corps should be entitled to the benefits of the scheme now submitted. On the one hand, it may be urged in favour of admitting them, that the proportion of off reckonings in these services is about to be reduced from 1 for every 23 officers, the proportion which obtained in 1854, to 1 for every 48 officers, the proportion to be ultimately adopted. This is a serious difference. The permission given under the new regulations for regimental colonels unemployed to remain in England may also be expected to retard promotions considerably. And, lastly, the amalgamation has apparently broken up the retiring funds which had been established for many years in most of these regiments; and the destruction of these valuable properties will fall very hardly upon the senior officers, who have sunk large sums in them, which they may be unable to recover.

56. But, on the other hand, it must be stated that there will be no saving to the State by the retirements of officers of the ordnance corps; few of them will join the staff corps, and every vacancy is to be filled up. The whole of the present scheme is based on the fact of there being a large number of superfluous officers to be absorbed, and that the formation of the staff corps would lessen the charge for retirements, and these facts do not apply to the artillery and engineers, where there are no superfluous officers. It must further be added that these services will generally gain considerable promotion by the amalgamation; and if the proposal of the Commission in their second report—to assimilate them completely with the Royal services—be adopted, the additional promotion consequent thereon will put them quite on a level with the rest of the army. As regards the funds, too, although the loss occasioned by their extinction is a serious one, the Commission consider that it would be more proper to bring the question forward for separate consideration on its own merits, than to urge it as a ground for affording compensation in an indirect elliptical way.

The above considerations have weighed with the Commission in limiting the present scheme to officers of cavalry and infantry.

60. This concludes the proposal of the commission. They trust they have demonstrated clearly the following propositions:—

I. That the reorganization of the Indian army, under the orders from home, will throw out of necessary employment about one thousand officers.

II. That, owing to the absorption of supernumeraries which is to take place, and to the establishment of a staff corps, on an entirely new principle of promotion, the retirement of each officer, not on the staff corps, will, on the average, cause a considerable saving to the State.

III. That such savings will increase in proportion to the extent that retirements occur, of officers whose places are not to be filled up.

IV. That such retirements may be brought about by the offer of liberal additional pensions to retiring officers, which will still be considerably less than the savings that will accrue.

V. That the present scheme is applicable solely to officers of cavalry and infantry, and that it does not embrace any claim which the ordnance corps may, on consideration, be shown to possess for admission to the benefit of additional pension.

VI. That the measure should be made known and carried into effect as soon as possible after the publication of the orders on amalgamation.

61. In conclusion, the Commission would observe that, although they have based their proposals solely on the advantage which it offers to the Government, yet that the class to be thereby benefited is peculiarly deserving of consideration. These officers shared equally with the other European residents in India the dangers and disasters of the late insurrection, and were in an equal degree exposed to its fury. After doing their duty manfully to the State, the survivors have alone, as a class, derived no benefit from the restoration of that order which they have largely contributed to effect. The situation of those officers during the last three years, who have been reduced to forced idleness and inactivity—the victims of a system for which they were not responsible, and the evils of which few foresaw more clearly than themselves—has been (to say nothing of the money loss) a lamentable one for any man with a proper military feeling, and this painful situation of uncertainty is to be succeeded by a still more painful one of certainty. The members of the Commission rejoice to have been permitted by Government to submit a scheme calculated to compensate to a great degree their brother officers for this destruction of their professional prospects.

62. The Commission now beg to leave their proposals in the hands of the authorities, satisfied that they will be found to prove eminently beneficial to the officers of the army and to the interests of her Majesty's Government.

PUBLIC HOLIDAYS.

ALMOST every other imaginable grievance being exhausted, the European inhabitants of Calcutta are trembling with apprehension of some terrible calamity impending unless better heed be given to the regulation of public holidays. The Serampore journal oracularly remarks, "Timidity has always been the curse of the Indian Government. It caused the Rebellion of 1857." At first sight the connection between the moral cowardice of the Government and the idleness of its servants may not appear very clearly defined, but there really is some sort of concatenation of ideas. The Government is charged with deferring over much to the poojah-making propensities of its Hindoo subjects, who are more addicted to that senseless waste of time than even Spaniards or Neapolitans to the observance of saints' days. And besides their own multitudinous dies fasti, the Hindoos have had the benefit of both Christian and Mussulman festivals. The marvel seems to be that any time could have been found for work, and probably this is one cause of the necessity for employing such a number of persons to get through no very excessive amount of business. The nuisance has long since been pronounced intolerable, though it was allowed to continue unabated until the mercantile community of Calcutta lost all patience with the incessant din and racketing attendant on this idolatrous holiday-making, and petitioned the Government to introduce a better system of idleness. Like the dwellers on Olympus in the heroic ages, the Government granted one-half of the suppliants' prayers, while the other half melted away into yielding air. The abominable saturnalia of the Doorga Poojah are henceforth to be confined to four days of maddening sensuality, and the unfortunate Hindoos will not be permitted to ruin themselves in mind and body to the same extent as heretofore. Indeed, if the petitioners had had their way, their oppressed fellow subjects would have enjoyed only thirteen holidays in the year in addition to the fifty-two Sundays, the four great European festivals, and the week between Christmas Day and the first day of the year. They would thus have had only seventy-five days in the whole year to devote to indolence and debauchery, and their immorality would thus necessarily have been shorn of much of its grossness. A Christian and paternal Government naturally shrunk from such a hurtful interference with the pleasures of its subjects, and declined to restrict them to fewer than twenty-two holidays in addition to those they gain through the religion or loyalty of their European rulers. After all, a week more or less is not of vital importance to the welfare of the State, only it would be well if subordinates could obtain a few days' relaxation at a season when they could venture out into the open air with impunity. The Governor-General, indeed, is willing to allow a brief period of vacation in the months of September or October, when no European, in Calcutta at least, can go forth from his house with either comfort or safety. The Chamber of Commerce not unreasonably, therefore, suggests that the vacation of ten days which succeeds the Doorga Poojah shall be postponed till Christmas, at which season both public servants and the general public can enjoy themselves in the open air not only with impunity, but with positive benefit to their health. It is not much to ask, but the boon is so fair and reasonable that we cannot expect it will be granted.

INDIAN PRIZE MONEY.

THOUGH generally so accurate, the Parliamentary reporters must surely have misapprehended the words that fell from the Secretary of State for India in reply to Sir H. Verney's inquiry as to the distribution of the Delhi and Lucknow Prize Money. Sir Charles Wood is represented to have said that "that event could not take place until the prize rolls had been made out and transmitted from this country to India." No military man will ever believe that Sir Charles could deliberately have made such a statement as that. Why, the order to distribute these prize funds has appeared in the Calcutta as well as in the London Gazette, so that ample time has been afforded to make out these rolls and despatch them to the East. One would suppose that the prize roll of a regiment could be made out in forty-eight hours. It certainly did not take long to distribute the prize money arising from the plunder of the Emperor of China's Palace at Peking. The amount, indeed, was small, but the number of recipients was very considerable, and it is beyond all contradiction that the Delhi and Lucknow prize rolls might have been, and probably were, completed years ago. There may possibly be some difficulty now in discovering the whereabouts of many of the natives who are entitled to share in the distribution, and this difficulty will increase with every month's delay, especially after such large reductions in the native army; but these are not the rolls to which Sir Charles Wood alluded. Then, we are desired to believe that this money has been lying idle in the Indian treasury for upwards of three years. The Jew Apella might possibly have credited that statement, but very few Englishmen of the present day will be found to do so. Of course, we do not for one moment suspect Sir Charles of having wittingly, or wilfully, said that which is not true. He has been simply misinformed, and to an extent that must have sorely tested his credulity or politeness. Unless our memory greatly deceive us, the Indian Government on taking over the Delhi fund from the prize agents distinctly pledged itself to allow interest at the rate of five per cent. If so, it is now guilty of an act of repudiation worthy of Pennsylvania. And it is really testing to the utmost the good nature and forbearance of the Delhi and Lucknow heroes, to ask them to believe that amid all its pecuniary difficulties and distresses the Indian Government has kept untouched in its coffers the sum of half a million sterling. To prove the fallacy of this statement it is only necessary to point to the fact that the amount required for this tardy distribution is charged against the Indian revenue of the current financial year. If the money has been lying in the Treasury all this time, and is still doing so, there could be no occasion to enter the amount as an item of expenditure to be defrayed out of the incoming receipts. We trust, therefore, that Sir H. Verney will repeat his question in a more categorical form. As for the Kirwee money, it seems strange that it should rest with the Treasury to determine what forces are entitled to it. It is for the Crown, of course, to decide whether or not the booty captured shall be distributed as prize money among the forces engaged, but it should belong to the military authorities to say what forces were engaged so as to entitle them to share. It is impossible that Sir Charles Wood could have given three disingenuous answers almost in a breath. He has, clearly, been misreported.

"DE PAR LE ROI."

A VERY serious question has been raised in the Legislative Council by the Chief Justice of Bengal. In the course of a discussion on the second reading of a Bill for Securing Grants of Immoveable Property made by the State, Sir Barnes Peacock took occasion to express some doubts as to the power of the Governor-General to alienate the property of the State. There can be no dispute about the fact of the old East India Company having exercised sovereign rights over the land they held as conquerors, but since the transfer of India to the direct Government of the British Crown, the circumstances of the cases have very considerably altered. By Section XL. (Act 21 and 22 Vict., c. 106), the Secretary of State in Council, with the concurrence of a majority of votes at a meeting, is empowered to "sell and dispose of all real and personal estate whatsoever for the time being invested in her Majesty under this Act;" but the preceding section stipulates that the transfer of "the lands and hereditaments, monies, stores, goods, chattels, and other real and personal estate of the said Company" shall be made, "subject to the debts and liabilities affecting the same respectively." Now, it was on the security of the revenue arising from these lands and hereditaments that all Indian loans have been negotiated, and therefore any alienation of them is so far a wrong done to the creditors of the Government. Not even the British Parliament can righteously set aside such engagements unless prepared to accept in the name of this country the entire responsibility of the Indian debt. Again, Section XLI. expressly prohibits any grant or appropriation of any portion of the revenues in India, whether in India or elsewhere, or of any other property coming into the possession of the Crown by this Act, without the concurrence of a majority of votes at a meeting of the Council of India. No one will say that Lord Canning ever waited for any such sanction. He has comforted himself more in the style of an autocrat than as the representative of a constitutional sovereign. With open hands he has lavished principalities and powers, manorial rights, and grants of rent free land in perpetuity. It may be answered that he has only given away the forfeited lands of rebels, but the general belief is that he has done far more than this. And in any case the prohibition contained in Section XLI. extends to all property that might come at any future period under the dominion of the Crown. Besides, an agent cannot possess higher powers than his principal; a responsible Government cannot invest a representative with irresponsible functions; a constitutional sovereign cannot delegate a viceroy with despotic prerogatives. If an estate were forfeited through treason, it could doubtless be conferred by Act of Parliament upon a loyal and meritorious citizen, but even then it would not be exempt from payment of taxes or from bearing its due share of the burdens of the State. But Lord Canning has set himself above Parliaments and Councils, above all Princes and Potentates, Kings and Kaisers. That he has exceeded his powers appears clearly proved, but at the same time it is equally clear that his acts must be ratified. There must be no question or ambiguity about the validity of the titles he has granted, though we much doubt if there be any means of rendering them strictly legal and constitutional. A breach of faith will in any case have been committed towards the fundholders, but probably those speculative individuals will be satisfied with the security that still remains for them. It is very desirable, however, that care should be taken to prevent any future Sultan Canning Khan Bahadoor from playing any such fantastic tricks, and giving away more than belongs to him.

THE AMALGAMATION SCHEME.

AFTER some three years of weary waiting for those most nearly concerned, the first practical step has at length been taken towards an issue which has been showing itself more and more distinctly since the day when Delhi fell into the hands of Sepoy mutineers. We have at length before us the chief details of the scheme first shaped out by the Home Government, and then further elaborated by the Indian authorities, for the amalgamation of the late Company's forces with those of the Crown. In the hundred and six paragraphs of the General Order issued by the Governor-general in Council, there is plenty of food for comment of various kinds, but the room for comment is limited in the case of newspapers, and we can but touch on a few of the leading questions which those paragraphs offer to our notice.

To begin with the soldiers and non-commissioned officers of the old army; these are invited to volunteer for general service in new regiments which shall represent a certain number of those now belonging to the Indian forces. These new regiments are to retain the distinctive names and badges of the old, the 1st Bengal Fusiliers becoming, for instance, H.M.'s 101st Fusiliers. Those who decline to volunteer will be formed into local regiments and batteries, which will gradually die out as the old hands disappear. To those who enter the new regiments and brigades a fair bounty will be granted, according to the years they have served, and they have also the choice of reckoning their future pensions, either by the old or the new rules. The non-commissioned officers will retain their former rank. The artillery of each Presidency will henceforth be formed into a certain number of brigades, officered from the old artillery regiments, and gradually blending with the Royal Artillery as the old officers drop off. Those officers who decline the new terms will remain attached to local batteries until the whole of their number shall have died out; the same choice being practically given to officers of all the other arms. Every care will be taken to preserve the rights and acknowledge the claims of all officers in her Majesty's Indian forces, but some of those officers will be apt to ask themselves how much of that promise has in their case been fulfilled. They who accept the new terms will be generally bound by the conditions of service in the line, but all benefits of funds and retiring pensions will be ensured to them still, and promotion will go by seniority up to a certain point. Here at least is one grievance which may indirectly lower the amount of an officer's retiring pension. That the service will gain by a system of promotion by merit for all ranks above that of captain is a truth not likely to be discerned by the worthy brevet-major who has borne the burden of a hellish climate and a long spell of service in the lower ranks, in the sure hope of one day reaching the promised land of brigadiers' allowances and retired colonelcies on full Indian pay. Either the seniority system should be maintained in full for all old Company's officers, or some larger bribe should be offered to quicken their retirement than the poor addition of fifty pounds a-year to the pensions of all who are willing and otherwise qualified to go home on the full English pay of their rank. If it be desirable to weed the service of idle or useless hands, the work should not be done in so niggardly a way. It is a mere breach of faith to deny a body of men the rights they have hitherto been taught to deem their own, without granting them as full a compensation as any body of Englishmen in their own country would be sure to obtain. Remembering what the dispossessed proctors gained some years ago, and what London wharf-owners are likely to get ere long, we cannot wonder that the additional fifty pounds have only been accepted by those who were about to retire without that sum. Even among those who have not yet served their time not a few would willingly, for the offer of a moderate pension or bonus of some kind, give up their places in a service which, to their thinking, has ceased to hold out the advantages promised them on first entering it. In all such cases a well-timed liberality would not be thrown away, while plenty of young blood would at once be poured into the new establishments in the place of much poor matter that could only do harm by being left to stagnate there.

By the new scheme for organising the artillery some stoppage of promotion in the lower ranks may occur for a time through the number of supernumerary captains and second-captains who will have to be worked into their right places. The supernumerary colonels of that arm will also be absorbed at the rate of three for every four vacancies. But as far as we can make out, the work of absorption will go much further, until nothing remains, except in history, of one of the finest and most distinguished bodies of artillery in the world. The old British infantry regiments will keep their old names and colours, but what trace will survive a few years hence of those three sister regiments of artillery, whose guns have been so gloriously handled on every field from Plassey to the last desperate fights round Delhi and Lucknow?

If India must still be burdened with a large native army instead of a well-armed police, we are glad at any rate to mark the intended conversion of all native regiments into irregulars, whereby the number of English officers will be greatly reduced, and the class of native officers improved in quality. The allowance of the former will henceforth be six and a doctor to each regiment; and, instead of the old effete Soubadar of Bengal N.I., we may gradually set up a body of smart young native officers, such as have long been seen in Skinner's or Jacob's Horse, or amongst Brasyer's Sikhs. The English officers will be chosen, as far as may be, from those now serving with each regiment: it being reckoned, we suppose, that the many now absent from their regiments on staff employ will choose to remain where they are. When the complement of officers has been made up their appointments will for the future be included in those of the new staff corps, the formation of which is at last become a settled certainty.

The want of a regular staff corps has been felt for many years, especially by those who, doing all the regimental work, saw their own promotion retarded, and their chances of distinction continually blighted by brother officers who only joined their regiments—a fact on which the Times' writers should ponder—when there was anything like fighting to be done. From this time, however, dates the commencement of a new system in which officers on staff employ will cease to belong to the regiments from which they have been taken, their promotion being henceforth regulated by their length of service and their places on the general list of each Presidency. There is to be a staff corps for each of the three presidencies, and all who have hitherto served more than a year on the staff, whether they are now on furlough or present at their posts, are entitled, if they apply within six months, to become permanent members of the new corps, with the approval always of the local government. Those who have held their appointment less than a year will, on the other hand, have to go through a certain period of probation, and pass certain prescribed tests, before they can hold a permanent footing in the new corps. If any one belonging to either of these classes should prefer to remain on the old terms, he will not be required to give up his post before the five years of his service are run out. With other regulations touching the staff corps there seems but little ground for quarrelling. A staff officer may come home on twenty months' leave without losing his appointment; he may exchange services with an officer of the line; he will be entitled to his captaincy after twelve years, four having been passed on the staff—to his majority after twenty years, including six on the staff, and so on. If sickness prevents his returning to India to complete his full term of service, he may retire on the half-pay of his rank, with the power of resuming service either in the staff corps or in a regiment of the line. Indeed, to all officers of the Indian army who have health to work, and faith in the promises here held out to them, a fair field of usefulness and distinction seems opened up in the formation of this new corps, if only no hindrances shall hereafter be thrown in their way by any pressure from the Home Government or the Horse Guards on the local authorities, with whom such appointments are nominally to rest.

We are also glad to see that officers who may hereafter serve out of India with their regiments will be allowed to count the whole of such service towards their pensions, just as if the service had been in India. Those, however, who serve out of India under other conditions, will only be able to count one year in every two of that service towards their pensions. We trust that those old unemployed field-officers, whose claims are still under consideration, may have as much justice done to them as their younger comrades are receiving. It may also be hoped that the right of going on half-pay, which the staff-officer of three years' service can now enjoy, will be allowed to include those officers of the old European regiments whose present state of health disables them from active service either in India or anywhere else. On the whole, however, should the performance be at all akin to the promise, we are willing to foresee much gain to the public service in a string of measures from which very few are likely to suffer any serious harm.

IMPERIAL PARLIAMENT.

CIVIL AND MILITARY OFFICERS IN INDIA.

Colonel GILPIN asked the Secretary of State for India whether the civil servants who had covenanted with the East India Company under penalty to serve them in India, the Company having on their part entered into a contract that they should succeed to appointments usually filled by covenanted servants, would lose their title to those advantages in any plan for throwing open the Civil Service; and whether those officers who had purchased commissions in the Company's service, under the sanction and authority of the Government, would be permitted, in their turn, to sell the commissions they had purchased, under a similar authority, after the amalgamation of the two services?

Sir C. WOOD said that of course to such an extent as uncovenanted servants were placed in positions hitherto reserved to the covenanted civil servants, the latter would be deprived of the advantage of their existing exclusive rights. It was not correct to say that any Indian officer had ever purchased his commission; and, although a system had prevailed according to which the junior officers subscribed to raise a fund to induce the seniors to retire, he was not prepared to say that the Government would undertake to furnish the means of purchasing the rights or claims of persons who had so obtained their promotion.

INDIAN PRIZE MONEY.

Sir H. VERNEX asked the Secretary of State for India when the prize money due to the military forces engaged in the suppression of the mutiny in India would be paid; whether it had been employed by the Government or lent out for any other purpose; and whether those who had claims to it would receive interest upon the sums due to them? He also desired to know whether it was proposed to give the booty taken at Kirwee to the army, and, if so, when and where; and whether it was proposed that Sir Hugh Rose's and General Whitlock's forces should both participate in it?

Sir C. WOOD could do little more than repeat the answer which he had given upon former occasions. It was impossible for him to say when the prize money due for the taking of Delhi and Lucknow would be paid to the army, because that event could not take place until the prize rolls had been made out and transmitted from this country to India. The money had not been employed by the Government or lent out. It was in the treasury of India, and of course no interest would be paid to those to whom prize money was due. The booty taken at Kirwee was to be given to the army; but it was for the Treasury, and not for him to decide whether the forces of Sir Hugh Rose's and General Whitlock's forces should participate in the division of that booty.

HOUSE OF LORDS.—MAY 31.

CULTIVATION OF COTTON IN INDIA.

The Marquis of TWEEDDALE rose to call the attention of the House to the question of the Cultivation of Cotton in India, having in the first instance presented a petition from the Manchester and Glasgow Cotton Association on the subject. The noble lord, who was indistinctly heard, was understood to say that he was not surprised the petitioners had begun to take alarm at the events which were occurring at the other side of the Atlantic, inasmuch as their interests and that of thousands of families were strongly bound up with the prospects of a supply of cotton from the Southern States of America. The supply from that quarter failing them, they must look for it in some other direction. Now, their lordships were aware that India from time immemorial had supplied clothing for a population of 200,000,000, and that during the last thirty years the local Governments there, as well as the Government of England, had done their utmost to meet the wishes of the manufacturers at home by improving the cultivation of cotton in the former country. If, he might add, their lordships would refer to the Blue-books containing the minutes of the proceedings of the local Government in the matter, they would find that a considerable improvement in the fibre for the manufacture, both in quality and length, had been effected. Different opinions were no doubt entertained with respect to the circumstance that the supply of cotton from India did not meet the demands of our manufacturers; but he might be permitted to observe that those engaged in the cotton trade asserted that that circumstance was to be attributed to the defective state of the land tenure in that country, to the bad condition of the roads leading from the districts in which the cotton was produced to the ports of exportation, and to neglect in not improving the navigation of the rivers which traversed the interior. When he had been in India the subject occupied attention as it now did, and he had made particular inquiry with the view to obtain information with respect to it. The cotton grown in India would be limited in quantity unless there was a regular market, not depending on the good or bad crop in the Southern States of America; for the natives, having to pay their rents, would only grow those species of cotton for which there was a demand. With regard to the introduction of Europeans for the cultivation of cotton, he would rather trust to the natives, who had produced cotton to supply the wants of 200,000,000 of people, than to the labour of unacclimatised Anglo-Saxons. The skill of the natives of India was remarkable not only for growing cotton, but in other respects. He considered his own country to be most advanced in the highest principles of cultivation; but on referring to India he found that a great number of the same principles which guided the people in this part of the world were known in India 350 years ago. Great progress had been made of late years in opening new roads and making railways in India, and the best attention of the Indian Government would, he doubted not, be given to the opening up of communication with the cotton growing districts. The navigation of the Godavery river might be greatly improved at an inconsiderable expense, and he did not see how the Government could longer delay the opening up the important district on the banks of that river. The manufacturers of Manchester and Glasgow did not know where to look for their supply of cotton for next year. Between three million and four million of persons were dependent upon the cotton manufacture, and if any interruption should take place in the supply, they would be left without employment. It appeared to him that the Government ought to be supported in the great work of making roads and opening up the districts best suited to the growth of cotton in India. That country was taking up a high position. Her soil and climate were favourable, manual labour was abundant, and the people had industry enough to enable them to supply all the wants of this country. If the merchants of England would create a market for the raw produce of India, they would in turn find an ample market in that great country for every class of English manufactures.

Lord HARRIS was convinced that if sufficient capital were at once invested in the cultivation of cotton ample returns would be derived therefrom, both directly and indirectly. Certain changes as to the mode of obtaining land ought to be made by the Government, and the ports and cotton districts ought to be connected by better roads.

Lord BROUGHAM entirely concurred with the remarks of Lord Tweeddale on the measures which ought to be taken by the Government for promoting the growth of cotton in India.

Lord ELLENBOROUGH, after dwelling upon the importance to this country of an ample supply of cotton, which was, he said, food to a great portion of its inhabitants, observed that he wished to know what steps had been taken by the Government to meet the present emergency. In the course of an interesting speech he recounted how his efforts to promote a supply of cotton in India had been thwarted by the Government, vindicated the Indian Government from the charges brought against it of indifference to the cultivation of cotton, and remarked that the cultivation of that plant depended not so much upon the action of the Government as upon a constant demand in order to maintain a supply.

Lord DE GREY and RIFON said, that although he perfectly agreed with the previous speakers on the importance of a sufficient supply of cotton, he did not entirely concur with the prayer of the petitioners. So far as the Government could do so consistently with the revenues and interests of the people of India, they would offer every facility for the acquisition of land by English capitalists in India; still, he did not think the Government were prepared to allow land to be put up for sale free of land tax, as it would endanger the revenue, and perhaps inflict injustice on the natives. The Government, he assured the House, were doing all in their power to improve the means of transit, by rivers, canals, and roads, between the cotton districts and the ports. It was doubtful, considering the present state of the money-market, and the demands likely to be made upon it, whether it would be desirable to raise a loan for this purpose, but the Government would use their best efforts to promote the growth of cotton in India.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—MAY 31.

THE INDIAN NAVY.

Sir G. BOWYER asked the Secretary for India whether any decision had been arrived at respecting the future of the Indian navy, and, if so, when it would be made known; whether the report of the Civil Finance Commission (recommending a wholesale reduction of the Indian navy on economical grounds) had been received by Government, and whether it was their intention to adopt the report, and, if a reduction or abolition of the service was contemplated, what course it was the intention of the Government to pursue with regard to the officers?

Sir C. WOOD said that no decision had been arrived at with regard to the future of the Indian navy. It was true that the report of the Finance Commission in India, or rather a despatch of the Government of India, recommending a very large reduction in the Indian navy on economical grounds, had been received; and that despatch was now under consideration.

CHINA.

Mr. DUNLOP moved an address to her Majesty to instruct her representative in China to afford to British subjects equal facilities for commercial intercourse, and to maintain a friendly understanding for the purposes of trade, with the two contending parties in that empire, in the exercise of an impartial neutrality between them. He entered upon a rather long narrative of recent transactions in China, in connection with the Imperial authorities and those representing the Taepings, insisting upon the prudence as well as justice of observing a strict neutrality in civil and military matters towards both.

The motion was seconded by Mr. BAXTER, who had been convinced, he said, on a careful consideration of the papers on this subject, that we had not pursued, and were not pursuing, a system of perfect neutrality. The character of the Taepings had, he contended, been misrepresented and unjustly depreciated.

Lord J. RUSSELL, observing that it would have been better to wait till further papers were before the House, said the question was not what had occurred three years ago, but the actual state of affairs, which was totally different. Sir J. Hope had ascended the Yang-tze-kiang, and at Nankin the British commanders had entered into arrangements with the Taeping authorities, and had engaged to observe neutrality in the contest between them and the Imperialists. The official despatches lately received contained more correct and trustworthy narratives of facts than private letters, and they showed that we were pursuing our proper business in China,—to promote our trade and to maintain a neutral attitude and a friendly intercourse with both the parties.

Mr. BUCHANAN, in supporting the motion, gave a historical sketch of the rebellion in China, and a description of the reigning dynasty, which he considered effete, and with which it was unwise for us to connect ourselves, as he maintained we had done. He condemned the system under which our China trade was carried on.

Mr. S. FITZGERALD called attention to circumstances which he thought compromised our neutrality in some of the Chinese ports.

Lord PALMERSTON said it would be seen by the further papers that we were observing the strictest neutrality, and had obtained from the Taeping authorities security that our commerce should not be interrupted. As the policy we were pursuing was to maintain a strictly bona fide neutrality, this disposed of a great portion of the objections of Mr. Dunlop. With regard to the collection of the Custom's duties in China by British agents, he contended that this was no infringement of that neutrality. Some of the circumstances mentioned by Mr. Fitzgerald were not known to the Government, and deserved inquiry.

Mr. J. WHITE pointed out how the trade arrangements in China were calculated to produce ill effects to our commerce. He thought the public should be disabused as to the supposed honesty and good intentions of the Taepings.

Colonel SYKES made a few observations. The motion was then withdrawn.

HOUSE OF COMMONS—JUNE 3.

INDIA LOAN.

In a committee of the whole House, Sir C. WOOD, in moving a resolution, "That it is expedient to enable the Secretary of State in Council of India to raise money in the United Kingdom for the service of the Government of India," said that, deferring his full exposition of the Indian finances till he was in possession of more perfect accounts from India, he thought it necessary to make a short statement. He referred to his financial exposition last year, in which his anticipation that the deficiency of revenue would disappear was conditional on no unforeseen event occurring to disappoint it. He was sorry to say that such an event had happened in the shape of a drought and consequent famine, the necessary effect of which was a loss of revenue and an increased expenditure. The ultimate result would be, taking the most unfavourable view, a deficiency of £2,000,000, which he did not think could be much complained of. Meanwhile, the prospects of the ensuing year were favourable, and Mr. Laing expected shortly to see the revenue and the expenditure equalised. There would be a pressure for money in the early part of the year, and recourse must be had in this country either to the money paid in by the railroad companies, or to a loan in the money market. From the railroad balances he had no prospect of a considerable sum being available; the only alternative, then, was a loan to meet the demands in England. The next question was what sum he should borrow. After stating the estimated amount of the expenditure in England on account of India, and the means of meeting it, he proposed, he said, to borrow a sum of £4,000,000, though he might have occasion to come to the House again to borrow a further sum for railroad purposes. Sir Charles gave a very long and detailed explanation of the general position of railroad finances and of the state and prospects of those undertakings.

Mr. BAZLEY dwelt upon the heavy tax upon cotton occasioned by the want of facilities of transit, and urged the necessity of a revision of the land tenures of India. He hoped that the Indian Government would endeavour to develop the natural rather than the artificial resources of India, insisting upon the great importance of securing an ample supply of the raw material required for the employment of our manufacturing population. Our colonial possessions comprehended an immense area of cotton-producing countries, and in India there was not only land but labour.

Lord STANLEY said he was glad to hear from Sir C. WOOD that the reduction of the military expenditure was going on at a rapid rate, being satisfied that our prospects of equalizing expenditure and revenue mainly depended upon the diminution of this part of the expenditure. He deferred a full consideration of the subject of this loan till a future stage of the question.

Mr. J. B. SMITH strongly recommended the use of water-carriage for the conveyance of cotton and the opening of the navigation of the Godavery river. Everything depended, he said, upon cheap carriage for the transport of Indian cotton. With European superintendence India could produce cotton equal in quality to the American, and in quantity as much as we required.

Mr. VANSITTART took a much less favourable view of the Indian finances than Sir C. WOOD, and was of opinion that the anticipated equilibrium of revenue and expenditure was not likely to be seen for some years to come.

Mr. CRAWFORD said the proposal of Sir C. WOOD would not throw any additional weight upon the money-market, and his speech, he thought, would greatly relieve the public mind. He pointed out the advantages which would in a few years be derived from railroads in India, and the misapprehensions which prevailed in this country respecting the tenure of land in that country, the system of agriculture there, and the nature and extent of the home demand for cotton in India.

Mr. SMOLLETT complained of the enormous expenditure on account of India, and that with an income of £38,000,000 the Government could not make ends meet, but were spending £47,000,000, which he thought a great scandal, Lord Dalhousie having considered that £34,000,000 would suffice. He believed that a very large amount might be saved in every department, especially the military and public works. Against the latter department he brought very heavy charges, and said he should vote against the resolution.

Mr. H. SEYMOUR objected that, in relation to public works carried on by companies, Sir C. WOOD was acting in the bad spirit of the East India Directors. He had not taken measures to promote the accumulation of capital in India and to alter the tenures of land, which, with other necessary reforms, were indispensable for the improvement of the country.

Colonel SYKES discussed the comparative advantages of carriage by water and by railroads, and the obstacles to the sale of land in India (except waste) in fee simple.

In his reply, Sir C. WOOD reminded the committee that he was not raising money to meet a deficit in India; it was to supply the wants of the home Treasury that he asked this power.

The resolution was then agreed to.

COURT OF PROBATE AND DIVORCE.

MAY 31.

(BEFORE SIR C. CRESWELL.)

HAMILTON V. HAMILTON AND WATERS.

The Rev. Charles Dillon Hamilton prayed for a dissolution of his marriage with Eliza Hamilton on account of her adultery with Marcus Antoninus Waters. The respondent did not appear. The co-respondent put in an appearance, but no answer.

Dr. Spinks and Mr. E. F. Moore appeared for the petitioner, and Mr. Miller for the co-respondent.

Dr. Spinks stated that the petitioner was a clergyman of the Church of England, and married the respondent at the Church of St. John the Baptist at Bristol in 1842. They lived in Norfolk until 1846, and they then went to India, where the petitioner obtained an appointment as chaplain, and resided first at Calcutta, then at Cawnpore, and then at Lucknow. On the 1st of October, 1850, she eloped with the co-respondent, then a lieutenant in her Majesty's 53rd Regiment, and now in the 77th Regiment. She cohabited with Lieutenant Waters until August, 1851, and then returned to England, and had since been living with her friends. Lieutenant Waters was living as a guest in the petitioner's house when he rewarded his hospitality by running away with his wife.

Mr. Archer, a medical man in Upper Berkeley-street, stated that he had known the petitioner and the respondent both before and after the marriage. Before the marriage she was living in Norton-street, and received Mr. Hamilton's visits there. She passed by the name of Smith. They appeared to live very happily together after the marriage.

Mr. Crank, formerly the head-master of the Martiniers College at Lucknow, said he made the acquaintance of Mr. and Mrs. Hamilton when he went to Lucknow, where they were living in 1847 or 1848, and became very intimate with them. Mr. Hamilton was the chaplain at Lucknow. Mr. Hamilton always treated his wife with great kindness. Two or three years after he was at Lucknow Lieutenant Waters went there. Lieutenant Waters was taken ill in his bungalow, and Mr. Hamilton kindly invited him to his house. Lieutenant Waters stayed at Mr. Hamilton's for three or four months. He remembered giving a great ball to all the civilians and the military, at which Mr. and Mrs. Hamilton and Lieutenant Waters were present. He noticed Lieutenant Waters and Mrs. Hamilton together in an open space in front of the College. A sentinel was walking up and down near them. He thought it did not look well to see them separating themselves from the rest of the company, and he went out and advised her to come inside, because a heavy dew was falling. She said she preferred remaining where she was. He went out a second time and asked whether she would take some refreshment, but she declined. He went out a third time, and offered to send the ayah with her shawl. Ultimately she came in. A few days after the ball Lieutenant Waters and Mrs. Hamilton left Lucknow. Mr. Hamilton came to him to make inquiries, and appeared very much distressed.

Mr. Charles Gubbins said that in 1850 or 1851 he was a magistrate at Meerut, and he went to the hotel there and saw Lieutenant Waters and Mrs. Hamilton. He told them that he had come in consequence of a communication from Lieutenant Simms, on behalf of Mr. Hamilton, and that he had been requested as a magistrate to interfere. Lieutenant Waters said that Mrs. Hamilton was there of her own free consent, and left the room in order that he might ascertain that fact from her. He pointed out that Lieutenant Waters would be very likely ruined if Mrs. Hamilton remained with him, and recommended that if she did not wish to return to her husband she should go back to her friends in England before the scandal became generally known. She said she would never return to her husband, but did not seem unwilling to return to her relations. He told her that he would allow her to occupy a room in his house until arrangements could be made for sending her to Cawnpore. They asked for time to consider what they should do, and he afterwards received a letter from Lieutenant Waters, which he forwarded to Mr. Hamilton.

James Godwin, a colour-sergeant in a Militia regiment, and formerly sergeant in her Majesty's 53rd Regiment, said that Lieutenant Waters joined that regiment in 1851. When the regiment was quartered at Rawul Pindee a lady, who was afterwards pointed out to him as Mrs. Hamilton, was living with Lieutenant Waters in his bungalow. In the latter part of the year Lieutenant Waters went with a part of the regiment to the mountains to act against the hill tribes. The lady left about the same time.

The certificate of the marriage was put in, but it appeared that the lady was married under the name of Buckner, and there was no evidence to identify her as the person who had lived in India with the petitioner, and had eloped with Lieutenant Waters.

The hearing was adjourned for further evidence upon this point.

MISCELLANEOUS.

CAPTAIN SPEKE.—The Founder's Gold Medal has been conferred by the Royal Geographical Society on Captain John Hanning Speke, of H.M.'s Bengal army, "for his eminent geographical discoveries in Africa, his prudence and intrepidity as a traveller, and more especially for his discovery of the great lake Victoria Nyanza, as illustrated by the map constructed for the journal of the society." Last year a similar medal was voted to Captain Richard Burton, of H.M.'s Bombay army. Earl de Grey and Ripon, who received the medal in the absence of Captain Speke, said, "it was a source of pleasure to him to think that officers of the old Indian army were amalgamating with the rest of the service without yielding any portion of the glorious heritage which as travellers and geographers seemed to be peculiarly their own."

THE BISHOP DESIGNATE OF MADRAS.—The Rev. Dr. Gell, Bishop designate of Madras, the week before last, addressed a meeting in the Hall of Christ's College, Cambridge, of which he is a distinguished member. The gentlemen present were chiefly members of the Church Missionary Union, a University Association of which Dr. Gell was formerly president. He drew attention to the progress of missions during the present generation, and to the growing interest in them within the last few years. He said that in what had already been done for spreading a knowledge of the Gospel there was very great cause for encouragement, but that the vast heathen populations of China and India proved how very much still remained to be done; that in South India there were many openings for persons of every kind of gift; that the Madras Presidency was reported to contain between 13,000,000 and 14,000,000 of inhabitants; that the total number of the clergy was about 130—namely, 40 chaplains, 30 under the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel, more than 50 under the Church Missionary Society, and a few under the Colonial Church and School Society; that there were four chief languages in it—the Tamul, spoken in Madras and the country south of it, including Tinnevely—the Telooogo, spoken in the north-east part of the presidency, and also beyond the confines of the presidency, the Canarese, spoken in the centre, and the Malayalam in the south-west. He reviewed the work of the Church Missionary Society in South India. In Telooogo the society had three stations,—Masulipatam, Bezware, and Ellore. He alluded to the itinerating mission which Ragland had originated, and in which three Cambridge men, Meadows, Fenn, and Macdonald, were now employed. He observed that the educational establishments in Tinnevely were in a state of vigour, and that there were seventy theological students; that in Travancore, through the influence of a wise Christian resident, advantages had been obtained which would facilitate the progress of Christianity; that in the Syrian church on the west coast, in which Bishop Wilson took a great interest, and of which at one time he had much hope (but his hope was altogether disappointed), a light was beginning to shine. Two Syrian youths had met to pray, and at the close of the year thirty-four had joined the congregation connected with the mission. Thus, with very much work remaining to be done, there was also much encouragement.

JAPAN.—The correspondence respecting Japan, which has just been laid before Parliament, is chiefly occupied with an account of the withdrawal of the European representatives from Jeddo, and of the satisfactory circumstances under which they returned in March last, upon the formal invitation of the Tycoon, and with his engagement to take measures for their greater security and protection from menace and insult. They were received in State at Jeddo, and when the national flags were hoisted at the legations a Royal salute was fired from the batteries, for the first time in the history of our relations with Japan. Arrangements were also under consideration for the better protection of foreigners at the great trading port of Yokohama. The American Minister, Mr. Harris, declined to leave Jeddo, and the correspondence between him and our representative, Mr. Alcock, became greatly embittered. Mr. Alcock writes, reasonably enough, on the 31st January:—"Mr. Harris is not more impressed than I am with the consciousness that if satisfactory relations are ever to be established with this Government and people we must be content with improvement by slow degrees, and put up in the meantime with many shortcomings and not a few wrongs." Lord J. Russell also, writing to him on the 8th of April, says:—"Her Majesty's Government have no desire to quarrel with Japan," and more fully on the 10th on a subject now of pressing importance,—"I should wish to have your opinion, whether it is desirable to insist upon the provision of the treaty which admits of the residence of British subjects generally in the capital of Jeddo after the 1st of January, 1852. In forming an opinion upon this point the somewhat analogous case of Canton will naturally occur to your mind; and, whatever course should be decided on, the expediency of guarding in Japan against similar irritating discussions on such a point as those which have prevailed in China must constantly be kept in view."

The account given in these papers of the trade of Yokohama in the year 1860 is very encouraging. Two years ago the place was little more than a dismal swamp, entirely unknown to the world. The exports of 1860 were of the declared value of £824,000, more than half of which left in British vessels; the imports in British vessels were of the value of £133,000; and those in American, Dutch, and French vessels, £65,900; 103 merchant vessels, of 40,905 tons entered the port, 52 of them British vessels, of 21,724 tons. British vessels paid import and export duties and shipping dues to the amount of £30,000; American, Dutch, and French vessels, to the amount of £24,000. With the exception of spelter, dyewoods, and a few medicines, the Japanese have not been in the habit of buying our imports to any considerable extent, until through the stoppage of business at Shanghai last year, cottons and woollens were forced into the market. A large falling off in the exports from China was anticipated; a very large demand then arose, and by degrees a regular business established itself, in which the sale of camlets, shirtings, chintzes, and American drills formed the main feature. But the supply exceeded the demand, and in October the dangerous system of making sales on credit was introduced on an extended scale in order to diminish the stocks. But at the beginning of this year a better feeling prevailed both among buyers and importers. The great drawbacks to sound trade are the low currency of the Mexican dollar and the interference of the Government in all commercial transactions, especially in the sale of produce by regulating prices. There is promise of a large import trade in Chinese raw cotton, which will supply means of barter, tending to render the foreign merchant more independent of currency. The establishment of a bank is much wished, and a regular mail service to Shanghai by way of Nagasaki.

GOVERNMENT OF JAPAN.—Mr. Alcock, the British Envoy in Japan, states in one of the despatches just published his idea of the Government of that country. The titular sovereigns, the Mikado and the Tycoon, hold only a phantom sceptre, and have no real power. It is behind these shadows that the true executive and governing power must be sought. There are first the ministers, with two of whom alone the representatives of foreign powers come in contact. Behind, but above them, is the Gorogio, or council of five—Daimios in their own right and high officers of State by election—claiming to exercise a supreme executive power under certain responsibility and control from those from whom their powers are derived. Beyond these, again, and probably the effective source of any power the Gorogio exercise, is the Great Council of the Daimios, understood to be eighteen in number, representing the sixty-two principal vassal princes of the empire, who, lastly, form a part only of the collective body of some 600 Daimios and privileged classes, possessed of territorial rights and privileges more or less considerable in the country, and a voice more or less direct and potent in its councils. The most powerful section of the Daimios are understood to be opposed to the great innovation of establishing foreign relations. Within a month from the conclusion of the first treaty (with America) the reigning Tycoon, the nominal head of the executive, disappeared from the scene; a mere boy, not his son, was elected from the Royal stock to succeed him, and all concerned in the negotiations were disgraced and removed, even down to the subordinates, and in disgrace to this day they remain, and it is with a hostile party in power that the foreign representatives have to deal in seeing the treaties carried into execution. In this party there are men who, it is believed, advocate a decided retrograde policy, consisting in the annoyance and intimidation of foreigners, and, if that should fail, decimation or general massacre, and closing the ports on the plea that public opinion will not tolerate foreign intrusion. Among the party driven from power this policy is supposed to find support in the hope that a collision with foreign Powers may ruin the existing Government. The governing members seem unable or reluctant to cope with these classes. Mr. Alcock thought it necessary recently to write plainly to the Japanese Ministers for Foreign Affairs, that they must control the violent men who seek to drive foreigners out of the country by murder and terrorism; and he added, "Europe united would resist the attempt, render its success impossible, and punish the authors of such an outrage on the laws and rights of nations. Could they even temporarily effect their object and murder every foreigner, Japan would be the most grievous sufferer. Were such a flagitious policy ever to be carried out, the country would fall back under the ban of civilised nations, and be dealt with as a common enemy."

DINNER TO THE EARL OF ELGIN AND SIR HOPE GRANT.—The members of the Special Embassy to China and of the China Staff entertained the Earl of Elgin, K.T., G.C.B., and Lieutenant-General Sir J. Hope Grant, G.C.B., at a banquet on Thursday evening at the Albion, Aldersgate-street. Among the company were Colonel the Hon. St. George Foley, C.B., the Hon. J. F. Stuart Wortley, the Hon. T. J. Thurlow, Lieutenant-Colonel Creaklock, Major H. B. Loch, C.B., Dr. Home, V.C., Mr. John Loch, Donald Cameron, of Lochiel, Lord Richard Grosvenor, Colonel Mackenzie, C.B., Colonel Stevenson, C.B., Major the Hon. J. Dormer, Major Bidduph, Major the Hon. Augustus Auson, V.C., Major Wilmot, V.C., Major Greathed, C.B., Captain Frank Grant, Lieutenant-Colonel Wolseley, C.B., &c.

THE SUPPLY OF COTTON.—Official returns just made public afford interesting particulars with regard to a topic which just now commands a larger share than ever of public attention—viz., the supply of raw cotton. The receipts during the last eighteen years have been as follows:—1843, 673,193,116 lb.; 1844, 646,111,304 lb.; 1845, 721,979,953 lb.; 1846, 467,856,274 lb.; 1847, 474,707,615 lb.; 1848, 713,020,161 lb.; 1849, 755,469,012 lb.; 1850, 663,576,861 lb.; 1851, 757,379,740 lb.; 1852, 929,782,448 lb.; 1853, 895,298,740 lb.; 1854, 887,333,140 lb.; 1855, 801,751,952 lb.; 1856, 1,023,886,304 lb.; 1857, 969,318,896 lb.; 1858, 1,034,342,176 lb.; 1859, 1,225,989,072 lb.; 1860, 1,390,938,752 lb. It will be observed that last year's import was the largest on record, exhibiting an increase of 49 per cent. as compared with 1852, and 121 per cent. as compared with 1843. The supplies obtained were derived from the various sources of production in the following proportions:—

Year.	America.	India.	Other Countries.
1843	85	9	6
1844	80	14	6
1845	86	8	6
1846	85	7	8
1847	76	17	7
1848	84	12	4
1849	83	9	8
1850	76	18	6
1851	78	16	6
1852	82	9	9
1853	78	20	7
1854	81	13	6
1855	76	16	8
1856	76	19	5
1857	67	26	7
1858	84	12	4

The expression "other countries" comprises the Brazils, Egypt, the Mediterranean, the West Indies, British Guiana, &c. It is an encouraging feature in the analysis that we are less proportionally dependent on the Americans than in 1843, and that our other sources of supply have to some extent kept pace with the rapidly-augmenting demand, but it is, nevertheless, a grave fact that the American cotton-fields sent us last year nearly double the quantity forwarded in 1843, and that any interruption in their production would now be felt on this side of the Atlantic more keenly than ever. Thus, in 1843 the American supplies were 574,738,520 lb.; in 1844, 517,218,622 lb.; in 1845, 626,650,412 lb.; in 1846, 401,949,393 lb.; in 1847, 364,599,291 lb.; in 1848, 600,247,488 lb.; in 1849, 634,504,050 lb.; in 1850, 493,153,112 lb.; in 1851, 596,638,962 lb.; in 1852, 765,630,544 lb.; in 1853, 658,451,796 lb.; in 1854, 722,151,346 lb.; in 1855, 681,629,424 lb.; in 1856, 780,040,016 lb.; in 1857, 654,758,048 lb.; in 1858, 833,237,776 lb.; in 1859, 961,707,264 lb.; and in 1860, 1,115,890,608 lb. The production of British India, which sustained a severe check in the year of the great mutiny (when it reached its maximum), is now again recovering. The receipts from India last year were 204,141,168 lb., as compared with 180,496,624 lb. in 1856; 250,338,144 lb. in 1857; 132,722,576 lb. in 1858; and 192,330,800 lb. in 1859. The receipts from the Mediterranean were last year 44,036,608 lb., a larger total than in any previous year, with the exception of 1852, when the supplies from that source were 48,058,640 lb. The value of the raw cotton imported last year was £35,756,889, as compared with £34,550,036 in 1859; £30,106,968 in 1858; £29,288,827 in 1857; £26,448,224 in 1856; £20,848,515 in 1855; and £20,175,395 in 1854.

PENINSULAR AND ORIENTAL STEAM NAVIGATION COMPANY.—The report states that no material change had taken place in the distribution of the fleet during the last six months. The Mooltan had been placed on the active list, and the Ripon was under repair. The Mooltan had not yet made a sea voyage. The trip from the Thames to Southampton was quite satisfactory, and as every arrangement tending to enhance the comfort of the passengers had been introduced in this vessel, it might be confidently expected that she would acquire a high character in the company's fleet. The Ripon was the first of the large class of iron vessels built by the company eighteen years ago, when the comparative merits of wood and iron as materials for shipbuilding was a question that had to be solved by experience. The Ripon had proved so sound a ship that it had been decided to lengthen her by the bow, to fit her with new boilers, and to apply to her machinery the recent improvements to secure economy of fuel. An arrangement for the postal service was concluded since the last meeting, terminable on twelve months' notice, under which the company were to receive a moderate rate of subsidy for certain branches of the service, which, at a period when the cost of fuel was comparatively low, they had performed without aid from the Government. The most important of those branches was a line between Bombay and China, which being made to alternate with the monthly or contract line, furnished a complete fortnightly communication between England and the intermediate places on the trunk line, and Penang, Singapore, Hong Kong, Shanghai, &c., and as the Government enjoyed all the privileges of the contract on this line—namely, the conveyance of the mails free, and of official passengers at reduced rates—the directors constantly kept a claim for some remuneration before the authorities. This claim for past services had been adjusted by the payment of £12,000 in respect of the twelve round voyages performed in the year 1860. Previous to the conclusion of the above arrangement the directors had given notice to the Government that the company would not have occasion to despatch the vessels on this branch regularly as theretofore, but only as their commercial traffic might require. It was eventually agreed, however, that the line should be carried on for six months certain from the 1st of January last, the company receiving £2,000 for each round voyage, or at the rate of £24,000 per annum, subject to discontinuance on two months' notice. That notice had been served on the company, and the consequent reduction of the China mail service from a fortnightly to a monthly one had been officially announced by the Postmaster-General. It appeared that the line had yielded £12,000 a year in postages (or half the subsidy agreed upon); so that, without estimating collateral advantages or the probable increase of correspondence owing to the peace with China, its continuance would only cost the country £12,000 per annum, or £500 for each homeward and £500 for each outward mail. The general operations of the half-year had been satisfactory, while the public services intrusted to the company had been performed with remarkable punctuality; and the directors felt enabled to recommend that the usual dividend of 3½ per cent. be declared for the half-year ending the 31st of March last, and that payment of the same be made, clear of Income-tax, on and after the 24th inst.

MAPS OF INDIA &amp; CHINA.

MAP of INDIA; showing the British Territories subdivided into Collectories, and the position and boundary of each Native State; chiefly compiled from Trigonometrical Surveys, executed by order of the Honourable Court of Directors of the East India Company.
On six sheets—Size, 5 ft. 6 in. high; 5 ft. 8 in. wide. £2; or, on cloth, in a case, £2. 12s. 6d.; or, with rollers and varnished, £3. 3s.

The subject kept in view in compiling this map has been to render it available to the greatest possible extent for popular use. For this purpose the names of all stations, civil and military, are inserted, as well as those of all towns and places of note likely to be looked for. To make clear the subdivisions of the whole of the country, both British and native, the limits of the various districts and collectories, with their names, are distinctly indicated. The railways and telegraphs are laid down, and the trunk roads conspicuously coloured.
The newly-acquired district in Burmah is included. To avoid, however, the confusion consequent upon over-crowding, and make the map clear and easy for reference, the names of many small villages, and places of no present importance, have been omitted, and thus a very wide measure of comprehensiveness has been attained, while needless diffuseness has been avoided.

A GENERAL MAP of INDIA; compiled
chiefly from Surveys executed by order of the Honourable East India Company, with the railways and telegraphs. On six sheets—Size, 5 ft. 3 in. wide; 5 ft. 4 in. high. £2; or, on cloth, in a case, £2. 12s. 6d.; or, with rollers and varnished, £3. 3s.

MAP of the ROUTES in INDIA; with

itary Stations. On one sheet—Size 2 ft. 3 in. wide; 2 ft. 9 in.
high. 9s.; or, on cloth, in a case, 12s.

In this map are given the whole of the military and civil stations, together with the principal towns, the villages being omitted, so as to make the stations more prominent. The colouring defines the boundaries of the three Presidencies, and shows also the railways and telegraphs.

"It would be impossible to over-estimate the utility of this work to members of the military profession as a comprehensive exposition of the law especially applicable to them, and to the practice of military tribunals; and it would be difficult to speak in terms of commendation too high of the manner in which it has been executed."—Morning Chronicle.

TEETH WITHOUT SPRINGS.

BY HER MAJESTY'S ROYAL LETTERS PATENT.
Newly-invented and Patented Application of Chemically prepared INDIA RUBBER in the construction of ARTIFICIAL TEETH, GUMS, and PALATES.

MR. EPHRAIM MOSELY, SURGEON
DENTIST, 9, GROSVENOR-STREET, GROSVENOR-SQUARE,
Sole Inventor and Patentee.

A new, original, and invaluable invention, consisting in the adaptation, with the most absolute perfection and success of

in lieu of the gold or bone frame. The extraordinary results of this application may be briefly noted in a few of their most prominent features:—

All sharp edges are avoided; no springs, wires, or fastenings are required; a greatly increased freedom of suction is supplied, a natural elasticity, hitherto wholly unobtainable; and a fit, perfected with the most unerring accuracy, are secured; while, from the softness and flexibility of the agent employed the greatest support is given to the adjoining teeth when loose, or rendered tender by the absorption of the gums. The acids of the mouth exert no agency on the chemically prepared India-rubber, and, as a non-conductor, fluids of any temperature may with thorough comfort be imbibed and retained in the month, all unpleasantness of smell or taste being at the same time wholly provided against by the peculiar nature of its preparation.

Teeth filled with gold, and Mr. Mosely's White Enamel, the only stopping that will not become discoloured; particularly recommended for front teeth.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT and PILLS.

—WHOOPING COUGH, COLDS, PNEUMONIA.—These infantile disorders were the terrors of parents, who knew the impossibility of administering medicine internally to children, till Professor Holloway discovered his invaluable Ointment. This Ointment, rubbed externally on the throat and chest, passes through the skin, and penetrates to the affected tissues, without causing the irritability and feverishness always produced by a child's repugnance to medicine, and which vastly prostrates the cure. No inconvenience or difficulty attaches to this treatment, by which thousands of children are annually saved or secured against pulmonary disease. In all disorders to which childhood is particularly liable, parents, guardians, and nurses may with confidence resort to Holloway's Ointment, which, when practicable, should be assisted by his purifying Pills.

PRICHARD'S DANDELION, CAMO-

MILE, RHUBARB, and GINGER PILLS.—This peculiar preparation of dandelion acts particularly on the liver, thus avoiding the use of mercurials, and will be found invaluable to parties suffering from a sluggish state of that organ, or who have resided in India or other hot climates; whilst the well-known stomachic efficacy of camomile, rhubarb, and ginger, renders these pills the most happy combination possible; and as many are at a loss for a safe remedy for occasional ailments they will find this medicine a great convenience, which may be resorted to by all persons at any age, under any circumstances, and without the least inconvenience.

Prepared by W. Prichard, Apothecary, 65, Charing-cross, London, in bottles, 1s. 1d., 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d., and 11s. May be had of all medicine vendors.

THE ILLUSTRATED HORSE DOCTOR;

Being an accurate and detailed account of the various Diseases to which the Equine Race are subjected, together with the latest mode of treatment and the requisite prescriptions, written in plain English.

By EDWARD MAYHEW, Esq., M.R.C.V.S.

"A BOOK WHICH SHOULD BE IN THE POSSESSION OF ALL WHO KEEP HORSES."

CRITICAL REMARKS.

"In order to make a good book two things are essential—an author competent to treat the subject he takes in hand, and a publisher spirited enough to give the writer a loose rein in the production of his work—that is, liberality in allowing him all means and appliances for rendering it a master-piece. The publishers of 'The Illustrated Horse-Doctor' deserve the highest credit and the greatest success for giving the world this admirable volume in its present costly shape. Its intrinsic merit deserves every penny which has been spent upon it, and, inasmuch as we have never seen a book brought out with better taste or finish, the cost of its production must have been very serious. No one with the least equine knowledge can require to be told that Mr. Mayhew is the man for the task which he has undertaken, and most satisfactorily accomplished. His high reputation in the veterinary art, and his qualifications as a practised writer on domestic animals, render him the very person for supplying an intelligent and interesting work on the diseases of the horse, which would be devoid of mere professional technicalities, whilst, at the same time, his skill as a draughtsman, and humour as a witty observer of life, enabled him to illustrate with his pencil what he had written with his pen. We advisedly say that 'The Illustrated Horse-Doctor' is the very best book of the kind which we know; and what gives it an especial charm is, that the author so thoroughly sympathises with the noble animal which he describes. Without pretending to go into any analysis of this valuable work, we at once pronounce it as scientific, yet intelligible; informing, yet highly amusing; acceptable to the profound horse-doctor, yet the work of all others for the bookshelves in every gentleman's sanctum; admirable in every way as a practical treatise on a very important subject, which it elevates altogether out of the region of quackery; and the tone is so learned, yet easy; so close to business, yet gentleman-like, that the dedication to Sir Benjamin seems as much in its proper place as if it faced a surgical work on the diseases or wounds of man. We give it our unqualified approbation and recommendation."—Era, July 15, 1860.

"Although the book will be mainly valued as an instructor to those who have to do with sick and suffering horses, all the causes of which are treated in detail of symptoms and treatment, yet it may with great advantage be studied by the owners of horses, who never think of treating them for disease—who, when their studs are ill, always call in the veterinary surgeon, and leave the patients in his hands; for in its pages they will find hints and advice, compliance with which is as much more important than the remedying disease as prevention is better than cure. Take the following as a sample of this:—'Above all, attend to the stabling, and let the box be large and well ventilated. Food is eaten but occasionally during the day; air is as essential as more substantial nutriment of life, and is consumed night and day. Food has to undergo a complicated change, and to travel before it joins the blood. Air is no sooner inhaled than it is immediately absorbed by the blood.' Are not these brief sentences full of importance to the keepers of horses?"—Western Morning News.

"We have no doubt that this valuable dictionary of the veterinary art will meet with signal success. We have before us a compendious history of all the diseases which horseflesh is heir to, and which man's abuse has bequeathed to it, with directions for treatment, and the necessary remedies, likewise the exposure of popular fallacies. . . . That horses suffer greatly from the ignorance of their riders more than from any intentional cruelty is very certain; but whatever the cause the effect is the same. A horse sinks exhausted in the field, after only a short run, and the rider is thunderstruck. Had he read Mr. Mayhew's book, and taken notice of the warning signal, of which, poor man, he was unaware, and put on the break, the catastrophe would not have been. It is in cases such as these, or where accidents happen in out of the way places, much useful information is to be gained by the general reader. . . . The work concludes with a brief summary, arranged in alphabetical order, of the subjects previously treated on, upon which great care has been bestowed, and the known ability of the author guarantees its worth. Hardly less attractive than the letter-press are the four hundred beautifully-executed woodcuts, which accompany it, and which explain clearly the meaning. In conclusion, we wish Mr. Mayhew the success his work deserves, and the public the good taste to appreciate it."—Sun, July 2, 1860.

"The great mass of them (the illustrations) are wonderfully faithful, and they are so varied and interesting that we would undertake to get rid of the most confirmed bore that ever pressed heavily on mankind for a good two hours by only handing him the book, and directing his attention to them. It is a well-known fact that grooms only remember the names of four or five diseases, and are sadly indiscriminate in their knowledge of symptoms. This book furnishes at once the bane and the antidote, as the drawings show the horse not only suffering from every kind of disease, but in the different stages of it, while the alphabetical summary at the end gives the cause, symptoms, and treatment of each."—Illustrated News, June 23, 1860.

"The diagnosis of every disease, no matter how simple or how complicated, is described in the most lucid manner, so that he who runs may read, and he who reads may understand. The cause and symptoms of suffering being ascertained, the next step naturally is to prescribe the most efficacious mode of treatment; and this difficult task Mr. Mayhew has achieved with admirable success—in no small degree attributable to the excellence of the numerous engravings with which he has illustrated his already perspicuous letter-press. That every member of the Veterinary College will be anxious to possess a copy of this new manual of his profession may be accepted as an undoubted fact: but we shall be strangely surprised if it do not find a conspicuous place on the shelves of every country gentleman, and of every intelligent farmer throughout merry England."—National Standard, June 23, 1860.

"We are inclined to think that this is about the very best book respecting the treatment of equine disease that ever has been written or published. The author is evidently well acquainted with the duties of his profession, and willing to give a world-wide extent to his own useful and practical experience, so that those who read may adopt his rules and regimen, and save that noble animal, whose use is one of the greatest blessings mankind enjoys, from much pain and suffering. In country districts, where the horse doctor cannot easily be summoned, this book will be invaluable; whilst, in more frequented localities, its use will always be found to be safe and judicious. The illustrations are clever, and fully serve the purpose for which they are annexed—to give certain indications of the nature of disease, and the readiest means of treatment."—Bell's Messenger, June 23, 1860.

"One of the most valuable works that we possess upon the subject, all the diseases to which the horse is liable being lucidly described, and the remedies stated very clearly. The wood engravings, which are numerous, well illustrate the text, and serve to complete the character of a work which all who possess a horse must desire to be master of also."—News of the World, June 24, 1860.

"The above is a volume of cyclopædic proportions written by a wise, philanthropic, and scientific man. The numerous illustrations—by the author himself—are simply marvellous for their power of delineation, and more so of expression; and none but a man who knew the structure of the animal, within and without, could have given these transcripts with the diagnosis of disease and illness, together with the (so to speak) physiognomy of pain and suffering, in so wonderful a manner. It is in every sense a perfect book, and calculated to be of essential benefit to 'man and horse.'"—Dispatch, June 24, 1860.

"Mr. Mayhew is not only master of his subject, but knows how to teach others to master it also. The volume describes all the diseases to which horses are exposed throughout the infinite variety of circumstances in which they are placed; traces each disease to its cause, as far as it can be ascertained, and points out the course of treatment which should be adopted in every case. In pursuing this clear and thoroughly practical method of inquiry and exposition, Mr. Mayhew draws in all the collateral lights that can be brought to bear upon his topic, and shows to what extent the calamities to which horseflesh is heir may be referred to the ignorance, neglect, and brutality of owners; making, upon the whole, a large percentage in the bills of mortality. . . . It will be gathered from what we have said, that the scope of this valuable and interesting publication is hardly expressed in the title. It is undoubtedly a Manual for the 'Horse-doctor,' and by far the most exhaustive that has ever appeared; but it is also a great deal more. The moral side of the question is as largely and sympathetically discussed as the medical, and the great mass of the public who know nothing about horses will derive lessons from the perusal of the work which they could not have anticipated."—Horn News.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

THE Calcutta Mail of the 8th of May brings very unsatisfactory intelligence as to the state of the indigo districts in Lower Bengal. The ryots are "out on strike," and those who are still willing to act faithfully by their European employers are subjected to terrorism and ill-treatment at the hands of the dishonest and refractory. The rioters had even ventured to attack a magistrate at the head of a party of military police who was proceeding to arrest the ringleaders of a gang that had grievously assaulted a Gomastah and a native Deputy Magistrate who had attempted to remonstrate with them on the illegality of their conduct. The police were compelled to fire in self-defence, and killed three men and wounded three others, two of the latter mortally. In another instance a party of coolies, quietly weeding a patch of ground belonging to a factory, were driven off by a body of armed men, who chased them into the river and speared one of them to death. The Sonthals, too, are again on the eve of fresh disturbances. According to the official account, the native land-owners have been raising their rents, while the Mahajuns have been putting on an additional pressure for the recovery of moneys advanced at extortionate rates. Not unfrequently the landlord and the money-lender is one and the same person, in which case the luckless peasant is little better than a serf bound to the soil. A body of military police has been despatched into the district; but it is clear that there must be something radically wrong in a system which is liable to such frequent and violent agitation.

The famine appears to have abated something of its extreme intensity, or, rather, the measures taken to relieve the suffering population have proved remarkably successful. From this country about fourteen lakhs have been remitted to India, which will now suffice to meet the requirements of the emergency. Much sickness and debility, of course, prevail where the greatest scarcity has been felt, and very many deaths have taken place, especially in the Meerut division; but on the whole the prospect is brighter than it has been for some time past, and the natives will very shortly be in a condition to furnish a new instance of national ingratitude.

A General Order on the subject of the amalgamation, which is given elsewhere, will recommend itself to the attention of our military readers. As some doubts appear to be entertained by officers now on furlough as to the channel through which application is to be made for admission to the staff corps of their respective presidencies, we may state that they must apply to their former commanding officer in India, who will forward their application to the Commander-in-Chief of the Presidency to which they belong. In our last issue a mishap occurred in "making up" Major Chesney's Retirement Scheme, but by attending to the paragraphs according to their numbers the sense will be easily preserved. The tabular statement in the third column of page 452 should have followed par. 26, and consequently have occupied the first column of that page.

The chief item of news from China relates to the arrival of the English and French ministers in Peking on the 26th of March. Their reception was all that could be desired. An interesting account of the progress of the French in Cochin China will be found in our columns.

The House of Commons last night was principally engaged in legislating for India. The new Loan Bill and the batch of Bills relating to the reconstitution of the Legislative Council, the establishment of High Courts of Judicature, and the opening up of the Civil Service, were all read a second time.

In our last number we took occasion to animadvert upon the statement ascribed to the Secretary of State for India, to the effect that, as the Government had made no use of the Delhi Prize Fund, no interest would be paid upon it. At the same time we expressed our belief that the twofold error contained in the above statement had probably originated with the reporter of the speech in question. It is now admitted that there was a misapprehension on the subject in one quarter or another. What Sir Charles Wood really intended to say was, that interest would be allowed on the prize specie, but not on the jewels. This is perfectly fair if the jewels have not been realised, but we are under the impression that they were converted into cash some time ago, and the amount added to the prize fund. If so, interest is as much due upon their value as upon any other portion of the fund. It would at least be very strange if no steps have yet been taken to dispose of these jewels, for otherwise how can it be known what is the real amount to be distributed? Indeed, on referring to the papers submitted to Parliament just twelve months ago, we find that the jewels were all sold previous to the 17th of June, 1859, at which time the only prize property that remained to be realised were twelve elephants, fifty horses, and some brass and iron ordnance, the value of which was estimated at 36,000 rupees. On the 12th March, 1860, the Under Secretary of State for India informed the Secretary to the Treasury that the Delhi Prize Fund amounted (in addition to the above sum) to Rs. 32,41,917-6-8, to which was to be added Rs. 2,80,000 as interest at the rate of 5 per cent., according to the Government Order of the 14th June, 1858. How absurd, then, was the statement ascribed to Sir Charles Wood. Reporters should really be more careful.

THE NEW COURTS AND THEIR JUDGES.

We have to congratulate the Government of Bengal on the appointments which they have made to the new Small Cause Courts in the agricultural districts and commercial cities of the Lower Provinces. There is no reason, however, why the reform should not have been carried out five months ago. The new Courts will be established at the following stations and sub-divisions, and will be presided over by the following judges, whose rates of salary we append:—

STATION.	JUDGE.	SALARY.
		Rs.
KISHNAGHUR, Sudder Station ...	Mr. C. Boulnois, Barrister ...	1,500
Khoosetah, Sub-division ...	Mr. O. Temple ...	1,000
Melherpore, ditto ...	Kaasheshur Mitter ...	700
Choochanganah, ditto ...	Mr. W. Wright ...	700
Santipore, ditto ...	Doorgapersand Ghose ...	700
Bongong, ditto ...	Mr. R. S. Thompson ...	1,000
JESSORE, Sudder Station ...	Mr. E. S. Dale, Barrister ...	1,500
Magorah, Sub-division ...	Mr. C. T. Davis ...	1,000
Jenidah, ditto ...	Mr. J. Weston ...	1,000
Kocharpore, ditto ...	Dwarkanauth Roy ...	700
Narail, ditto ...	Obhoy Coomar Dutt ...	700
Suburbs of Calcutta, including ...	Mr. E. Da Costa ...	1,000
Howrah ...	Mr. J. T. Bell ...	700
Dacca, City ...	Punchannund Banerjee ...	700
Moorshedabad, ditto ...	Sukhawut Hossein ...	700
Patna, ditto ...

The two barristers at the Sudder stations of Kishnaghur and Jessore will have purely Small Cause powers, and will, when necessary, act as co-judges with their colleagues in the sub-divisions, just as the junior judges of the Presidency Courts sit with the first judge once a week for the trial or revision of difficult cases.

Under this scheme the Government has had it in its power to reward a most deserving class of its own officers—the Principal Sudder Ameens—to whom all promotion has long been denied. Those of the first grade are raised from Rs. 600 to Rs. 1,000 a-month, and the sooner they acquire an instinct for swift and summary decisions in Small Causes, the better. This allows the Sudder Ameens of the second grade to rise from Rs. 400 to Rs. 700 a-month, and promotion in the lower ranks will thus be accelerated. Messrs. O. Temple and Davis will be required to pass in the vernacular languages within a year, though, we believe, they will be able to do so almost immediately. The two barristers must necessarily depend on interpreters, as in the Presidency Courts, but all the other judges are masters of the colloquial of the people.

The Courts are experimental, those in the cities being limited to one year. But if the judges do their own abilities and experience justice, and if they are supplied with a sufficient establishment, the scheme is one which will prove immediately successful and ultimately self-supporting if not profitable. The experiment, too, has a wider significance. Its results will test the value of English barristers as Mofussil judges, and afford some data as to the propriety of throwing open the Civil Service to barristers of five years' standing.—Friend of India.

MISCELLANEOUS.

PESHAWUR, April 30.—There is something serious brewing in the direction of Kohat; and, if I am not very much misinformed, our civil and military authorities are about holding a consultation as to the policy of beginning hostilities as early as possible against the hill-men. Sir Sydney Cotton returned yesterday rather unexpectedly to that station, which it was supposed he had left for the season, and the members of the staff have also delayed their departure for Murree. It is also rumoured that a wing of H.M.'s 7th royal fusiliers will be recalled for Nowshera. As I said at the time the regiment was ordered off, it was bad policy to denude Peshawur of European troops. Captain James, our commissioner, strenuously opposed the movement, and even carried his representation against it personally to the head of the Punjab Government; and it is now being perceived by people who required half-an-eye only to do so before, that it was all a mistake to replace a strong and highly efficient infantry regiment with a handful of European cavalry, which, like all European cavalry in India hot seasons, is of very little use, besides being especially unfitted for operations in a broken country like our own. The general's return to Peshawur, and the presence, by express order, of all the staff, divisional as well as station, is also attributed to the carrying out of the sepoy furlough, G.O. C.-in-C., among the 38rd and 58th N.I.; to the early development of the amalgamation scheme, and to the important modifications to be effected in the management of the barrack department. You see by all this that, instead of the promise of the usual hot weather otium cum dig, our people in high places will have their hands full of work for some time to come in this place of bad repute. A friend, writing from Rawul Pindee, informs me of the departure of a strong detachment of her Majesty's 81st regiment for Campbellpore on Saturday. This may be looked upon as another straw showing which way the wind is blowing. There is every likelihood, indeed, of a harassing dour turning up for the troops in this division during the summer months. The heat has become so intense that punkah-pulling comes into operation throughout the valley to-morrow; tatties are to follow as soon as they can be got ready. The prevalence of hot winds at an unusually early period of the season has led to a march being stolen upon those economists who seriously thought European soldiers could become salamanders at will.—Delhi Gazette.

LAHORE.—The heat here is much greater than usual at this season, and we must only hope that it portends a heavy fall of rain at the proper season. All feuds amongst the railways officials having happily ceased, the works are progressing with an activity that bodes some good, and it is even whispered that the line between this and Umritsur will be opened by Christmas. I fear it cannot be done, as the Umritsur station has not yet been commenced on. Our Lieutenant-governor proceeds to Peshawur before taking up his quarters at Murree for the hot season. There are several little matters to be settled there. Some of the hill tribes have again been up to their tricks, and they have consequently been blocked up; that is, prohibited their intercourse with the people of the plains, on whom they are altogether dependent for their supplies. They cannot, therefore, hold out very long. The Volunteer movement is languishing; the folks who promoted it are gone or going, and I much fear the zeal with which the scheme was taken up is cooling down towards zero. I hear of some valuable discoveries of sculptured figures in the Yoozooftan; I will let you know about them when I learn particulars.

PROLONGATION OF FURLOUGH.—We (Englishman) hear that staff officers now on leave at home on sick certificate will come in for the indulgence of the twenty months' furlough, instead of fifteen hitherto granted, without loss of staff appointments; and that the home authorities will grant them the prolongation, if applied for. This improvement in the furlough regulations cannot too soon be brought into general application, as the period of leave of absence hitherto granted, retaining staff appointments, has been injudiciously, and in many cases injuriously, short and insufficient for recovery.

OFFICIAL THANKS.—The Governor-general has thanked Lieut.-col. Hawkins and Capt. Huxham for their recent services to the State in the arrest of certain rebels, and sanctioned Rs. 4,000 to be sent to Brigadier Wheeler for distribution, as proposed by him.

INDUS TUNNEL.—The progress made with the Indus Tunnel during the month of April has been very satisfactory, the gallery having been extended ninety-two feet. The distance now reached from the East Bank is one hundred and sixty feet, and from the West two hundred and forty-five feet—the gallery being complete to within eight or ten feet of these points.

SHAJEHANPORE, April 29.—Brigadier Holdich, C.B., commanding Rohilcund Field Force, arrived yesterday, and having this morning inspected H.M.'s 88th Regiment, which was under arms on the regimental parade-ground in review order for that purpose, and of course had a very imposing appearance, with which he must have been well satisfied, proceeds on to Bareilly.

MR. F. A. VINCENT has been appointed Commissioner for the Suppression of Dacoity and Assistant-General Superintendent of Thuggee in Behar, on a salary of Rs. 1,000 per mensem. He is vested with the full powers of a magistrate in the districts of Behar Shahabad, Sarun, Champaran, Tirhoot, Patna, Monghyr, and Bhagalpore. The Government of the North-Western Provinces has also conferred on him like powers in the Ghazepore district.

SAFE ECONOMY.—It is pleasing to calculate the relief to the State exchequer that will be immediately caused by the reduction and remodelling of the native army, and indeed some of the items of economy that will be effected have such a florid hue of financial prosperity as to be almost incredible until tested by arithmetical calculation. Thus, for instance, the saving that will be made by officering the two hundred and ten new regiments on the irregular system, as compared with the cost of the same number of regiments of native infantry officered as heretofore, will be, in round numbers, £1,500,000 a-year. In this calculation is not included the saving that will be effected in the medical officering, which, in the Bengal army alone, supposing that all the regiments have assistant-surgeons posted to them, would amount to £20,000, as compared with the expense of having full surgeons posted to these corps. Any person wishing to verify these cheering calculations may do so in a few minutes; we have not space to go into figures.—Englishman

VOLUNTEERING FOR THE LINE.—A letter received from Mooltan, written by an officer of the 1st Bengal fusiliers, at that station, mentions that there is no doubt of the regiment taking general service and going over to H.M.'s line almost in a body; but that, on the other hand, but one officer of the corps has expressed his intention of making the same election; and he is not qualified, by having passed in the native language, to join the staff corps. A large number of officers of the 1st fusiliers are, however, on staff employ; and all these will go to the staff corps. The telegraphic information received by the Government confirms the impression conveyed in the letter above referred to, as it announces that the men of the 1st fusiliers are following the example of the regiments previously called upon to volunteer; and the 2nd fusiliers, at Roorkee, are also almost unanimously crossing the line into the royal service.

PRIZE MONEY.—We (Englishman) are happy to be able to announce to the officers and soldiers concerned in the distribution of the Delhi and Lucknow prize money, that their interests and claims have at length fallen into energetic hands, as a committee will immediately commence work at the Presidency, with the officer commanding the division at its head, and take up the complicated and laborious task of classifying the recipients and apportioning the amount claimable by the different ranks amongst the forces engaged at the two captured cities. Those who have waited so long for their hardly earned prize must not, however, be unreasonably impatient, and expect anything like an immediate settlement of their claims, but must rest satisfied with the assurance, based upon the characters of the President and members of the committee, that no avoidable delay will occur in bringing the distribution of the prize-money in question to a final settlement, and that they will receive their respective shares at as early a date as is possible.

DELHI, May 2.—I am glad to report a nice fall of rain, which has enabled us to breathe again; it came on with lightning and thunder last evening. Letters from Umballa also report a good fall on the previous evening. The air is now cool and agreeable; clouds are still about, and we have expectations of more rain before they clear off. A detachment of the 15th Punjab infantry on their way to Jullundur marched in the day before yesterday, and resumed their march this morning. Volunteering for the line is going on in the artillery stationed here. I fancy the bounty will tempt many. The sale of Major Skinner's effects took place yesterday. I do not think very high prices were realised, and the guns went very low. The Delhi Gazette press rains have been purchased by Mr. Courtenay for an hotel; it is well suited for the purpose, and likely to answer well.—Englishman.

THE TAJ MAHAL.—The Delhi Gazette calls attention to the state of the Taj at Agra. Our contemporary states that if it is neglected as at present, this splendid tomb will be a ruin in fifty years. The Gazette writes:—"But the whole place will be a ruin in fifty years, all except the Taj itself much sooner. Grass is growing between the slabs on the tessellated pavement. The slabs themselves are loosened, while weeds and incipient trees and vegetation of all kinds are making themselves seen in the crevices all over the domes of the minarets; weeds of this sort grow apace in India, and very soon reduce to absolute ruin a building like this. Again, the garden yesterday morning was in such an untidy state, it looked as if it had not been touched for a century. The fact is, under the present stupid arrangement, the males only care about getting as much profit as they can from the fruits and flowers, and they take care the birds don't interfere with their gains and carry off the former, and that is all they do care about. It is a perfect eyesore and quite distressing to see this beautiful place, that ought to be taken so much care of, and that might be made so invaluable to the public, let go to rack and ruin. Again, some indulge in a Gothic trick of "lighting up" the Taj as they call it. This ought never to be allowed. Now and then it might be permitted to light up the inside, but that should be done as seldom as possible, for every time it is done the smoke blackens the interior face of the building; but outside it is most mischievous, for the melted nitre and sulphur, or whatever they use, falls down on the stones, and when it is dug up, as it must be to get it off, great holes are chopped in the stones themselves, and the beautiful even surface totally destroyed. Any one can see the mischief that has been done by these blue lights on the tessellated platform below the terrace from which they are usually lit up."

THE SONTHALS.—The Deputy Commissioner at Nya Doomka has reported that he apprehends that the Sonthals may cause disturbances. Suits for enhancement of rents have been brought against them, and there has been pressure exercised by the Mahajuns. Some panic prevailed in that part of the country, and the prices of grain had fallen considerably. The Sonthals were holding meetings, and the Deputy Commissioner had sent for the head men; 100 of the military police were to be at Nya Doomka on the 4th May. The Commissioner of Burdwan went off for Beerbhoom on the 3rd. There are more military police available at Soorea, Beerbhoom, whence the 100 men had proceeded.

MUNICIPAL INSTITUTIONS.—Some official papers relative to the extent to which the people of India have availed themselves of municipal institutions have been published. It appears that a year ago the Secretary of State inquired how far Municipal Government had been carried out in Northern India, and from the papers which have appeared the result is far from satisfactory. While these institutions have been only partially introduced into Bengal, in the N.-W. and in the Punjab they have scarcely any existence. This state of things is due, in the opinion of the Governor-General, partly to the apathy of the local governments and their officers, and partly to the disinclination of the people themselves. The reason why the latter dislike the measure is attributed to distrust of any novelty, a non-understanding of the intentions of Government, distrust of the machinery proposed for raising and expending the taxes, and a want of appreciation of the object of municipal government itself. These obstacles to local self-government may, as the supreme government points out, be removed by carefully explaining what is intended, and above all by letting the people themselves choose the objects on which the money raised shall be expended. The local governments have been urged to take the matter in hand, and while taking care that personal influence is "discreetly and properly used," they are to spare no effort to create a wish for municipal administration.

Saltpetre, prices firm, with moderate sales. Rice, active for coarse descriptions. Lac Dye, but little disposition to buy. Shell Lac, more doing at a reduction on late prices. Linseed, operations very limited, pending larger supplies. Rapeseed, confined to local requirements. Hides, a good inquiry, and prices maintained. Jute, few buyers, but prices firm.

IMPORTS (Calcutta, May 8).—An Extraordinary Gazette dated 29th ult. directs that the duty to be in future levied on yarn and twist shall be reduced from ten to five per cent. ad valorem. We are not in receipt of more favourable accounts from the North-West, and there is no disposition apparent for business for Lower Bengal in cotton manufactures. Holders have shown more anxiety to reduce stocks than was apparent when we last wrote, and concessions would now be made which would then have been refused. Prices with few exceptions exhibit a decline. Transactions have been chiefly in the heavier weavings of Grey Shirtings, at a slight advance; the lighter cloths, and also Grey Madapollams and Jaconets, being in less request, and named at one anna a piece under late rates. Mule Twist and Yarn have been neglected; and prices of the former are two pie lower. The netal market still wears a quiet aspect.

MISCELLANEOUS.

MALABAR COAST.—April 19.—Since my last nothing of importance has occurred. We have been visited last week with a squall from N.E., which did some injury to the small craft. One vessel was wrecked; the others had to throw their cargoes overboard. Weather threatens to be squally again, cloudy, and thunder at a distance. Yesterday morning the Bombay Navigation Company's steamer Pioneer, with Brigadier W. C. McLeod on board, was signalled coming from Bombay, and at 2 p.m. the saluting battery announced the disembarkation of the Brigadier. Major-general J. Fitzgerald issued his farewell order yesterday, and relinquished the command of the provinces of Malabar and Canara to Brigadier W. C. McLeod. I regret to inform you that cholera is prevailing at Tellicherry.

THE QUININE YIELDING CINCHONAS.—On the 9th of April the Officiating Conservator of Forests reported the arrival, at Ootacamund, of Mr. Cross, with 463 cinchona plants. The following is an extract from an order of Government on this subject. It is dated the 16th April:—"It was directed in the Order of the 9th March, No. 552, that the site at the back of Government garden at Ootacamund should be abandoned, and also that a stop should be put to attempts to raise cinchona plants and seeds at the garden. In deference to the opinion expressed by Mr. Markham as well as by Mr. McIvor, the Government now modify that order, and give permission to continue the operations at the garden ravine site as well as to retain at the garden for the present the plants brought by Mr. Cross and sow the seeds, as the Neddihattum site is not ready, and does not contain the necessary appliances. The Governor in Council, however, desires that this last mentioned site, which Mr. Markham considers (paragraph 19) to be eminently well suited to the purpose, shall be prepared as soon as possible, and a portion of the plants transferred to it. The Government had hoped to engage the services of Mr. Cross to have immediate charge of this plantation, but from Captain Morgan's letter of the 9th April they learn that he is unwilling to remain in India. The Government have applied to the Secretary of State to send out Mr. Weir, and they will repeat the request, now it is found that Mr. Cross does not desire to remain. For the present the plantations will be confined to these two sites; but seeds should be distributed to those coffee planters in Wainad and Coorg who may wish to try and rear them. After the result of the experiment on the Neilgherries shall be known, the Government will be prepared to commence operations at the site selected in Coorg; which Mr. Markham (paragraph 21) agrees with Dr. Macpherson in regarding as well suited to a cinchona plantation. In accordance with Mr. Markham's recommendation (paragraph 33) the operations at both the sites now fixed on, viz., the Garden ravine and Neddiwattum, will be entrusted to Mr. Melvor. Captain Morgan will report after consulting with him, as to the arrangements to be made for the immediate superintendence of the operations at Neddiwattum, until the arrival of Mr. Weir or some other qualified gardener from England."

THE LATE UNCOVENANTED SERVICE EXAMINATION.—In consequence of irregularities which had taken place at the last examination of candidates for the uncovenanted service in the Krishna, Bellary, Nellore, Salem, South Arcot, Tanjore, North Canara, Madura, Tinnevely, and Madras districts, it was considered necessary that a re-examination of those who had passed should be held. This re-examination took place last November, and the result was reported to Government on the 12th of last April. From this it appears that out of 657 candidates who reappeared for examination, 423, or about 65 per cent., succeeded in passing. The examiners were allowed the following sums:—Rev. Mr. Rodgers, Rs. 450; Mr. J. Garrett, Rs. 400; Rev. D. Simpson, Rs. 400; Mr. L. Forbes, Rs. 250; and Mr. J. Winscom, Rs. 250.

THE INAM COMMISSION.—The following are extracts from Mr. Taylor's Report for the month of March last:—"The number of cases decided by the Deputy Collectors during the month was 9,860, which raises the total number of cases decided, from the commencement of the undertaking to the end of March, to 1,37,844. Besides these, 1,993 cases of village service inams were recorded during the month, making a total to the end of March of 28,903. The total number of titles confirmed to the end of March was 1,09,252, of which 15,108 were in respect of religious and charitable grants of a permanent character, 60,133 were personal grants enfranchised at the option of the inamdars, 31,759 were personal grants enfranchised compulsorily, and 2,252 were personal grants not enfranchised and confirmed on present tenures. The total number of title deeds issued up to the end of last month was 55,547. The total amount of quit-rent now payable to Government in addition to former Jodi is Rs. 1,77,900. The amount paid in redemption of the quit-rent is Rupees 8,743. The combined quit-rent annually payable to Government for the future upon personal inams confirmed to the holders, amounts to Rs. 2,95,456-4-0.

STATE OF THE SEASON IN TANJORE.—The following is a copy of a letter addressed by Mr. Cadel, Collector of Tanjore, to the Board of Revenue on the 20th April:—"I have the honour to report for the information of the Board that, since the commencement of the month the weather has been unusually hot and sultry, and that several heavy but partial falls of rain have taken place in several parts of the district; these falls have been accompanied by much thunder and lightning. The Tahsildar of Pattukottai further reports that, at the seaport of Adrampatnam on the 10th instant it blew most violently from the south-east for the space of nearly a quarter-of-an hour, and that during this short time about four hundred thatched houses and twenty tiled ones were almost entirely unroofed. The top of the gopuram of a small pagoda was also blown down, and also the heads of two or three hundred coconut-trees. Two boats lying on the shore were also raised by the wind to a considerable height and dashed to the ground with much violence. Some people were more or less injured, but fortunately no lives were lost. The area over which this atmospheric disturbance extended was very confined; but as in connection with similar occurrences, which may possibly have taken place elsewhere, it may be of interest, I have thought it of sufficient importance to bring the same to the notice of the Board."

SUPPLY OF STORES.—At the suggestion of the Accountant-General, (which suggestion was concurred in by the Military Auditor General and Controller of Military Finance) Government on the 12th April directed that the expenditure heretofore incurred by the Commissariat Department, on account of supplies for the Civil Department, should cease from the 1st May. In future civil officers are to obtain their own supplies in the market, charging for them in monthly contingent bills. The suggestion has been adopted experimentally. A copy of the resolution has been communicated to the Governments of India, Bombay, and Bengal, "in view to steps being taken by those Governments for the supply of stores to such of the Civil Departments subordinate to them as to obtain their supplies through the Madras Commissariat."

THE SWINGING FESTIVAL.—On the 2nd May, Mr. Fisher, the magistrate of North Canara, addressed the following letter to Government:—"With reference to the Orders of Government under date the 2nd January, 1857, I have the honour to report that swinging and passing through fire have been less prevalent on the whole during the past year (1860) than usual, but the decrease though considerable, is not such as to show that those practices are really dying out, but rather that they increase or decrease in different localities according to the circumstances of the year, vows being of course more frequently made when fever, small-pox, or other diseases, have been prevalent than during healthy seasons. The upper classes in this district are to say the least, apathetic and unconcerned, and certainly exercise no influence in suppressing these exhibitions. It seems to me that the authority of the magistrate might be exercised with advantage when these festivals are held in places of public resort, in thoroughfares and on high roads. The Home Government have, I am aware, approved of the non-employment of direct power to put down these abominable practices, but it is not, perhaps, generally known that the roads and main streets of towns are made use of at these swinging festivals for the passage of cars on which the men are suspended. My experience leads me to doubt the extinction of these objectionable rites as long as the disapproval of Government is not marked and unmistakable, whilst there is every reason to believe that direct interference in preventing these exhibitions on public roads or in thoroughfares would be silently acquiesced in, and tend to put an early and complete stop to practices which probably have the more of the support of the temple wardens and other influential persons than Government suppose. In some instances direct payment is made from the Pagoda funds to people willing to exhibit themselves, and it need not be feared that direct interference would hinder the performance of vows made, as the vow is equally kept, it is believed, if an individual finds it inconvenient to submit to the rite, and substitutes a bunch of plaintains in his stead." Government on the 19th agreed with Mr. Fisher "that the magistrate should prohibit these rites being held in places of public resort, in thoroughfares and on high roads. The cars connected with these observances should not be allowed to be drawn through the roads and principal streets of towns."

IMMIGRATION INTO BRITISH BURMAH.—The population of British Burmah has received an unexpected addition. According to the Rangoon Times of the 3rd April, it appears that authentic information had been received of the immigration of a large number of Shans into British territory:—"They have come, it is said, from one of the adjacent States, which was nominally subject to the Government of Burmah. For some reason, it appears, a Burmese force was sent against these people, probably to enforce the payment of revenue, when they attempted to resist, and coercion being employed, they abandoned their houses and lands, and fled for protection into Pegu. They are reported to number some ten thousand souls of all ages. A "Tsaubwa," or hereditary chief, is in company with them. A deputation from these interesting people, reached Toun-goo, during the visit to that station, of the Chief Commissioner. They made known their complaints against the Burmese authorities, and asked for permission to form a settlement a short distance from the Civil station of Toungoo. Encouragement has been extended to them to settle there, land has been assigned them for that purpose, and they have been assured of the protection of the British Government from the attack of all enemies. This large body of refugees will prove a valuable accession to the population of that district. In their own country they are usually a most peaceable and industrious class of people. Like all other Asiatic races who have made some advancement towards civilisation, they follow agricultural pursuits, raise ponies and cattle for export, manufacture the celebrated lacquered ware, and many of them annually make trading visits to exchange their goods, either in Pegu or Tenasserim.

HONG KONG, May 1.—The London mail of March 11th arrived here on the 22nd ultimo.

The past fortnight is somewhat barren in news of interest. Perhaps the most important fact which has come to our knowledge since the departure of last mail is the establishment of the British and French Embassies in Peking. The flags of both nations were hoisted in the capital on the 26th of March. On the 25th of March M. de Bourboulon, attended by an escort of gendarmes and artillery, and accompanied by Count Klecsowsky and Baron de Meritans, his secretaries of legation, entered Peking, and took up his residence in the Tartar city, near that of the Russian ambassador. On the following day Mr. Bruce, attended by an escort of Sikh cavalry, and accompanied by Lieut.-colonel Neale, his secretary, and Messrs. St. Clair and Wyndham, attachés of legation, entered the capital, and took up his residence in the neighbourhood of the other ambassadors. These proceedings appeared to be quietly viewed by the populace, and there was every prospect of the foreign representatives meeting with a satisfactory reception. M. de Bourboulon's introduction to Prince Kung was to take place on the following day; Mr. Bruce had already been introduced to that dignitary. It has been resolved by the Chinese Government to open schools in Peking for instruction in the English tongue, and it is proposed to send a few Chinese youths to England to acquire our language. By the last advices, there is no mention made of the Emperor's return to the capital, although that event is believed to be close at hand. It appears that only a very few of the fine collection of books in the Imperial Library of the Summer Palace have been saved by Mr. Wade. Fortunately for themselves, the Chinese have three or four duplicates of this collection, so that in burning the Summer Palace Library the loss has chiefly been our own.

Still later accounts inform us that, at Peking, affairs were going on satisfactorily. On the 2nd April Mr. Bruce visited Prince Kung at the Office for Foreign Affairs, and introduced to his Imperial Highness the various officers attached to the Legation. The interview passed off very cordially, and conversation was confined to subjects of a non-political nature. Kweiliang, Wang-si-ang, Hang Ki, and Tsun-lun, were the other officials present at the interview. The Prince of Kung returned Mr. Bruce's visit on the 4th April, at the Leang Koon-foo, a Yamun in the Tartar city, where her Majesty's Legation is established.

The return of the Emperor was officially announced for the first week in April. It was intimated in the Gazette that he would remain in Peking only ten days, and then return for the summer to Je-Ho. A decree has since been issued, to the effect that, as the Imperial health continues so indifferent, his Majesty has determined not to return to Peking until the warm weather is over, which will be about the end of September.

We are informed that the opening of our first peaceful intercourse with the Chinese in their capital has been inaugurated by some inconsiderate act of a Mr. de Fonblanque, a commissariat officer, who went up to Peking in charge of provisions for the Legation escort. It appears that this officer, accompanied by a commissariat interpreter that he had brought up with him from Tien-tsin, had, in his desire to "do Peking and its environs," proceeded so much in the spirit of a cockney tourist as to have afforded the local authorities an opportunity of making an official complaint, and that on grounds, we regret to hear, so reasonable, that Mr. Bruce has directed the brigadier commanding at Tien-tsin to refrain for the present from granting leave to any more officers to visit Peking—a measure that, notwithstanding the dissatisfaction it has given in quarters affected by it, every credit is due to Mr. Bruce for his promptness in adopting, and which we view to be a precaution very essential to the success of a judicious and conciliatory line of policy, that we are glad to learn he has adopted, and from which, if carried out in full integrity, we have every reason to believe very important and satisfactory results may be anticipated.

To the overbearing manners and, too frequently, insolent demeanour, of officers of our military and naval services, may in no small degree be traced that disfavour with which the English character is viewed by Oriental nations generally; and it is therefore with much satisfaction we hail any one having the straightforwardness to acknowledge it, and courage to check it, when that, as it rarely does, lies in his power.

In Japan matters appear to be perfectly quiet.

From Tien-tsin there is no news of any importance. The forces stationed there are in good health, and enjoying the return of spring.

The accounts from Shanghai have reference to the fluctuations of the Imperial and rebel causes. The most important move which the insurgents have recently made is in the direction of Hankow, which is, indeed, reported to be in their hands. It is now supposed that they intend to take the various places which we have marked out as ports, with a view, of course, to reaping all the profit that can be derived from foreign trade. It is not quite so certain whether their mode of treating the commerce expected to take root at the ports which we have chosen may be exactly such an interference as we would desire, and this recent movement on the part of the rebels is scarcely to us a subject of gratulation. Still, by our last arrangement with them, we have left ourselves no great power to check this or any other similar movement. There has been some more fighting in the district of the Yangtze, but, as usual, without any marked result. The following extract from the North China Herald shows the inability of the Imperialist forces to do anything decisive:—

"In whatever direction we turn, the incapacity of the Imperialist troops to recover even their lost ground, when opposition is made, is becoming daily more apparent. An expedition is sent to re-take the Tung-ting-shan; on the way they encounter a body of rebel soldiers, an engagement ensues in which the commander is drowned, whereon his thousand or so of soldiers immediately give up further thoughts of fighting, disperse themselves over the country, and become a greater scourge to the inhabitants than even the visits of the rebels would be.

"The large town of Hai-yen-tien, on the coast between this and Ningpo, has been re-occupied by the Imperialists. The town has not been seriously damaged, but considerable numbers of the fishermen living there have been killed. Towns in the above district that are still in the hands of the rebels have to contribute 1,000 dolrs. a-month as taxes."

Mercantile enterprise in China has not been slow in taking advantage of the new trading facilities consequent upon the opening up of the Yang-tze-kiang. We have noticed the entry upon those waters of the Yang-tze, the Governor-General, and other vessels of less note; from the same paper as above we quote the following notice of another steamer having taken its place upon the river:—

"The steamer Fire Dart, belonging to Messrs. Augustine Heard and Co., which had been daily expected, arrived on the 10th inst. She is built on the style of the river boats in America, than which nothing can be better adapted for the navigation of the Yang-tze-kiang. The accommodations are excellent, and any opinions that can yet be formed of her are certainly very favourable, but on account of the foggy weather, experienced on her passage up, she had no opportunity of showing what speed she could attain. She is spoken of by scientific American papers as being a very creditable production of the builder, Mr. Thomas Collyer of New York. Her dimensions are—length on deck from the fore part of stern post (above spar deck), 200 ft.; breadth of beam (moulded), 30 ft.; depth of hold, 11 ft.; tonnage, 650 tons. She is fitted with one vertical beam condensing engine. Diameter of cylinder, 46 in.; length of stroke, 12 ft.; diameter of paddles over floats, 28 ft.; length of floats, 8 ft.; and depth, 2 ft."

The above will show what class of vessel is the best fitted for the trade of the Yang-tze river; as far as our information extends on the subject of the navigation of these waters, we should say that vessels such as the Fire Dart would be found most suitable.

The annual races have just been celebrated at Shanghai; the meeting was a very good one.

Some fifty or sixty runaway sailors had been found in the Imperialists' camp and brought down in gunboats to Shanghai. They were instantly given up by the mandarins on demand of the senior naval officer.

From Fuhchau the only intelligence is the loss of the Japan, a fine new vessel—on her first voyage, in fact—which, as she was dropping down the river with a full cargo of tea (840,250 lbs.) for London, struck upon a rock, and sunk before any but the upper two tiers of cargo could be got out. She had part of the teas saved from the Spartan, lost in a similar manner in the river a few weeks ago.

The gunboat Grasshopper had been out after pirates, of which she had sunk six junks, burnt five, and towed two up to Fuhchau.

From Swatow we learn that the gunboat Cockchafer has been out on a raid of a very questionable character, under the direction of A-Hok, the noted coolie broker. A-Hok, it seems, a short time since had a junk plundered by some people from a village near Namoa, and has been endeavouring through the Mandarin of the district, a personal friend, to obtain indemnity from the village to which the robbers belonged. They were at first disposed to treat with him, fearing his threats to bring down upon them the British Consul and the gunboat. They would not however pay all he demanded, and an application was made for the gunboat to come to the assistance of the mandarins, who were to compel the villagers to submit to A-Hok's terms. The gunboat, it would appear, was to aid only by her presence, and in capturing the junks that might attempt an escape from the village; but the brave Imperialists, expected her to do all the fighting, or bear at least the brunt of the battle. The villagers, however, were not to be thus coerced. The attack failed; the boats sent out by the Cockchafer to lead the mandarin junks into action were fired upon; they returned the fire, killing, it is said, one old woman; but not being permitted to fire upon the town, the gunboat has returned to Double Island to await farther instructions from the Admiral—which we hope will be in the shape of a sharp reprimand, though the Pearl and a couple of gunboats, we hear, have been sent up the coast for fear of accident.

Meanwhile, the effect of this foolish raid has been to give the people courage, and to exasperate them still more. The villagers were at first inclined to compromise, and offered, we believe, to hand over the pirates, and to pay a fair compensation for the stolen goods; but now they refuse altogether to come to terms, and the matter is likely to prove in its effects upon foreigners, worse even than the Weazel affair of last year. Really we hope to see a summary stop put to these silly mischievous intermeddlings, which are fast bringing upon us the hatred of the people all along the coast.

From Macao we learn that a plan has been formed—likely to be successful—for the establishment of a school for the study of Portuguese and English, along with rudimentary tuition in Latin.

In Hong Kong, during the past fortnight, we have had a marked increase of temperature, attended by a good deal of rain and thunder, and this change has rendered sickness rather prevalent. The best part of the Kow-loong cession, about which there has been much said in behalf of three contending claimants, has been granted to the naval authorities in preference to the civil and military. The navy had made their application much earlier than the others. The Chief Justice is still at Shanghai, recruiting his health, and the business of the Supreme Court is in arrear; but he was to leave for this on the 8th May. A Regatta Club has been instituted here. An extraordinary number of watches and articles of jewellery have been stolen from various private houses during the last month; one notorious offender is in custody.

Our letter from Manila will be found elsewhere; sickness is somewhat prevalent there just now.

From Saigon the latest dates continue to record the success of the French arms. The fortress of Mit-ho is, in all probability, taken by this time. Owing to the operations of war having closed the country, the price of rice had risen enormously in the port.—Overland China Mail.

CEYLON.

COLOMBO, May 16.—“The times are out of joint.” Instead of enjoying the storms and rains of the South-West Monsoon, we have suffered for the last fortnight from the most scorching heat. This abnormal weather has, of course, been most favourable for the curing and shipping of coffee, of which all concerned have availed themselves to the utmost. During the fortnight five ships have sailed with coffee—namely, plantation, 25,168 cwt., and native, 6,553; in all, 31,721 cwt.

Besides a very considerable quantity of coffee on board the vessels in the roadstead, there is still much in the Colombo Stores, and a good deal in Kandy and on the way from the interior to the shipping port. Indeed, the opinion of good authorities now is, that, as far as plantation kind is concerned, we shall this season, after all the predictions to the contrary, and notwithstanding the undoubted failures in the lower districts, ship the very largest crop that has ever left Ceylon. At present the comparison with the previous three seasons stands thus:—Plantation, 315,000 cwt.; against, 317,000—283,000 and 297,000. Native, 88,000 cwt.; against, 135,000—160,000 and 123,000. Total, 403,000 cwt.; against, 453,000—444,000 and 420,000.

The prospects for next crop are rather more encouraging. If rain falls copiously within the next fortnight, without the accompaniment of too much wind, all will be well with most of the districts.

The total shipments of cocoa-nut oil are still much above the average; but the unfavourable news from home, and the scarcity and dearness of cocoa-nuts and copperah here, cannot but check exports and reduce the comparative figure.

Of local incident there is not much to record. The Governor is still at Kandy, paying occasional visits to the coffee districts; holding meetings of the Executive Council, and, doubtless, preparing for the Legislative Session in July, when much business of an important nature, including the Railway and Tramway Questions, will have to be considered. His Excellency, in common with the community, mourns the loss of an experienced and honest member of the Executive Council, in the death of Mr. Caulfield. To our obituary we have to add the name of Capt. Ellis, of the 50th, who has died after little more than two months' residence in Ceylon—a victim to fever, which has been rife and fatal this season.

The community here has been much shocked, but scarcely surprised to hear of the insanity of Archdeacon Mathias. The Church of England in the colony wants now both a bishop and an archdeacon. We fancy a good many agree with us that there would be no fear of “religion going to the dogs,” as General Bainbridge put it, if neither office were filled up. But as the colony must have, and must pay for such dignitaries, let us hope that good men may be chosen. As the Rev. B. Boake is already Principal of Queen's College (with which St. Thomas' College could easily be united) as well as Chaplain of Trinity Church, why not make him bishop and archdeacon, adding a couple of hundreds for travelling expenses to the thousand he already draws.—Colombo Overland Observer.

THE STRAITS.

SAIGON (COCHIN CHINA).—The sanitary state of the French troops is represented to be satisfactory, though a great deal of fever and bowel complaints existed among those who formed part of the expedition to Mi-tho. This was ascribed to the marshes round that town, through which they had to pass, and to the bad quality of the water. Several deaths had occurred,—that of Capt. Allisy, an engineer officer of great promise, was particularly regretted. Cholera was said to prevail to a limited extent.

The affair at Mi-tho consisted of attacks on barriers with which the “Anamites,” as the French call them, had staked the rivers to the number of three or four, and which, judging from drawings, were excessively formidable, and had they been well-defended, would have caused serious loss. The guns protecting them were wretchedly served, and they were broken through, one after the other, with trifling loss. On the approach of the victorious forces, the enemy withdrew, partly in junks, and partly on foot, after setting fire to the rice magazines, containing a large quantity of grain, which has been variously estimated as worth from 400,000 dols. to 1,000,000 dols. By last accounts the fire had been put out, and a quantity of rice will, it is expected, be saved, but it will only be fit for distilling purposes.

Admiral Page had returned from Mi-tho on the 22nd March, and proceeded to Ben-hoa, the next point to be attacked, in all probability. Admiral Charner and the main part of the expedition arrived at Saigon on the morning of the 26th. An expedition to Hue in June was talked of, and it is said that General Montauban will take the chief command. General Vassoigne had quite recovered from the wound received in the battle of the 24th February. The lines of Ki-oia, which were then attacked, show the great skill in the art of fortification possessed by the Cochin Chinese. They are of great extent and form an oblong, with deep ditches, parapets, strongly constructed forts at intervals, defended by pitfalls, ranjows, and chevaux-de-frise. The interior line of defence was even more strongly defended than the exterior one, while forts placed outside the defences rendered the approach a matter of no small difficulty. About 10,000 men were massed in and about the works. The French attacked in flank and rear, and carried the whole work after two hours and a-half hard fighting, the resistance being desperate until the interior of the works was gained, when the enemy fled in confusion. The conduct of the Tagal infantry is highly spoken of by the French—out of 190 present, 47 were put hors de combat—the losses of the French were quite in proportion, and amounted to upwards of 400 killed and wounded.

Since then the Anamese soldiers have disappeared, and the French have established military posts in the interior, where the greatest tranquillity prevails. The inhabitants are everywhere returning, and have begun to cultivate the fields. A trip in the interior was undertaken by the writer, who, in company with an officer, rode upwards of twelve miles into the country, without arms of any description. Oot-mun, a village of some importance was visited; and judging from the crowded state of the market-place, the population there or thereabouts must have numbered about 2,000. A couple of miles beyond was the fort of Rachtra. That of Tonkiow was also visited. The country traversed was flat, gradually rising towards the interior, and showing evidences of having once been cultivated, but beyond a few paddy fields, patches of tobacco, sugar-cane, sere and vegetables, it appears to have been abandoned. This is not astonishing, considering that for the last two years and a half, the country has been in a state of war, and the inhabitants pressed into service of the Mandarins, and forced to fight or dig at the fortifications.

The French are now doing their best to restore order; mayors are being appointed in the villages, and they are, where possible, re-nominations of the former incumbents, a measure which gives general satisfaction to the people. What may be the ultimate system of government to which the country will be submitted, is merely conjectured, but, it is generally believed, that free trade will be the order of the day, though whether it will be carried out, according to our views of its integrity, remains to be seen.

The inhabitants of the China town (which is up a creek or branch of the river, and three miles from Saigon), who had, at one time, fled in numbers, in dread of the French, have now for the most part returned, and the river side shows evident signs of commercial activity. It is, however, a most filthy spot, especially that part which lies on the south or west bank, and invites cholera, fever and pestilence. The French will have something to do to make the whole decently clean and healthy.

The public works, in as far as they go, reflect great credit on the French. Shut up, as they were, with a weak force during the greater part of 1860, the enemy keeping them constantly on the alert, and running their trenches to within 300 yards of their outposts, making night attacks occasionally, threatening their communications, and picking off all who stirred from within the entrenchments, they, with the spade or trowel in one hand and sword or rifle in the other, have built hospitals for 200 men and barracks for a large number, constructed strong fortifications, and made several miles of excellent roads; while, since they have taken possession of the interior, roads have been made or improved, bridges made or repaired, the interior of the forts occupied, drained, and the rice magazines, large sheds like those at Tanglin, adapted for the troops. The Anamese work readily, and are paid regularly, and all officers of whatever corps, horse or foot, sailors or marines, are expected to assist to the best of their ability in carrying out public works.

The copek is the only current money, silver bars and other coins which do exist, being excessively scarce. The copek is made of zinc, and is very thin and brittle, 600 of them form a string, three strings and 420 copeks were considered worth a dollar at the end of April. The rate of exchange varies often. The inhabitants of Saigon and its environs are, in general, dirty and ugly, idle, drunken, and addicted to opium and gambling—at least, so say those who have long resided among them. All business is transacted by the Chinese, who act as middlemen. The residences or houses inhabited by the French officers and European merchants are miserable indeed, being those lately occupied by wealthy Anamese. The time given to these to return and claim their property having expired, it is probable that the French will now make sales of ground in or near the town, when doubtless more comfortable dwellings will be built.

The province of Saigon, which, it is reported, the French intend to occupy, is divided into six subdivisions, named after their chief towns, or perhaps vice versa, say, Ben-hoa to the east of Saigon, Saigon, Mi-tho, Vigne-long, An-gian-Tin, and Yeng Tin. Benhoa is situated, as it were, on a branch of the Saigon River, Mi-tho, Vigne-long and An-gian-Tin, on the great river of Cambodia or its branches, and Yeng-tin on the west coast, a little south of Kampoot. The country near Benhoa is hilly, not to say mountainous, and covered with magnificent forests. The soil is said to be admirably adapted for the cultivation of coffee and sugar-cane. Thence to Saigon and to the westward extend large and fertile plains, plentifully watered by numerous streams, mostly deep; they are already well known for their prolific yield of rice. Sugar, tobacco, and various eastern products are also grown there. Under proper management, there is no reason why, in a few years, the province of Saigon should not be one of the richest in the East, as it combines almost every possible advantage. The far interior, which has not yet been explored, the only French station being at Teinghin, about 100 miles north of Saigon, is said to abound in minerals, tin, copper, zinc, &c.

The country is but sparsely inhabited at present, but good government, securing life and property, would soon attract large numbers of emigrants from surrounding States.

By the French steamer Echo, which arrived at Singapore on the 19th April from Saigon, intelligence was received that the whole of the strongly fortified town of Mitho had fallen into the hands of the French.—Overland Singapore Free Press.

CENTRAL ASIA.

March 21.—The Ameer was in the durbar when a man came and informed him that his (the Ameer's) father-in-law, Taj Mohamed Khan, the son of Ghoolam Mohamed Khan, Mookhtear, who had been suffering for the last few days with a pain in his stomach, had departed this life. The moment the Ameer heard of this he broke up the durbar, and, accompanied by some Khans and sirdars, went to Ghoolam Mohamed Khan's house. At the request of Ghoolam Mohamed, the body of the deceased was ordered to be taken on an elephant to Cabool, to be buried there. The wife of the Ameer also took leave, and accompanied her father's funeral.—March 22.—No durbar to-day. The carpet of mourning, as customary, was spread in the house of Ghoolam Mohamed Khan, where the Ameer remained all the day, receiving the chiefs and Khans, who attended to read the Futha prayer.—March 23.—This day being the Teeja (the third day after the death) of the late Taj Mohamed, the Ameer and all the Sirdars went to read the Futha, and after the ceremony was over, they all took their breakfast at Ghoolam Mohamed's. In the evening the Ameer took Ghoolam Mohamed Khan to the Royal stable, where all the Sirdars attended to console Ghoolam Mohamed. Sirdar Sooltan Mohamed Khan, having applied for leave to go to Lughman to realise the revenue, was told by the Ameer to make all possible haste and to join the camp at Jugdhuluk. It is reported that the Ameer will leave for Cabool on the 20th Ramzan, (2nd April).—March 24.—Shah Mird Khan, the Hakim of Jellalabad, was ordered to get three hundred camels and mules for the camp of Shere Allee Khan and other Sirdars. Seventy-five camels were received, out of which sixty were ordered to be sent to Sirdar Shere Allee Khan, and fifteen to the mother of the late Ukbur Khan.—March 25.—The following news was received from Cabool. Sirdar Wully Mohamed Khan, the Governor of Cabool, having been informed that the corn-sellers had hidden their corn and were every day raising the price, had sent for them and asked the reason of their raising the price of the grain. On this the corn-sellers had replied that as no supplies had been received from Ghuzneen, and they had none in their shops, they were obliged to sell at the prices they were buying from the others. At first Wully Mohamed advised them not to be stubborn, and to sell their corn which they had kept hidden, but having been told in reply that they had none in their houses he went to the Munde and got all the locks of the houses of the corn-sellers broken open, and had the corn stored in one place. He ordered some of the corn-sellers to be well beaten, and the ears of the others to be nailed, a kind of torturing punishment. He had a proclamation issued in the city that wheat flour was to be sold at three Cabool seers, half charuk less, for the rupee, and that if any one was to sell the grain at a higher price than the fixed rate he was to be fined five hundred rupees. The Ameer was very much pleased when he heard of this, and said in the durbar, "that until such measures as these were taken with the corn-sellers, they would never care about the Hakim, and thus the poor people would starve."—March 26.—An urzee was received from Sirdar Mohamed Ameen Khan from Gurrishk near Kandahar, in which he informed the Ameer that on his arrival at Gurrishk he had sent two battalions of infantry, five hundred sowars, three hundred Jazaelchees, and four guns under Sirdar Mohamed Shurreef Khan towards Furrah and he (Ameen Khan) himself was collecting the Mulkeas (mercenary) people at that place. As soon as sufficient people had been collected he would send them to Shurreef Khan's camp. Meer Ufzul Khan was daily receiving troops from Heerat, added Mohamed Ameer Khan. Looking at Sirdar Shere Allee, the Ameer handed over the letter, and desired him to leave for Cabool as soon as possible.—March 27.—Thirty-five camels, brought by Shah Mird Khan, were ordered to be sent to Shere Allee Khan. This afternoon Sirdar Shere Allee Khan ordered his tents to be pitched at Sooltanpoorah, near Balabaugh, on the Cabool road. It is ascertained by Furramooz, the Koomaidan of Shere Allee Khan, that his master, with all his troops, would leave for Cabool during the next three days, as he was in great hurry to march to Kandahar.—March 29.—A durbar was held in the garden of Mohamed Ukbur Khan. Sirdar Shere Allee Khan reported to the Ameer that his son Sirdar Mohamed Allee Khan having properly settled matters at Bakheel, had returned to Jellalabad, and was now anxious to go to Cabool. He is to wait here till further orders, was the Ameer's reply. A number of Zemeendars of Kasimabad, with two wounded men on charpoys (cots), waited on the Ameer, and on their being asked what was the matter, they said that last night they were suddenly attacked by some of the villagers, who had killed one and wounded two of their men. Shah Mird Khan was ordered to accompany the Zemeendars to the village, which is situated that side of the river on the North of Jellalabad, and to bring the criminals.—March 30.—Ubdoolrazak Khan Moostoufee informed the Ameer that on his examining the accounts of the late contractor of Pishboolak, who had been appointed by Nazir Naem Khan, he finds that he has been embezzling four thousand rupees in four years. The Ameer sent for the Nazir in the durbar and spoke to him as follows:—"When one of your men in four years has embezzled four thousand rupees, how much money must you have made in ten years when you had the charge of the contractorships of Cabool, Jellalabad and Ghizneen?" "I am not responsible for the contractors, they will answer for themselves, and if found guilty of fraud they will suffer for it," replied the Nazir. The late contractor of Pishboolak was ordered to be kept under guard until he had cleared the accounts, and his property to be confiscated. The Moostoufee is ordered by Shere Allee Khan to examine the accounts of all the late contractors of the Nazir.—March 31.—Ghoolam Mohamed Khan, Mookhtear, was desired by the Ameer to inform the Khans and Sirdars that he, the Ameer, would not leave for Cabool until after the Eed, as there were many things to be settled as yet at Jellalabad. Accordingly Shere Allee Khan and the other Sirdars gave warning to their different troops, who were very much disheartened at hearing this, because all having families in Cabool were looking forward to spending the festival at that place. About 12 o'clock Shah Mird Khan, twelve criminals, returned from Kasimabad, and presented them to the Ameer. After enquiring into the case the Ameer fined each of them with two hundred rupees, to be paid within ten days. Besides this, five hundred rupees was ordered to be fined and realised from the whole village, and to be paid to the family of the killed man.

April 1.—The following news was received by the Ameer from Bookhara. It is about four months since the old Kotwal and the Topekashashee (the Chief of the Artillery) of Bookhara having been discharged by the King, as advised by his courtiers, had gone to Oorgunge to lay out their spare money in merchandise. A few days ago they with their goods had returned to Bookhara as merchants. One day the King had gone to read some prayer at his father's tomb, and on his returning to the Palace about 8 o'clock at night, as he was dismounting from his horse, he was fired at by the old Kotwal and the Artillery officer who had kept themselves hidden somewhere close to the door of the Palace. Luckily the pistol balls missed the King, and hit the slave of the King who was standing by. The slave died on the spot. The Kotwal and Artillery Chief were taken prisoners then and there. They were tried and asked if they had been bribed by any one to commit this foul deed, but receiving no satisfactory reply the King ordered them to be cut into four pieces and hung on the four gates of the city. Since then whenever the King comes out of the Palace, no one is allowed to pass in the street from the Urruk to the Nasheemun gates, and the slaves are always keeping a sharp look out when the King goes out anywhere.—April 2.—Sirdar Wully Mohamed Khan's urzee was received from Cabool, in which he informed the Ameer that the escort which had accompanied the Ambassador of the Bookhara Court had returned to Cabool, and that the Hafizjee, the son of Meer Waeez, was expecting the Ameer to join him in the prayer on the Eed. Everything was selling at a reasonable price in Cabool, since he had paid off the corn sellers. The Ameer looked at Ghoolam Mohamed, and said he was very anxious to hear about the Ambassador's safe arrival in Toorkistan, and now he was glad to learn that he had passed the Cabool boundary.—April 3.—An urzee was received from Sirdar Sooltan Mohamed Khan from Lughman, in which he told the Ameer that in consequence of his wife and children being unwell in Cabool, and the Eed being close at hand, he had thought it advisable to go direct to Cabool instead of first going to Jellalabad and then marching with the camp. The moment the Ameer perused the Urzee, he got in a rage and ordered a letter to be written to the Sirdar, directing him not to go to Cabool but come to Jellalabad. On this the Kossid who had brought the letter said that the morning he had left Lughman for Jellalabad, Sooltan Mohamed had left for Cabool. The Ameer got more annoyed, and said that since he had been passing the winter in Jellalabad, Sooltan Mohamed had never remained with him as the other Sirdars do. The Ameer ordered the letter to be cancelled and the durbar to be broken up.—April 4.—This morning the Ameer, accompanied by Sirdars Ubdoolroof Khan and Ghoolam Mohamed, went to pay their visit to Shahee Khan, a hermit at Jellalabad, and remained there till evening. A servant of Moolla Mohamed Ameen, the merchant, having stolen five hundred rupees from his master's box, went to the gaming-house and began to gamble. When Moolla Mohamed returned to the shop and opened the box he found the cash short of five hundred rupees. He went to the place where they were gambling and got him apprehended. All the merchants of Jellalabad went to Shere Allee Khan and complained that until gambling was prohibited in Jellalabad there would be no end to the thefts. Sirdar Shere Allee Khan ordered some of the gamblers to be brought, and after asking them a few questions ordered the ears of four or five to be cut off. Proclamation was ordered to be made in the city that if any one was caught gambling his ears were to be cut off.—Delhi Gazette.

Passage Money—Medical Officers.

Fort William, May 3rd.—No. 387 of 1861.—The following paragraphs of a military letter from the Right Honble. the Secretary of State for India, No. 432, of the 17th November, 1860, are published for general information :—

"Your letter of the 12th August last, No. 202, reports that, as passage money has hitherto been calculated according to rank, it appears to your Govt. that the medical officers, whose relative rank has been raised under the provisions of the late royal warrants, are entitled to receive passage money according to their increased rank; and that you have issued instructions to that effect. You further state that the rates of passage allowance fixed by the late Court of Directors might now be revised, with advantage, and suggested by the officiating military Auditor-General; and you request the instructions of H.M.'s Govt. on the subject.

2. "The decision at which you have arrived with respect to the rates of passage allowance of H.M.'s British and Indian medical officers appears to be in conformity with the intention of the royal warrants applicable to them. Under this decision a staff or regimental assistant surgeon, after six years' full-pay service, when entitled by the regulations to passage-money, will receive the rate fixed for a captain, and so on in the higher grades of relative rank.

5. "With respect to your observation regarding the expediency of revising the present rates of passage-money, I have to inform you that I have been for some time in correspondence with the Secretary of State for War, with the view of assimilating the rates of passage allowance applicable to India, and the rules under which they are drawn, with those authorised by the War-office regulation. The result will be hereafter reported to you."

Lucknow Prize Money.

No. 388 of 1861.—The following paragraph of a military letter from the Right Hon. the Secretary of State for India, No. 135 of March 3, 1861, is published in G.O.'s:—

"A question having arisen as to the interpretation to be put on that part of her Majesty's warrant (quoted in the margin*), authorising the distribution of the property captured at Lucknow as prize, I have determined, in pursuance of the authority vested in me by the royal warrant, that the force which advanced from Allahabad under Major-general Havelock, the forces of Clyde, which, under Major-general Windham, held Cawnpore, and that which brought off the beleaguered garrison of Lucknow immediately between Chinhatt and the recovery of Lucknow, from the rebels, as well as the force under Lord Clyde present at the final operations, and that which held Cawnpore during such final operations, are entitled to share in the prize money."

Strength of the Native Army.

(From the Calcutta Gazette Extra, May 4.)

Fort William, Mil. Dept., May 3, 1861.—The following resolution is published for general information and guidance:—

Mil. Dept., May 3, 1861.—Resolution.—H.E. the Gov. gen. in Council has had under his consideration the strength of native infantry which it may be necessary hereafter to keep up in India, and the amount of reductions which it may in consequence be possible to make in existing establishments.

2. When the orders lately issued by the Govt. of India for relieving the army from numerous civil guards and other non-military duties are fully carried out, a strength of 600 privates per regt. will be sufficient for all ordinary duties of a native infantry battalion in time of peace, and H.E. in Council is therefore pleased to fix this number as the ordinary establishment of all native infantry regts., regular and irregular, throughout India, and to direct that all such corps be reduced to that strength with the least practicable delay.

3. Every native infantry regt. in India will hereafter consist of eight companies, with the following uniform establishment:—

1 subadar, 1 jemadar, 5 havildars, 5 naicks, 2 drummers, and 75 privates.

* "And whereas our said commissioners have recommended unto us to grant all the said boot for the use of the C. in C. officers and men belonging to our naval and military forces, and the European and Indian troops of the East India Company, which took active part in the operations leading to the aforesaid capture of the said city of Lucknow and its dependencies, including all the troops at first entrenched in the said residency, the said forces under the command of the late Major-general Sir Henry Havelock, bart., kt., commander of the Most Hon. Military Order of the Bath, the force which held Cawnpore during the final operations against Lucknow and the said force under the personal command of the said Baron Clyde of Lucknow, which took part in the said capture of the said city of Lucknow and its dependencies, or in the operations which contributed thereto, which operations commenced with the first affair at Chinhatt and the investment of the residency by the rebels on or about the 29th of June, 1857, and ended with the final expulsion of the rebels, and the capture of the said city of Lucknow on or about the 21st of March, 1858."

Making a total per regt. of eight companies of 712 of all ranks.

4. Each regt. in Bengal will have a non-effective native staff, composed of one subadar-major, a drill havildar, a drill naick, eight colour havildars, eight pay havildars, one drum major, and one fife major.

5. In Madras and Bombay the establishment of native staff will remain as at present.

6. Corps having honorary colours will retain the extra native officers, and all other classes of native officers and non-commissioned officers not above specified will, for the future, be modified to meet in Bengal regts. the reduced establishment.

7. Further orders will be issued regarding non-combatant establishments.

8. The returns shew the number of regiments or battalions into which the native infantry of India is divided, to have been in August last, as given in the margin.

9. Of the twenty-eight regiments,* returned as under the Government of India, the Pegu light infantry and one of the Nagpore regiments are under orders for disbandment.

10. The Mairwarra and Mhair local battalions will be dealt with as police, and estimated for accordingly. Regarding the remaining regiments under the Government of India, separate orders will be issued. In the meantime the strength and establishment of each regiment will be reduced to the uniform standard above laid down for the native infantry throughout India.

11. There are at present four regiments of Sikh infantry and seven of Punjab infantry (1st to 6th and 25th), and the corps of guides, under the immediate orders of the Punjab Government. It is not the present intention of the Gov. gen. in Council to remove these corps from under the orders of the Punjab Government, but they will be borne on the rolls of the Bengal army, retaining their distinguishing designation as "Sikh Regiments," "Punjab Regiments," and "Guides."

12. Of the sixty-three regts. of native infantry as detailed below† under H.E. the C. in C. in India, fifteen belong to the regular native infantry of the Bengal army. Of these, three, viz., the 4th,

13. Fifteen regts as named below* are either extra or irregular battalions of the former Bengal army, or have lately been embodied from men of that army who had shown exemplary devotion to their duty, or are local regts. which have been transferred to the army of Bengal under H.E. the C. in C. Of these the Nusseree battalion will be broken up.

14. The Kamroop regt., the Arracan local batt. and the Bhaugulpore Hill Rangers will be transferred to the police, and will be either broken up, or absorbed into the general police, as may be found best in the opinion of the local gov't. The 22nd Gwalior infantry has already been broken up.

15. Of the regts. of the Punjab infantry, the 10th, 12th, 13th, and 14th will be broken up.

16. Eleven regts. consist of the levies named below.† These corps were raised during the years 1857 and 1858.

17. Of the whole 63 regts. under H.E. the C. in C. in India, as explained above, it is required, by the financial necessities of the State, that reduction should be made of such corps as can possibly be dispensed with.

18. The Gov. gen. in Council therefore directs that, in addition to the regts. already named above, as to be transferred to the police, or broken up, three more, viz., the Cawnpore, Moradabad, and Kemaon levies shall be disbanded, and that all the men of the regts. to be broken up, who are not discharged under the general rules, which will be hereafter laid down, shall be transferred as supernumeraries to other regts. of native infantry.

19. There will remain forty-eight regts. of native infantry under H.E. the C. in C.

20. The Bengal native infantry will then consist of the following regts., viz.:—

and 3 extra regts. of native inf., of 10 companies each, with a total established strength of 62,775 men. These have since been reduced to the normal establishment of 8 companies each, with a total established strength on Nov. 1, 1860, of 36,348 men, being a reduction of 104 companies, and 26,437 men, including supernumeraries, who are in course of absorption. The effective strength, on Nov. 1 last, was under 40,000 men, so that an actual reduction has already been effected to the extent of, at least, 22,775 men.

22. In the Bombay army the native infantry regts. have been already reduced from ten to eight companies, and the number of privates to 600 per regt.; three extra battalions, and the 3rd Belooch batt., organised in 1857-58, have been reduced, and the veteran batt. abolished; but the number of regts. is still one in excess of what it was before the year 1857, owing to the organisation of two regts. of Jacob's rifles, and of two regts. (the 30th and 31st) organised in June, 1858, in place of the 21st and 27th regts., disbanded.

23. H.E. the G. in Council resolves that regts. such as H.E. the Gov. in Council of Bombay may select shall now be broken up, the officers and men composing them being disposed of, with the least possible prejudice to their individual interests, as the Hon. the Gov. in Council and H.E. the C. in C. at Bombay may think best for the public service.

24. On the 1st Aug., 1859, the strength of the native infantry of the Bombay army was 30,158 non-commissioned rank and file; but under the operation of this Order, as well as by the previous action of the Govt. of Bombay, it will be reduced to 21,360 of all ranks, making a total reduction of upwards of 8,000 men of all ranks.

25. The establishments of native infantry in the Indian army, the estimates for which will be submitted in the military department, will henceforward be as follows:—

	Battalions.
Under the Government of India .....	12
Bengal army (including all Sikh and Punjab regts. ....	60
Madras army .....	52
Pegu sapper battalion (temporary) ...	1
Bombay army.....	30
Total .....	155

Making a total strength of about 1,10,400 men of all ranks, native officers included, against a total of 1,74,237 of all ranks on the 1st October, 1859, showing a reduction of more than 68,800 men of all ranks, and saving fully equal to one crore of rupees, or one million sterling.

26. The following rules are laid down for disposing of the supernumeraries, who will remain under the above orders:—

In each army H.E. the C. in C. is authorised to discharge all inefficient men, who may not be recommended for transfer to the Pension Establishment, as well as all able-bodied men under four years' service, who have no special claim for good service in the field. To the above, as to able-bodied men of above four years' service, who may wish to have their discharge, gratuities will be allowed according to the following scale:—

Men of under 3 years' service, 3 months' pay.
" from 3 to 6 " " " 6 "
" " 6 to 8 " " " 9 "

transfers of commissioned, non-commissioned officers, and privates being made so as to equalise the strength of the regts. maintained. In addition to the above, a gratuity not exceeding two months' pay will be granted as allowance in proportion to the distance to be travelled to the men's homes, under rules which will be laid down by H.E. the C. in C. Men transferred to the police will be allowed to reckon in the constabulary their service in the line. All native commissioned, non-commissioned officers, and privates, who have served the regulated period for pension, if physically unfit for active field service, may be recommended for transfer to the pension establishment.

27. As regards the 73rd N.I., and the 10th and 14th Punjab inf., it will be in the discretion of H.E. the C. in C. to withhold recommendations of gratuities from any men who, by their misconduct, have proved themselves unworthy of them.

28. For the special purpose of carrying out this Order, the invaliding committees will be composed of two medical officers and one regimental officer, if possible a field officer, to be selected by H.E. the C. in C.

29. After the equalisation of the strength of corps, and the pensioning and discharge of men ordered to be so dealt with, supernumeraries will be absorbed by vacancies; but, to prevent stagnation in promotion, one step will be given for every two vacancies in each of the grades of naick, havildar, jamadar, and subadar, pending the absorption of supernumeraries.

30. The Military Finance Department are charged with the duty of issuing such subsidiary orders as the above arrangements, in their financial effect, may call for.

31. THE LABUAN COAL COMPANY have issued a report preparatory to their first annual meeting on Wednesday, the 12th. It states that all the preliminary operations of the enterprise have thus far been conducted with complete success, that the raising and sale of coal will probably be found to have commenced within two or three months of the date of the last advices, and that the recent treaties between this country and China and Japan hold out the prospect of great additional advantages for the company.

EXCESS OF CIVILIANS.—The Bombay Gazette reports a superabundance of young Civil servants belonging to the Bombay establishment in excess of what is actually needed for the requirements of the Presidency. The last Civil List published shows that during the last year six young civilians were transferred to the Government of India for employment in the Bengal Presidency. There are thirteen supernumerary third assistants to collectors and five engaged in studying the vernacular languages. There are nineteen senior and junior civil servants on leave, and when the thirteen whose leave will expire during the present year return to duty, there will, our contemporary supposes, be some little difficulty in providing those who are acting with suitable employment.

PARSEE ENTERPRISE.—In mentioning that the next mail steamer from Bombay was to convey several Parsee gentlemen to England, the Bombay Gazette says:—"Two or three of them are wealthy merchants who undertake the voyage for the benefit of their health; two proceed as agents of the spinning factories here to make purchases of machinery, while others go as assistants in the firm of Messrs. Cama & Co. One of these gentlemen, who has already visited England twice before, carries with him on this occasion his two young sons for the purpose of having them educated in the London University. There are at present upwards of fifty Parsees in England, two or three of whom intend to settle there permanently. If the same enterprising spirit is persevered in, we have little doubt that in a dozen years hence this number will be greatly increased, and there will then be as many Parsee firms in London and Liverpool as there are now in Hong Kong and Shanghai."

THE TIMES ON INDIA.

THERE is a propriety in the Times newspaper changing its opinions. The circular progression of its views recalls the course of nature, and we trace an analogy to the changes of the moon, or the alternations of the seasons. This must necessarily be so, for the Times is the organ of first impressions, the expositor of questions in their first aspects: and its hasty, but often brilliant, deductions have the same chance of being right that all deductions from imperfect premises and questionable data have—but nothing more.

Whenever the course of events generates a new topic, the more intellectual Clubs ring with oral leaders. Half-a-dozen loud, able men bawl out, in discordant chorus, positive views, which need only grammar, polish, and a slight modification of tautology to be vigorous articles. The Times is essentially the reproduction, in a less fatiguing form, of what the clever men about town say on subjects before they have had time to give them a fair consideration. As opinions so formed must, in the nature of things, be at least as often wrong as right, consistency would be unattainable, even if it were to be desired. We regret, therefore, to observe that on the subject of India the Times has, for the last six months, been engaged in some desperate efforts to maintain a consistent view. We the more regret it, because that view appears to us to be grounded on misapprehensions of a less excusable nature than those which form the basis of reasonings on topics where facts are not so near at hand, or where circumstances are more complicated and difficult to understand. If the Times considers itself bound to support the opinions which are enunciated by its Calcutta correspondent, such conduct is the more heroic as it involves the complete contradiction and subversion of the views advocated, in the same columns, by Mr. W. H. Russell, which in their time, too, received endorsement from the leading articles of the period. With our belief, however, that tergiversation is, so to speak, the very soul of a public organ in the position of the leading journal, we make no objection to the circumstance that Dr. Russell has been entirely thrown overboard, and merely grumble to find the new views have been entertained with undue pertinacity, and submit, simply on the ground of certi fines, that the time has come for a change. As a matter, too, of literary taste, the present line of argument on Indian matters is too headstrong and coarse to admit of the use of those delicate tools, whose workmanship causes intellectual delight, and pleases even when it does not persuade.

The arrival of Mr. Laing's budget called forth, on Thursday, an article from the Times, which seems to us to reach the climax of bad feeling based on, and buttressed with, disregard of facts and misapplication of the lessons which the past history of India affords. It must be understood that, previously to the consideration of any of the problems connected with our rule in the East, the Times requires the admission of the axiom, that if a country pays it is well governed, and if it does not pay, there must be mal-administration somewhere or other. Therefore we are required at the outset to acknowledge that the whole Indian system must have been rotten, because there was an unnecessary expenditure of four millions. The whole course of this rottenness, we are next requested to believe, has been the predominance of a class of men, who, with a certain uprightness and honour of a feeble sort, have been so inadequate to the occasion, that they have allowed insolvency to creep on and bankruptcy to threaten, without any suggestion of a remedy,—further than the vague idea that the resources of the country ought, in some sort of way, to be developed. But it is conveniently forgotten that, during the reign of the Company, and under no other than civilian administration, the finances of India were so flourishing that it required a disastrous war in Afghanistan—a war inaugurated by an English statesman in England, against the advice of the local authorities—to abolish the surplus, and to introduce all those financial shifts and contrivances which have so lately been bearing their bitter fruit. The Times is very complimentary to the memory of Mr. Wilson, and to the reputation of Mr. Laing, at the expense of everybody connected with the local administration. We ever entertained the highest respect for Mr. Wilson. He was a great and good man. The period has not passed from our recollection, when the Times habitually treated him as a tiresome, second-rate man of arithmetic; and this attempt to "fawn its late repentance on the dead," must be only viewed as a strategic move. But the question naturally occurs, why was Mr. Wilson sent out from England to endeavour to remedy temporary financial difficulties in India? Simply for this reason;—that the nobleman appointed by England to preside over the dependency, after having allowed every department of his Government to drift into senseless expenses, would not move a finger, proprio motu, to effect reductions, to raise taxes, or in any way to avert the embarrassments which his loose administration was daily and hourly erecting. To sneer at the Nabobs, and to say they were unable to do anything towards improving financial prospects, when they never had an opportunity of attempting, or even proposing reforms, is ungenerous and unjust. It must be distinctly understood that Mr. Wilson was sent out, not because the Nabob administration had been tried and found wanting, but because certain political difficulties rendered it impossible to recall Lord Canning, and despatches seemed utterly powerless to stimulate him to exertion. It is rather curious that of the two measures proposed by Mr. Wilson,—the Income-tax and the Currency measures,—one has been practically abandoned, and the other practically emasculated.

It would be an insult to the memory of Mr. Wilson to include amongst his measures the civil and military reductions. They were the first, obvious, peremptory, reform, and so eagerly was this reform taken up by the officials to whom its details were entrusted, that the reductions proposed by them far exceeded what Mr. Wilson had anticipated. When Mr. Laing has had an opportunity of originating or elaborating any new proposal, we feel sure that the result will not be unworthy of his antecedents. At present, as his only work has been announcing the reductions, whose proposal was nearly complete when he landed in Calcutta, we should suppose he would repudiate the tinsel coronal with which the Times proposes to surround his brow. Not content with depreciating, to the worst of its ability, the Services by whom administration is conducted in India, the Times takes an especial delight in attempting to show that an irreconcilable feud exists between the Nabobs and independent settlers in the country.

We are not the apologists for the East India Company. They did, it is perfectly true, view with jealousy, many years ago, what they considered the advances of interlopers. In Pitt's time Manchester rose to a man against the mere shadow of the advent of Free Trade, and a little before commercial London had quivered with exasperation at the bare idea of Jews holding landed property. But the attempt to prove that because a system radically rotten has come to ruin in Bengal, because justice—to hold the name of justice—must for once oppose itself to commerce, that therefore a jealousy, long laid in its grave, has stalked out again in a disastrous resurrection, and is alive and working its evil way between classes whose interests are essentially the same—this attempt, we say, is in its nature so unworthy, that it would require more literary talent than the Indian writer in the Times possesses to recommend it to the honourable and the generous, and a far more delicate misrepresentation of past events than could be within the reach of any one who remains under the conception that Lord George Bentinck was once Governor General of India.

THE THREE INDIAN BILLS.

ON Thursday week Sir Charles Wood obtained leave to bring in three Bills, all of them important ones, and bearing directly on the administration of India. The first Bill is for the abolition of the present Legislative Council, and the substitution of a new one quite differently constituted. The second is for the amalgamation of the Supreme and Sudder Courts, and the third has for its object to render legal certain appointments which have, for some years past, been habitually made in India, though in contravention, as it appears, of the letter of the Act of Parliament, and to sanction such appointments for the future. With regard to the existing Legislative Council, though there certainly is some anomaly in its position towards the Governor-general and the Indian Secretary, we must say that Sir Charles Wood, in his speech on Thursday, entirely failed to point it out, and gave as reasons for the necessity of abolishing the Council, objections to its working which seem to us puerile and untenable. He tried to lead the House to believe that the Legislative Council had degenerated into a debating society, and scornfully complained that it mimicked the functions of a Parliament.

That there has been freedom of speech we admit; but that legislation has been postponed for aimless discussion, which is clearly what Sir Charles leaves to be inferred, is quite contrary to fact. Any one who has watched the proceedings of the Legislative Council from its first institution will bear testimony to the very large and important amount of solid work which has been got through; and when Sir Charles Wood talks with so much complacency of the labours of the Law Commission in this country, it must be understood that the results of those labours had to be thoroughly altered and adapted in Calcutta. Indeed, the Legislative Council could long ago have drawn up a civil code had it not been for the one the Law Commission has so long promised, but which has not as yet seen the light. Then, when Sir Charles talks with contempt of the Council as aiming at becoming a "little parliament," he forgets that that is precisely what he formerly said it was to be. India was not ripe for a great parliament, but still it could have an assembly in some degree independent of the Government, and in some degree representing the wants and wishes of different parts of the country; in short, a "little parliament"—that is the true definition of his original scheme. The real anomaly Sir Charles entirely overlooked. The true absurdity is that the body which raises the taxes has no control over the expenditure. The Council has the trouble, the responsibility, and the odium of imposing an Income-tax, and Sir Charles Wood the fun of giving half-a-million to a native prince. The simple truth is, the existence of a Council, even so moderately independent as that which is in its last hours at Calcutta, is incompatible with the autocracy which the Indian Secretary wishes to establish for himself. The Council opposed Sir Charles Wood's haughty self-will, and he has crushed it. So there is henceforward to be no Council bearing any semblance of separate life and independent thought, but a puppet council; wooden figures to be moved by strings, pulled at intervals by the Governor-general.

When the Government wish to make laws, they are to add members to the regular Executive Council. These additional members are to be not less than six, or more than twelve, and half the number non-officials; and these, when appointed, are to attend all meetings within one year. They are not apparently to have any salary; it is merely stated that when the Governor-general wants this kind of councillors, he can summon them.

"Why, so can I; or so can any man;
But will they come, when you do call for them?"

That seems to us the difficulty. There are no spare gentlemen in India, of ample leisure, and a legislative turn of mind. Every one is fully engaged, and the commercial men would deem it a dubious honour, even had they leisure, to form members of a Council for assisting the Governor-general to have his own way. If a suitable native could be found, he might be persuaded to join for the honour of the thing, but we certainly expect no scramble for the seats. In addition to this occasional council, there are to be local councils at Madras and Bombay, and perhaps at Allahabad and La-bore, for what may be termed parochial legislation, and this we consider a wise and useful measure. The idea of amalgamating the Supreme and Sudder Courts has long been entertained, and the only wonder is that it has not been carried out long ago.

As Macaulay's Code has at last been got into working shape, there will be no difficulty about criminal law, but the junction of the Courts renders more imperative than ever the completion of the Civil Code. Lord Dalhousie grew so weary of waiting for the home authorities, that he actually had a Civil Code drawn up in India. It is known in that country as the Mills and Harington Code, and has been highly spoken of by lawyers. It was ordered, completed, and forgotten; and Sir Charles Wood talks of the propriety of a new commission for drawing up a Civil Code as if the matter was one which had just occurred to him, and India had not been waiting in painful expectation for many years past. There is mention made that the judges of the amalgamated courts are to travel on circuit through the country. This will be convenient, if it be found practicable; but as these new plans are as yet merely given in outline, it is very difficult to judge how far the peculiar circumstances of India may affect them when the attempt to carry them out is made.

The third Bill—that for throwing open the Civil Service—naturally creates considerable interest amongst the class whose prospects it is supposed to affect. In the Punjab and Oude, and other non-regulation provinces, military men have long shared with civilians the offices which belong by law only to the latter. The result has been favourable. It is clearly right that what has worked well should be legalized, and for the future we think the fears of the Civil Service are exaggerated. The great alarm seems to be least barristers should usurp the higher legal appointments. But really judging by the difficulty which is well known to exist, in inducing good men to accept the puisne judgeships at Bombay and Madras, the apprehension that there will be any rush of lawyers to India appears unfounded. Nepotism and jobbery are, of course, most to be watched against, and the restrictions seem sufficient to defeat the grosser attempts. A previous residence in India of seven years, and a knowledge of the language are declared necessary before a person can obtain an appointment, and this will prevent a Governor-general taking out the least respectable of his nephews and cousins, and providing them with snug berths out of the reach of their creditors. Indeed, some members seemed to consider that the three-fold sanction of the Governor-general, the Secretary of State, and the Indian Council (which is necessary for their direct appointment), would not only prevent jobbery, but secure an excellent selection. We should like to be convinced of this.

We were glad to observe Sir James Ferguson speaking on the subject of India. He is a young member, who undoubtedly will distinguish himself, and his connection with the great pro-consul seems to give him a claim to be heard on these matters. It is the misfortune of India that the topic is always handed over in the House of Commons to second rate and tiresome members. This renders an Indian question a bore, and leads to hasty and unconsidered legislation. Macaulay made Clive and Warren Hastings the brightest essays in his series; we cannot see why a speaker in Parliament should not be able to invest our Eastern Empire with some of the interest that hangs round the Syrian question, or renders endurable a long account of how people cannot go to church in Spain.

IMPERIAL PARLIAMENT.

RE-CONSTITUTION OF LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL.

Sir C. WOOD, in moving for leave to introduce a Bill to amend in certain respects the constitution of the Council of the Governor-general of India, and to authorise making laws and regulations for the presidencies of Fort St. George and Bombay, and for other parts of her Majesty's Indian territories, observed that the motion was one of the greatest possible importance to our Indian empire. After noticing, by way of preface, the difficulties encountered in legislating for India, in the feeling of disgust and antagonism among the different races of its population, distinct in habits, character, and language, and the dangers attending a rash step, which disposed him, he said, to err, if he did err, on the side of caution, he gave a history of the legislative power in India from the year 1773, referring to the opinions expressed by distinguished members of the Civil Service on the working of the legislative system, and to the changes made in recent times in the composition of the Council. The Legislative Council, as at present constituted, he said, had failed, and he proceeded to consider the notions which prevailed in India as to the remedy, and the proposals made with that object, varying from a transference of the power of legislation to the Executive Government on one hand to a representative system on the other. He then explained in detail the measure he proposed to introduce, which nearly, he observed, carried out a scheme contained in a despatch of Lord Canning, and which had been carefully considered and approved by his Council. Its main features were an increase of the number of members of the legislative body, one half to be not members of the Government, either Europeans or natives, with power to pass laws and regulations for the whole of India. He proposed to give to Madras and Bombay power to make laws and regulations on local subjects only, half the members of the Councils of each to consist in like manner of Europeans or natives not in the service of the Government. The Governor-general would further be empowered to constitute similar councils in the North-West Provinces, as well as in other provinces of India, and power would be given to the Governor-general, in cases of emergency, to act on his own authority.

After a few words from Mr. H. SEYMOUR, Colonel SYKES, and Mr. W. EWART, leave was given to bring in the Bill.

HIGH COURTS OF JUDICATURE.

Sir C. WOOD then moved for leave to introduce a Bill for establishing High Courts of Judicature in India. The object of the measure was, he said, the consolidation or fusion of the Supreme Courts, now consisting of Judges supplied from the English bar, and the Sudder Courts, which were Courts of Appeal from the Courts in the provinces. He proposed that the new Courts should consist of a certain proportion of English barristers, a certain number of Civil servants, and that native Judges should be admissible as members. The Governor-general would be authorised to send English Judges of this Supreme Court on circuit through the provinces.

Leave was given to bring in the Bill.

EXTENSION OF CIVIL SERVICE.

Sir CHARLES WOOD moved for leave to introduce a third Bill, to confirm and legalize certain appointments in India, which had been made, he said, contrary to law, and to amend the law concerning the Civil Service there, by providing that, with certain exceptions, such appointments might be made, notwithstanding the restrictions of the old law. He enumerated a variety of cases in which the letter of the law had been violated by the appointment of uncovenanted servants to offices which could be legally filled only by covenanted servants. These appointments, he observed, did not call for censure, but rather merited approbation, and he read the opinions of a series of Governors of India, who had strongly urged the admission of natives to offices of higher responsibility, and a larger employment of uncovenanted agency in India. This Bill, therefore, after confirming the appointments already made, would remove the practical bar which prevented the admission of the uncovenanted service to certain offices, by authorizing, under special circumstances, and with restrictions and precautions, the employment of uncovenanted servants in the high offices now confined by law to covenanted officers. This measure, he added, had met with the general concurrence of his Council.

After some remarks by Mr. WHITESIDE, on behalf of the Civil Service of India,

Mr. AYRTON expressed a hope that a door would not be opened to jobbing, and that some guarantee would be given that the appointments should be given to natives of India, and not to adventurers from England.

Lord STANLEY said, as to the first part of the Bill, the House, he thought, had hardly any choice. The only question was, whether they should maintain the existing exclusive right of the Civil Service. He had come to the conclusion that this was impossible. There were two dangers incident to the proposed change; one, that of diminishing the value of the Civil Service appointments; the other, the opportunity it would afford to the authorities in India to introduce into the service their own private connections. He believed that the restrictions and safeguards would obviate the last, and that compensations would be found to countervail the former risk.

Colonel SYKES, Mr. BAILLIE, Mr. H. SEYMOUR, Sir J. FERGUSSON, and Mr. VANSITTART made cursory observations upon the object of the Bill, and leave was ultimately given for its introduction.

INDIA LOAN BILL.

INDIAN COMMISSIONS.

Major GAVIN asked the Secretary of State for India whether first commissions in the regiments transferred from the local army of India to the Crown are obtainable with or without purchase, or by competitive examination?

Sir C. WOOD said that the first commissions would be available in the first instance for providing for the demands of the sons of officers in the Indian service, to whom all the privileges they had formerly enjoyed were now continued. The general question of entering the Queen's army was a different matter, on which he was not now prepared to give an opinion.

EAST INDIA (COVENANTED SERVICE).

Mr. VANSITTART moved for an address to the Crown for copies of the report of a Special Committee of the Council of India to the Secretary of State upon the subject of opening, upon certain conditions, the Covenanted Service of India; with dissents, if any, therefrom. The hon. member said the answer given the previous evening by the right hon. baronet the Secretary of State for India was most unsatisfactory, and unless he could obtain a response of a more assuring character he should be reluctantly compelled to divide the House. The right hon. baronet had not offered any opposition to the production of papers relating to two of the Bills, and the information he now sought had reference to the third, which was regarded out of doors as the most important of these measures.

Sir G. C. LEWIS felt it his duty to resist the motion, which he hoped would not be pressed by the hon. member, who had always acted in a spirit of perfect fairness and candour. The papers which he had formerly produced were despatches from the Governor-General and the Governor of Madras; but those now asked for were reports of the Council to the Secretary of State for India, which partook of a confidential character.

Sir M. FARQUHAR supported the motion, thinking it most important that the House should have before it every paper bearing on that subject.

Sir G. C. LEWIS opposed the motion, as the House was not entitled by the Act to have the dissents of a Committee of the Council laid before it.

Mr. S. FITZGERALD regarded the production of the papers as essential for the guidance of the House in forming its opinion on the Bill for regulating the Indian Civil Service.

Mr. AYRTON did not think it was usual or proper to seek to compel the Secretary of State to give those papers.

Sir J. FERGUSSON thought the House was bound to insist on their production.

The House divided, when the numbers were:—

Ayes . . . . . 28

Noes . . . . . 43

Majority against the motion . . . —15

HOUSE OF LORDS.—JUNE 10.

DELHI PRIZE MONEY.

Lord BERNERS asked if any correspondence would be produced between the Indian Government and the prize agents in reference to the payment of interest due on the Delhi prize money? He understood there had been some misconception as to the statement of the Secretary of State for India on the point in the other House?

Earl DE GREY and RUPON said, no correspondence had passed between the Indian Government and the agents of a nature to be laid before the House. But it appeared there had been some misconception with regard either to the question put on the subject the other day in the House of Commons, or the answer of the Secretary of State. The right hon. gentleman was represented as saying that interest would not be paid on the Delhi prize money; the fact was that interest would be paid on money, but not on the value of jewels.

ROYAL EAST INDIAN MILITARY COLLEGE, ADDISCOMBE.

FINAL CLOSE OF THE COLLEGE.

On Friday, the 7th, the half-yearly meeting and visit of the East India Council took place at the Royal Military College at Addiscombe, the customary examination of the gentlemen cadets in the different branches of learning having previously taken place by a Committee of the Council of Military Education. There was a more than usually numerous attendance, arising probably from the fact, that with this day's proceedings the doors of the College would be permanently closed, never again to be opened to those desirous of emulating the deeds of some of the most distinguished officers whose names are emblazoned in Indian history, who received their education at Addiscombe College. The Right Hon. Sir Charles Wood, Secretary of State for India; Sir J. W. Hogg, and several other members of the Council for India, were present, besides a large body of visitors, among whom were several ladies of distinction.

At twelve o'clock the gentlemen cadets proceeded to the hall, and shortly afterwards Sir Charles Wood took the chair, supported by Major-General Sir Frederick Abbott, the Lieutenant-Governor, and the members of the Council.

Lieutenant-General KNOLLYS, chairman of the Council of Military Education, read the following report:—

"The Council of Military Education have the honour to forward, for the information of the Secretary of State for India in Council, the result of the recent examination held at the Royal Indian Military College, Addiscombe, of candidates for commissions. The Council are gratified on being enabled to recommend that all the gentlemen cadets named in the enclosed return should receive commissions in the infantry. On this, which is understood to be the last occasion on which appointments will be made from the Royal Indian Military College to the Indian army, the Council cannot refrain from testifying to the kind and able co-operation with which they have uniformly been met in the discharge of their office by the Lieutenant-Governor, Major-General Sir Frederick Abbott, as well as the very efficient manner in which the professors have carried out their arduous and important duties, and to the success which has attended their exertions."

The following is the list of names of those who passed a satisfactory examination as candidates for commissions in the infantry of her Majesty's Indian army, standing in the rank of general merit:—W. J. Williamson, Arthur G. Hammond, H. B. Abbott, Charles F. Hughes, John E. Sandeman, F. H. Jackson, Charles Key, Sydney C. Trower, Edward Molloy, W. M. Molyneux, J. R. E. Royle, Ralph A. Rice, John Butler, W. B. Seton, Alexander Hayes, Walter W. Story, Albert Lloyd, Thomas Price, E. E. Grigg, E. Z. Thornton, J. M. Tulloch, Charles Ransford, G. McCall, J. R. B. Atkinson, James Fraser, Etwall W. Smyth, Henry P. Airey, E. C. Webb, Hugh L. Anderson, W. W. H. Scott, Charles E. Glasse, and Arthur P. Hancock.

The following list of prizes was then announced:—

Third Term.—William Williamson—First good conduct, the sword, the Pollock medal, mathematics, fortifications, Hindustani, and geology; Charles Ker—Military topography; Edward Molloy—Second good conduct and French; George McCall—Third good conduct and civil drawing.

Second Term.—Henry Abbott—Fortification and chymistry; Charles Hughes—Hindustani; John Sandeman—Military topography; Sydney Trower—Mathematics; Joseph Ryle—French; Peter Thomson—Civil drawing; Etwall Smyth—Fourth good conduct.

First Term.—Thomas Holditch—Fortification, military topography, civil drawing; Edward Alleyne—Chymistry; Alexander McHardy—Geology; Thomas Grecey—Mathematics; John Hall—Hindustani; Charles Empson—German; Henry Vaughan—French.

First Term Nominees.—Arthur Hammond—Mathematics, Fortification, Military Topography, and Hindustani; Algernon Sanderson—French; Percy Smith—Civil Drawing.

Sir C. WOOD, in presenting Mr. Williamson with the Pollock medal, said,—I have great pleasure in presenting you with this prize, as you have not only distinguished yourself in your examination, but have earned this mark of approbation of the Governor for your conduct, for which you are as much distinguished as for the attainments for which you have received this honour. You have obtained a load of prizes, which are more than you are hardly expected to carry, and I trust your future career will be as honourable as it is at the present time.

Several other candidates for honours having been complimented by the chairman,

Sir C. WOOD said: Gentlemen, this is the third, and I am afraid, the last time I shall have the honour to address the cadets assembled in this room. Various changes have occurred under which it has been thought desirable that this Indian College of Addiscombe shall cease to exist; not that it has failed, as I believe that it has well fulfilled all the purposes for which it was established, having existed for more than half a century. In the address of the Council of Military Education, it has been stated that it will be for the benefit of the service that the various arms of the Indian army should be consolidated into one army; but, nevertheless, it is not without feelings of great pain that I address for the last time the cadets of Addiscombe. The high testimony borne in the report of the Committee of Council of Military Education as to the kind and able co-operation and assistance which they have received in the discharge of their duties from the Lieutenant-governor, Major-general Sir Frederick Abbott, as well as from the professors of the college, in conducting their examinations, is highly creditable to them, as they might have suspected, however unfounded that suspicion might have been, of a partiality for that service to which they have been attached so long. Therefore, when the Council of Military Education bear such independent and impartial testimony as to the satisfactory manner in which the education at Addiscombe has been carried out, it possesses more value because of the independence and impartiality with which that opinion has been given. The records of our Indian empire bear ample testimony, if there were no other, to the success which has attended the education of this college, and the best proof of the success of this establishment is to be found in the number of distinguished officers who have been trained within its walls. Without going back to more remote times, I may refer to the severe trials which fell upon our Indian empire by the mutiny of 1857, and on that occasion those who were the most remarkable for their exertions, gallantry, bravery, and skill, were those distinguished officers who were trained within the walls of Addiscombe College. I hardly know whether I should be justified in naming particular persons, as I might appear invidious, when all have behaved so well, to select them; but I will venture to speak of Sir Henry Lawrence, Sir Robert Napier—coming nearer down, Sir George Pollock, Sir Archibald Wilson, to whom Delhi fell, and other officers whom I could willingly name; but I am afraid that if I were to do so it might appear that I had selected them with less discrimination than I should like to show on the present occasion. In every branch of the service the warmest testimony had been given by the authorities of India to the gallant conduct of the gentlemen educated in this college. Recently Lord Canning, in conferring the Victoria Cross on one of the engineer officers, spoke of him in the highest and warmest terms, for whether in civil or military engineering Addiscombe had never been excelled; and I may say that the skill with which the sieges have been conducted by the civil engineers of India exceeded that of any other service in the world. One of the judges from the bench took occasion to say that he believed the Madras engineers would construct a dam on a quicksand; but, if they could not exactly do that, they would approach as near to it as human practicability would enable them to do. Gentlemen, those of you who are proceeding from this college, having passed the test of examination and qualified yourselves for your duties, will follow, in the footsteps of those who have preceded you in this college, to bear its fame throughout the career which is now open to you, and I trust that the last who will leave this college will prove that they have in no respect degenerated from those who formerly left its walls. I am sorry that this college is to cease to exist, for in former times it was a perfect model of military education. The prizes—the very best military prizes—have been awarded to those officers who have distinguished themselves by the education they obtained at Addiscombe, and those who have not been fortunate enough to obtain prizes, possessed a better education than most other gentlemen of the military service. Therefore I say, that I am sorry that this college is to cease to exist, not from any fault of its own, but from other considerations, for it has preserved its character as a college affording the best military education which this country, or any other country, ever possessed. Sir Frederick Abbott wishes me to read the words of Lord Canning, on the occasion of conferring the Victoria Cross on Major M'Leod Innes, which are highly creditable and honourable, not only to the distinguished person to whom they were addressed, but to the whole corps to which he belonged, and as far as I know of Indian affairs they are well deserved. He said:—

"I must add, that it is a peculiar pleasure to me to present this cross to an officer of the Bengal engineers, for I say to you, not as a compliment, but in the words of sober truth, that I do not believe that there ever has existed in any army a body of men who have rendered, individually and collectively, more constant and valuable good service to their country than the engineers of her Majesty's Indian forces. Men, all of them of proved ability and highly cultivated intellect, they have been unceasingly called upon, in peace as much as in war, to achieve great tasks for the protection and advancement of India, and they have never been found wanting. That when summoned to meet an enemy in the field they can carry their lives in their hands as lightly as any man, your own deeds, and those of many of your brother officers, have abundantly proved. It is in itself a distinction to belong to such a corps, and you, Major Innes, have the proud satisfaction to know that, while you have derived honour from being enrolled among the engineers of the army of Bengal, you have done all that a gallant soldier can do to repay that honour, in augmenting by your own acts the lustre and reputation of your distinguished regiment." Those were the words of Lord Canning, and I trust the time may come when every one of you will be addressed in a similar manner.

The meeting then broke up, but afterwards the cadets assembled in the exercising ground, and went through the manual and platoon exercises, passing in slow time, with other evolutions, terminating by "God save the Queen."

With this closed the business of Addiscombe College.

THE COTTON SUPPLY ASSOCIATION.

The annual meeting of this association was held on Tuesday in the Manchester Town-hall. The attendance was numerous and influential.

Mr. J. CHEETHAM, the President, said the present state of circumstances affecting the supply of cotton to this country, alarming as it was, did not make the arguments of this association any stronger than they were at its foundation four years ago, though its principles might be more fully recognised now than they were at that time, by the many who then stood aloof. The leading principle of the association had been, from the outset, that this vast national interest of cotton manufacture ought not to remain in almost total dependence on one source of supply for its raw material, especially when the permanence of that source was so closely bound up with a social system liable suddenly to break down and leave us in the direst emergency. He regretted very much the indifference with which the question had been regarded among the manufacturing interest itself, as compared with the anxious attention paid to it in all circles in the metropolis. Everywhere in London the question was being asked of them—"What are you doing in Lancashire, and what is to be the result there of this crisis in the United States?" Now, that the crisis seemed imminent, it was a matter for congratulation that this association had already been in existence four years, storing up information and experience that might serve to guard us from ill-considered and disastrous experiments. It was easy to report of this or that part of the world that it was capable of supplying abundance of excellent cotton; but the point too often lost sight of was the enormous advantages possessed by the American planter. In the first place, he had the pre-eminent advantage of being an Anglo-Saxon, endowed with all the skill, enterprise, and ingenuity of that race. Then he had a country, the soil and climate of which were peculiarly adapted for the culture of the article, from the lowest qualities up to the very finest. He had an adequate and intelligent acquaintance with the real wants of the consumers; his own country was covered with roads, railways, and navigation, so as to give him the greatest possible economy in conveying his produce to the port, and there also he met the capitalists who gave him the means of speedy communication with all the markets of the world. What, then, were the places on the globe where we were able to contend with a competitor so highly favoured? On a review of all those parts of the world whence cotton might be expected to come, it was found that, apart from the southern portion of the United States, there were only two regions possessing the very first requisite, which was labour to employ; and those two were the West of Africa and the East Indies. Every other country possessing soil and climate fit for the growth of cotton of a quality equal and in many cases superior to that which America produced, was yet placed out of the question at present by the want of labour. And in the West of Africa, though there was labour, the people were savage, the country was desolated by the warfare of hostile tribes, and the climate also was fatal to Europeans. Thus we were at present restricted to that great continent of India, which was now actually growing more cotton than any other portion of the globe. It was calculated that the annual produce of cotton in India was not less than 6,000,000 bales. We also possessed the advantage of having that country under our own government. There, also, we had abundance of free labour; there was no question of slavery to grapple with.

And yet there were formidable obstacles as compared with the position of the Americans. In the cotton districts of India there was no such man known as the Anglo-Saxon. The cultivation was in the hands of the ryot, a small farmer holding a few acres of ground, and so poor himself as to depend on bankers for his capital. When his crop reached maturity the produce was taken by the moneylender, who, of course, had great control over the price, and it very little exceeded 1½d. or 1¼d. per lb. The cotton was imperfectly cleaned, and underwent various adulterations for the advantage of the succession of dealers through whose hands it passed before reaching those of the English merchant at the place of export. It was worthy of remembrance that scarcely any article exported from India had ever been brought to a satisfactory state of production, unless under European superintendence. But in India we were also without roads to the seaboard, without water communications also, and railways were only now on the point of becoming available. Another difficulty was the understood principle of the Indian Government that no land should ever be sold in fee simple to Europeans, and then there was the jealousy of the civil service against enterprising Englishmen in the interior of India, who were to this day regarded as interlopers, though an altered tone was beginning to be manifested on the part of the Government. Under these circumstances it was not surprising that Indian cotton was the worst grown in the whole world, and fetched the lowest price, so that consumers were accustomed to smile at all proposals for relying on India as a main source of supply. The movers in this association believed, nevertheless, that there was a prospect not only of increasing the Indian supply to this country, but also of elevating the quality to a level with that grown in America. The quantity received from India in the last six years was 2,974,000 bales, of which we had ourselves consumed only 266,000 bales per annum on the average, the annual excess of 230,000 being taken away to various countries on the Continent. India was capable of giving us a much larger quantity than 600,000 bales, which was the amount last year. Probably we could reckon on 1,200,000 bales a year from Bombay. This association had lately been enabled to hand over the development of the cultivation of a superior quality of cotton in India to the efforts of a joint-stock company, whose chairman was his friend Mr. John Platt, of Oldham. As soon as the season permitted, the company proposed to send out to India as its commissioner Mr. G. R. Haywood, who had hitherto been the secretary of this association; and Sir Charles Wood had placed at that gentleman's disposal the services of Dr. Forbes, who would accompany him. Mr. Cheetham referred again to the danger of relying exclusively on America, and pointed to the fact that while the annual supply from the whole world in the last ten years had averaged only 3,984,000 bales, the annual consumption of Great Britain, Europe, and America had been 3,960,000. The present price of cotton arose not so much from the actual crisis in America as from the practical knowledge that a million bales had been lost to us by the failure of the harvest.

Mr. H. ASHWORTH moved the adoption of the annual report of the association, which was agreed to; and the meeting was addressed also by Dr. Beke, a traveller in Abyssinia, as to the capabilities of that country; by Mr. H. Jordan, the Government Commissioner from Queensland; by the Rev. Mr. Arthur, who claimed pre-eminence for India as the source chiefly to be relied on for speedy supply of cotton; by the Rev. Mr. Townsend, from the West Coast of Africa; by the Rev. Mr. Stuart, who is about to join the expedition of Dr. Livingstone; and by Mr. Heppel, the engineer of the Madras Railway.—Times.

EAST INDIA COMPANY.

A General Court of Proprietors was held on Wednesday last, at the Company's Offices, Moor-gate-street. Colonel SYKES, M.P., in the chair.

The minutes of the last court having been read,

The CHAIRMAN announced that the dividend on the ordinary stock of the company would become payable on the 6th of July.

The SECRETARY then read the statement of the capital fund and investments of the Company.

A copy of the petition to the Crown praying for an increased allowance from the Government, with the reply of Sir Charles Wood declining to entertain the proposition, were then read to the meeting, the chairman expressing his opinion that as nothing was to be expected from the Government the proprietors must arrange to supply the necessary funds from their own resources. Dr. Finch gave notice of a motion on this subject for the next court, to the effect that the amount of the unclaimed dividends being £14,000, and the interest thereon being about £100 per annum, such interest be appropriated for the purposes of the company.

Mr. Shaw called the attention of the court to a Bill just introduced into Parliament by Sir C. Wood, which, he said, would be highly detrimental to the interests of the public servants in India, and a breach of faith with those who had qualified by examination, and those who were studying for the Indian Civil Service. He moved a resolution to the effect, that the court were strongly of opinion such a measure was totally uncalled for, and would be a breach of faith of the provisions of the Act 21st and 22nd Victoria.

The resolution was seconded by Mr. Cooke, supported by Mr. Jones, Mr. Helps, and Mr. Astell, and agreed to.

Mr. JONES moved a resolution condemnatory of the conduct of the authorities at the Horse Guards in acting contrary to the proclamation of the Government declaring all natives of India eligible for qualifying for situations in the military medical service, as evinced in their late rejection of a gentleman, otherwise qualified, on the ground of his being a Parsee. The resolution was seconded by Dr. Finch, and carried.

Some routine business having been transacted, the court broke up, with a vote of thanks to the chairman.

MISCELLANEOUS.

HOMEWARD MAILS.—For the information of the public interested in the arrival of the mails from India, China, and Australia, we are requested to state that in previous years the steamers have left Calcutta and Bombay during the prevalence of the south-west monsoon, viz., in May, June, and July, five days earlier than at other seasons of the year, in order to secure uniform dates of arrival at Marseilles and Southampton. This year, however, at the instance of the Postmaster-General, the steamers will leave Calcutta and Bombay upon the same dates all the year round, and the public may therefore be prepared for the next three months to find the overland mails occasionally a few days behind the usual time.

BANQUET TO LIEUT.-GEN. SIR JAMES HOPE GRANT, G.C.B.—The members of the United Service Club entertained Sir James Hope Grant at dinner on Saturday, the 8th. His Royal Highness the Duke of Cambridge was president at this banquet. The guests included Viscount Palmerston, Sir Charles Wood, the Earl of Elgin, Mr. Francis Grant, Captain Grant, and the Equerry to his royal highness. Nearly one hundred and fifty members were present, and amongst them were:—Admiral Sir Geo. F. Seymour, General Sir John F. Burgoyne, Vice-admiral the Earl of Hardwicke, General Sir Thomas W. Brotherton, Vice-admiral Sir George R. Lambert, Lieutenant-general Sir Harry Jones, Vice-admiral Sir Michael Seymour, Lieutenant-general the Earl of Rosslyn, Rear-admiral the Earl of Shrewsbury, Lieutenant-general Peel, Major-general Brereton, Major-general Sir James Y. Scarlett, and Colonel Le Marquis d'Audigne, French Embassy.

COCHIN CHINA.—Opinions differ among military and naval men respecting the value of this new conquest, or, as it is termed, the French province of Saigon; but the more general belief is that under an intelligent, firm, and friendly administration it will become in a few years the most important of French colonies, Algeria of course excepted. No fear is entertained of resistance or revolt on the part of the natives. The country is said to be remarkable for the rich and varied character of its products, no less than for the advantages of its topographical and geographical position. It is traversed in all directions by navigable rivers, in which the tide flows and ebbs for a distance of 180 miles from the seaboard. Some have an average width of a mile, and are navigable for vessels of the heaviest tonnage for a distance of from 80 to 100 miles from the coast. Nowhere else on the Indo-China seas is there a place to be found that offers advantages equal to Saigon for the establishment of the centre and head-quarters of a naval station. It satisfies all the requirements of strategical science; will allow of the cheap construction of graving docks, while the uplands will supply abundance of shipbuilding timber, and St. James' Cape is accessible to sailing vessels coming from north or south, no matter what wind may be blowing. Occupying Metho, the whole of the trade of Cambodia, it is anticipated, will pass by French hands, who will thus possess the supply of salt fish to the great markets of India and China, without counting the other products of the country, such as rice, ivory, silk, &c.

THE TAEPIINGS IN CHINA.—The correspondence which has been laid before Parliament respecting the opening of the Yang-tse-kiang river to foreign trade gives a deplorable account of the Taeping movement or rebellion, and seems fully to justify Vice-Admiral Sir J. Hope in writing, as he does, that he can regard it in no other light than that of an organised band of robbers. Their policy is, after plundering such towns as they can capture, to convert those they hold into mere garrisons, excluding the general population not essential to their wants, and to destroy those of which they do not retain possession, in order to render them useless to the Imperial Government. Mr. Parkes says in an account of his visit to Hwang chow, which is fifty miles from Hankow, on the 22nd of March, that the city was entirely deserted by the people, and the houses gutted by the rebels. When he was there less than a fortnight before it contained a population of 40,000; they had now all fled. The general appearance of the rebels was that of a mob. He was introduced to the Taeping Prince, Ying-Wang, who described himself as charged to relieve Nganking, which was besieged by the Imperial forces. Mr. Parkes suggested that he should not move upon Hankow, which he had some idea of doing, as it was one of the ports at which we were established, and would seriously interfere with our commerce, and in this he readily acquiesced. On the 24th of March Mr. Parkes was at Nganking, where he found the rebels had destroyed all but the few streets necessary to give shelter to their garrison. He reached Woo-hoo a few days afterwards, and reports that the site of its extensive suburbs can now only be traced by brick heaps, and the same may almost be said of the city itself; it has been known as one of the principal emporia on the Yang-tse. Taeping, a place of some note, twenty miles from this, presents a like scene; "the city is obliterated." The lately flourishing port of Soo-chow is quite destroyed, and miles of country round it will soon be covered with jungle. The party who visited it flushed teal in the city moat, where a year ago it was barely possible to find a passage, from the immense number of boats. The banks of the Grand Canal, along which is a broad road, are literally white with human bones; human remains lie about in all directions, but the water is supposed to cover a still larger number of victims. The fugitives, however, are now returning to the villages around Nankin, and they will soon be peopled, unless again disturbed. Sir J. Hope, in his despatch of the 6th of April, says he considers the only course to be to endeavour to obtain the recognition by both parties of the neutrality of our consular ports, which would then become places of security in which the Chinese merchants and capitalists could take refuge, as at Shanghai; and their ingenuity would devise modes by which the produce of the country could be brought there in defiance of every obstacle. This seems the more feasible from the circumstance that trade has been conducted in a singular way between Shanghai and Soo-chow, with the latter in the possession of the rebels; it appears that there is a society having friends among both the contending parties, and for a heavy consideration their boats are allowed to trade unmolested, to the large number of nearly 5,000. The men have a regular system of signals and passwords, and it is not improbable that fear of giving provocation to such a large body has more weight with the Imperial officers than the rebels.—Times.

EAST INDIAN RAILWAY.—The traffic receipts on the Bengal division of this company's line for the week ending the 10th of March amounted on 248 miles to £3,560 for passengers, &c., and to £4,136 for merchandise, total £7,696, against £5,922 on 166 miles for the corresponding week of 1860, showing an increase of £1,174. The total receipts for the week ending the 17th of March amounted to £6,926, against £5,479, showing an increase of £1,447, and for the week ending the 24th of March the total receipts amounted to £7,248 against £5,883, showing an increase of £1,865. The total receipts on the company's line, 123 miles in length, in the North-Western Provinces division amounted, for the week ending the 9th of March, to £2,327 against £1,507 in the corresponding week of 1860, showing an increase of £760 on the same mileage. The total receipts for the week ending the 16th of March amounted to £2,513 against £1,863, showing an increase of £650; and for the week ending the 23rd of March to £2,850 against £2,146 for the corresponding week of 1860, showing an increase of £704. The total receipts on the Bengal line for the three weeks amounted to £21,870 against £16,784, showing an increase of £5,086. The total receipts for the three weeks on the line in the North-Western Provinces amounted to £7,690 against £5,576, showing an increase of £2,114.

BOOKS.

How to Speak Hindustani. By E. H. Rogers. Wm. H. Allen and Co.

Here is the one thing needful for rising barristers, that is, for barristers who mean to rise. The establishment of Small Cause Courts in India opens out a wide field for talent unappreciated at home, if a fair amount of industry be applied to the acquisition of the native languages. First and foremost is it necessary to have a competent knowledge of colloquial idioms and phrases, and this may readily be obtained through Mr. Rogers' very simple and lucid manual. Originally intended for the use of soldiers, it is precisely the sort of thing that everyone wants on first arriving in India. The directions for pronunciation are particularly plain, the grammatical rules are "adapted to the meanest capacity," and the sentences and vocabulary at the end of the little book are of every day application. Mr. Rogers himself has had the advantage of a long experience of the requirements of beginners, for he was formerly head master of the Lawrence Asylum in the Himalayas, and he is now teacher of Hindustani to the Indian depots at Chatham. The author is master of his subject, and his book is consequently all that can be desired.

MAPS of INDIA & CHINA.

MAP of INDIA; showing the British
Territories subdivided into Collectories, and the position and boundary of each Native State; chiefly compiled from Trigonometrical Surveys, executed by order of the Honourable Court of Directors of the East India Company.
On six sheets—Size, 5 ft. 6 in. high; 5 ft. 8 in. wide. 23; or,
on cloth, in a case, 23. 18s. 6d.; or, with rollers and varnished, 23. 3s.

The object kept in view in compiling this map has been to render it available to the greatest possible extent for popular use. For this purpose the names of all stations, civil and military, are inserted, as well as those of all towns and places of note likely to be looked for. To make clear the subdivisions of the whole of the country, both British and native, the limits of the various districts and collectories, with their names, are distinctly indicated. The railways and telegraphs are laid down, and the trunk roads conspicuously coloured.
The newly-acquired district in Burmah is included. To avoid,
however, the confusion consequent upon over-crowding, and make the map clear and easy for reference, the names of many small villages, and places of no present importance, have been omitted, and thus a very wide measure of comprehensiveness has been attained, while needless diffusiveness has been avoided.

A GENERAL MAP of INDIA; compiled
chiefly from Surveys executed by order of the Honourable East India Company, with the railways and telegraphs. On six sheets—Size, 5 ft. 3 in. wide; 5 ft. 4 in. high. 23; or,
on cloth, in a case, 23. 13s. 6d.; or, with rollers and varnished, 23. 3s.

MAP of the ROUTES in INDIA; with Tables of Distances between the principal Towns and Military Stations. On one sheet—Size 3 ft. 3 in. wide; 2 ft. 9 in.
high. 9s.; or, on cloth, in a case, 12s.

In this map are given the whole of the military and civil stations, together with the principal towns, the villages being omitted, so as to make the stations more prominent. The colouring defines the boundaries of the three Presidencies,
and shows also the railways and telegraphs.

MAP of INDIA and CHINA, BURMAH,
SIAM, the MALAY PENINSULA, and the EMPIRE of

*His Royal Highness the General Commanding-in-Chief has been pleased to sanction the publication of "A Manual of Military Law," by Colonel Pipon, Assistant Adjutant-General to the Forces, which he considers will be a most useful addition to the books required by regulation to be in the possession of the Officers of the Army. ## P R E F A C E.

The Mutiny Act and Articles of War having undergone considerable amendment in the present Session of Parliament, it has appeared to the authors a fitting opportunity to lay before the military profession a concise treatise on the laws under which they serve.

In so doing they have not confined their attention to Courts-martial, but have endeavoured to provide the soldier of every rank and every service with the means of ascertaining his privileges as well as his duties and liabilities.

The Acts relating to the Militia have all been enumerated, but their bulk renders it impossible to give them at length in a work like the present. The Government having pledged themselves to consolidate the Militia laws next Session, perhaps there may then be some hope of presenting them to the reader in a comprehensive form. The Militia Bill of the present session, as it introduces some new and important provisions, is given at length in the Appendix.

A full abstract of the Laws affecting Volunteers and Yeomanry Corps occupies a separate chapter, and the Act whereby they are enabled to acquire lands for practice grounds (which at the time these words are written is yet before Parliament), will likewise be added.

A shorter and more popular notice of these Acts might have been more agreeable to the majority of readers, but in the hope of making this book useful as a book of reference, not only to Volunteers, but to magistrates and other civil dignitaries, it has been deemed more advantageous to ensure accuracy by quoting the words of the enactments, than by curtailment to risk the omission of important matter. Any reader disinclined to peruse the Acts at length, may find any subject on which he desires to inform himself by reference to the Index.

The question of Tolls on the Metropolitan Bridges having lately excited some controversy, a notice of the exemption clauses in the several Acts will be found in the Appendix, where also the late General Order relative to retired pay to Adjutants of Volunteers has been subjoined.

The authors feel that they owe some apology for publishing a law book in the present novel form; but after much consideration and many friendly suggestions, they have preferred to compress matter which would well have filled a more bulky volume, into this handy and inexpensive shape, in order to bring it within the reach of every one.

Before concluding this preface, the authors are bound to record their obligations to that very useful and elaborate work, "Hough's Military Precedents," without the assistance of which their labour would have been much extended. They have also to acknowledge the assistance of "Simmons on Courts-martial;" "D'Aguilar on Courts-martial;" and H. B. Thompson's "Military Forces of Great Britain."

SOUND SKIN.—There are many complaints of the skin, which for their cure only require domestic management, and for which the mother or nurse, armed with Holloway's remedies, is the best doctor. The proper and active use of this Ointment, when resorted to early, insures recovery. It at once cools and soothes the inflamed vessels and irritated nerves, and arrests all acid discharges. It draws out the seeds of every eruption and equalises the circulation through the capillaries, from which it removes all spasmodic contractions. As the blood is the seat of health or sickness, it is a matter of primary importance that Holloway's Pills should be taken at the same time to purify that fluid.

MAILS TO INDIA.

Mails to India and China, via Marseilles, are despatched from London as follows, viz.:—Those for Bombay packets, on the evenings of the 3rd and 18th of each month; and those for Calcutta packets (including mails for Ceylon, Madras, and China), on the evenings of the 10th and 26th of each month. When any of these dates falls on a Sunday, the mails are made up on the following evening.

Letters and Newspapers can be forwarded to any part of India via Bombay and Marseilles, and in most cases will reach their destination some days sooner than if despatched by the following Calcutta mail. The Bombay mails via Southampton, however, are no longer available for the transmission of Letters or Newspapers to the Madras Presidency.

Mails for the Mediterranean and all parts of India, except the Bombay Presidency, are despatched via Southampton on the mornings of the 4th and 30th, or, when either of these dates falls on Sunday, upon the previous evening.

Mails for the Mediterranean, the Presidency of Bombay, and Upper or North-West Provinces of Bengal, are despatched via Southampton, on the 13th and 27th of the month, except when these dates fall on Sunday, in which case they are forwarded on the previous evening.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

THE most important, if also the most unpleasant, news received by the Calcutta Mail of the 22nd of May is the announcement that Mr. Laing had been compelled to proceed to sea owing to a severe attack of dysentery. It is satisfactory, however, to learn that the honourable gentleman arrived at Penang on the 24th of that month, and had then nearly recovered from his previous dangerous illness. The loss of his services in India at the present moment would be a serious calamity, if it be true that Mr. Lushington is spoken of as his successor. We trust, therefore, both on public and private grounds that Mr. Laing will very shortly be able to return to the scene of his arduous labours, and personally superintend the working of his financial scheme.

It already appears that Mr. Laing acted wisely in not estimating at too high a figure the probable revenue to be derived from opium. Owing to the failure of one of the largest native speculators the price of that odious drug suddenly fell 500 rupees per chest, and it is not impossible that a further decline may yet take place.

The volunteering from the local European regiments for general service goes on most satisfactorily. It may be said, indeed, to be almost universal; and in all likelihood the exceptions among the private soldiers are on the part of men who have lived many years in the country, with native women as their wives. As they are stated to be so very few in number it might, perhaps, be better to employ them in the police force than to go through the farce of constituting a regiment not four hundred strong at the commencement, and which, from never being recruited, would necessarily in a few years dwindle away to a mere handful of useless and discontented grumblers.

The large remittances of money from this country for the relief of the famishing population of the Upper Provinces are said to have filled the better educated natives with astonishment and momentary gratitude. The latest accounts from the suffering districts are tolerably favourable, and show that the most urgent need had passed away. The Home subscriptions, however, will prove of inestimable service in providing seed and agricultural implements for the large number of small agriculturists who have been compelled to part with everything to purchase a meal. Provision also can now be made for many orphan children who must otherwise have been almost totally neglected.

Mr. Seton Karr has been appointed Member of Council as successor to Mr. Sconce. Mr. Barnes, who for a short time held the office of Foreign Secretary, died at Hazareebaugh on his way to the Hills. Mr. J. P. Grant, Lieutenant Governor of Bengal, having gone to visit the new Sanitarium at Parisnath, met with a serious misfortune in having his thatched tents destroyed by fire, together with their contents. He was consequently obliged to return to Calcutta. The Commander-in-Chief, it was expected, would proceed to the Hills in the early part of June.

There is nothing of immediate interest in the news from China beyond the capture of Hankow by the rebels.

We give elsewhere a Promotion List of Engineer and Artillery Officers, a perusal of which will atone in the eyes of many readers for the absence of more exciting matter.

The institution of "The Most Exalted Order of the Star of India" is also duly chronicled in our columns.

The period within which officers were instructed to signify their acceptance of the additional £50 per annum, originally fixed for the 1st of August, has been extended to the 1st of October, before which time we hope to hear that the Secretary of State for India has consented to double the boon.

The Bombay Mail of the 27th May, due last Friday, will not reach the Post-office before a late hour this evening. The intelligence thus tardily conveyed will be given in the Indian Mail of to-morrow. The delay is reported to have been caused by the breaking of the main shaft of the steamer between Aden and Suez.

BENGAL.

MISCELLANEOUS.

THE NATIVE ARMY.—We (Englishman) hear that representations have been addressed from certain quarters to the military authorities, to the effect that, in reducing the Punjab infantry force it would be as well to carry out the measure by religions, if we may so express ourselves, and not by regiments. These corps are, for the most part, composed of Sikhs, Pathans, Punjab Mussulmans, and Dogras, or hill-men. We suppose that it is suggested to get rid of the Mussulmans, and send them to their homes, retaining the services of the Sikhs and Dogras. As far as regards the past history of the corps raised in the Punjab, and their services to the Government, this course would be unwise, and, in the cases of hundreds of men, ungrateful. In the first place, there is no just or politic reason why Mussulmans should, because they are Mussulmans, be excluded from the military service of the State; and in the second place, the Mussulmans of the Punjab regiments which came down to serve the Government during the mutiny and rebellion fought just as bravely and faithfully as did the Sikhs. The Pathans and the Punjab Mussulmans were in no way disadvantageously distinguished from their Sikh or Dogra comrades; but both did good and gallant service for the British in the darkest times; and in reducing the Native military force we hope to see no distinction of creed recognised, so long as men have conducted themselves well in the employment of the Government, even though they have never been engaged with its enemies. Of course in enlisting soldiers in this country a judicious proportion of the different creeds must be observed amongst those who are armed by the State, if only for the proper preservation of discipline in the army and peace and order in the land; but in reducing the military force, as a political and financial measure, we should be sorry to see Government at all introduce the religious element into its resolutions as to who shall be paid off and who shall continue to serve.

PRIZE MONEY.—We (Englishman) are informed that the Maharajah of Cashmere, and the Rajah of Jheend, have withdrawn the claim on the part of their soldiers, who were present at the siege and storm of Delhi, to share with the British force in the prize-money realised by the capture of the city, and in the subsequent operations. If these potentates persevere in their intention, a considerable drain will be taken off the thirty-five lakhs to be divided amongst the victors; for, although the Jheend Rajah's contingent present at the storming numbered but a few hundred men at most, the Cashmere force co-operating, amounting, we think, to something near six thousand men. We suppose that these Rajahs have declined to allow their men to receive their share of the prize-money out of compliment to our Government; but, whatever may be the cause, we are glad of their resolve, for the sake of the force at large, which will deserve all it may get for the "crowning mercy" which it worked on the rebellious city. The work of the Prize Committee is going steadily on; but as it has Delhi, Lucknow, and Pegu on its hands, expectants must not be impatient. The muster-rolls of several regiments of the Delhi army have been already examined and verified, but to secure accuracy, and prevent claimants springing up after the supposed final and perfect settlement, the greatest industry and repeated comparison and revision are requisite. We hear with surprise and regret that native regiments which, instead of doing good service for the Government before Delhi, caused anxiety and alarm, and even corps that were disarmed, have sent in their muster-rolls for a share in the prize money, which, in fact, they are to receive. With this, however, the Prize Committee have nothing to do: their duty being simply to work and bring their labours to an early conclusion, which we see every prospect of their doing within a few months, which months would have been years in some other hands.

MR. LAING, who is suffering from dysentery, has been compelled to take a sea trip. Should he not recover it is understood that he will return to England.

ARRAKAN.—Orders have been received to disband the Arrakan Battalion, which is to be replaced by a police one thousand strong. Whoever is the originator of this scheme has certainly proved himself utterly ignorant of the wants of this province, and a very poor financier indeed. Far from effecting a saving, he will thus increase the expenditure by nearly Rs. 18,000 a year, and will, moreover, jeopardise the future prospects of Arrakan, by suppressing a corps essential to the safety of its colonisation. I cannot understand the reasons for disbanding this regiment, since the Assam Local Infantry has been spared. The organisation of the Arrakan Battalion is, in fact, that of an efficient police, militarily disciplined. The object of its formation was to guard our frontiers against the inroads of the hill tribes, to protect Government treasuries, the jails, and the principal thannahs of the interior. Although the men were not required to perform the menial work of petty burkandazes they nevertheless attended, in reality, to the higher duties of the police. I consider it a great error to discharge this battalion at this present moment, when the hill tribes have recently given cause for so much anxiety to our settlers of the Kolodyne and Myoo, and are still so very hostile to our domination. This measure is full of danger, and may be the ruin of our frontier districts. It will take several years to form and discipline a large body of police; and, let them be commanded by officers of the army or not, they will never acquire the moral force of the Arrakan battalion, unless entirely composed of Sikhs or of Hindustanees. We must not forget that the Mugs are a powerful race, confident in their strength, and that they are accustomed to look with scorn upon the Chittagonians and the natives of Bengal. I much fear lest this province should be thrown, by this arrangement, into a perpetual state of distress and confusion, and be overrun by bands of savages and marauders plundering the ryots and destroying their villages and plantations. None of the men of the Arrakan battalion will enrol in the new police corps; they are dissatisfied, as they did not expect that a general disbandment would so soon be the reward of their good services during the Burmese war, and of their staunchness and faithfulness to their colours during the Indian mutiny. It is not my intention to dwell upon their wrongs, but I deplore to see 600 men let loose over this province without the means of providing for themselves; and we must necessarily apprehend that many of them will swell the ranks of the dacoits as the only avocation suitable to their soldier life and habits. What we want is better protection to forward the cultivation of cotton in the remote districts of the Kolodyne and the Naaf, and I believe this aim could have been attained by quartering the Arrakan battalion over the whole country, under the command of their European officers, entrusted with the powers of a Magistracy. These men would have been thus most usefully employed. A corps of 200 burkandazes could have been formed and placed under a superintendent, with deputy superintendents under him, to perform the petty duty of the Police in the towns of Akyab, Kyauk Phyo, and Sandoway. All the interior of the country would have been guarded by the battalion acting as a high police under their European officers as superintendents and magistrates. This scheme would not have necessitated extra expense, and the peace of Arrakan would have been secured, the ryots protected, and justice fairly distributed over the whole country. The blunder has now been committed by informing the men of the Arrakan battalion that they are to be disbanded. However, the ill consequences might still be averted, and let us hope that our authorities will see the necessity of remedying the evil at once. The Manchester manufacturers may be sure that, with such a management, Arrakan will not produce a single cwt. of cotton, although she could easily supply her quota of one hundred thousand bales.—Englishman.

DARJEELING.—Letters received from Darjeeling mention that on the 3rd May Cheebou Lama, the Vakeel of the Sikkim Rajah, had paid Rs. 1,000 into the treasury of Dr. Campbell, being the first instalment of the indemnity under the new treaty.

JURY LISTS.—The movement for the revision of the jury lists in Calcutta seems to have been tolerably effective, though not exactly in the direction that some of its originators perhaps intended. Yesterday, May 17, in the Supreme Court, Mr. J. C. Murray, the gentleman in charge of the business of Messrs. Kettlewell, Bullen, and Co., applied, by counsel, to have his name transferred from the Petty Jury List to that of the Grand Jury, on the ground that, in the absence of the partners, he carried on the business of the firm. The court, on referring to the rule, refused the application, considering it clear that the rule applied only to merchants themselves, and not to their managers or deputies.

OPIMUM SPECULATION.—Already the soundness of Mr. Laing's doubts about the sustained revenue from opium has met with rather startling verification. The stoppage of a large speculator in the drug, and the dishonouring of his acceptances, has brought down the price nearly Rs. 500 per chest. We hear that this speculator, who is in fact the "representative man" of a lot of Natives "in" with him, has about 1,200 chests uncleared, bought at Rs. 2,570 per chest, the quotation yesterday being Rs. 2,080; so in all probability Government will be to some extent losers by the stoppage. The Government deposit is Rs. 200 per chest, and as these 1,200 chests must be resold, the Revenue will suffer by the amount which the drug may now realize below Rs. 2,200. We only hope that the mad speculations of these people may not have forced up and kept up the prices so high and so long as already to have stimulated foreign competition as effectually as the same system has done it for saltpetre.

PORT BLAIR.—Our superintendent, Captain Haughton, some time back asked the permission of the Governor-general to arm a small number of convicts, not more than fifty, to be distributed among the different settlements, to act as a guard against surprise by the aborigines. His Excellency, I am told, has sanctioned the measure, but he depends upon proper measures being taken to prevent aggression on the aborigines; the arms must be used only for defence. The Captain further inquired whether term convicts may be allowed to marry life female convicts, and recommended that such marriages be permitted, the male entering a bond not to leave the settlement without making provision for his wife and offspring. The Governor-general was unable to accede to the recommendation, unless it be possible to bind the male to reside at Port Blair for the rest of his life; for the alternative is, either that the marriage will be virtually dissolved on the expiry of the term of the male convict's sentence, or that the female convict must be allowed her liberty at the end of that term. His Lordship remarked that it would not be proper either to encourage a temporary marriage of that kind, or to allow a female convict sentenced to life imprisonment to regain her liberty by marrying. Orders have been issued by Government that the convicts should not be sent from Calcutta by sailing vessels between the 1st May and the 31st October, and that they should be sent from Bombay and Kurrachee only during the South-west Monsoon.—Englishman.

KUPOORTHULLA CHURCH.—It is stated by the Delhi Gazette "that the Lady Rumdheer Singh, wife of the Rajah of Kupoorthulla, recently laid the foundation of a church to be built at the town of that name by his highness. The funds for this purpose, somewhere about ten thousand rupees, have been provided, and the edifice will exactly face the front of the new palace recently erected by the Rajah." The lady here referred to is a European, the daughter of some uncovenanted servant of Government in the North-West, and the Rajah is a convert to Christianity.

MR. SETON KARR has been appointed Member of the Legislative Council for Bengal.

DELHI, May 14.—The raised footpath in the centre of the Chandnee Chouk is progressing, and affords a grand opportunity for disposing of the heaps of bricks lying about the streets in anything but picturesque groups. It will be an improvement when completed, and will render the carriage way less liable to obstruction, as well as lessen the chances of running over obstinate people, who seem to like to run in front of carriages upon the chance of being run over. The new police system is working well. I hope this police will be able to put a stop to the evil rumours so prevalent just now in the city, and not only inside the city, but in the villages outside. They have just succeeded in capturing a thief with the stolen property in his possession. The following are the particulars:—It was reported to the authorities on the 9th, that an Affghan (a Christian) had decamped from Sirdhana with Rs. 1,500, belonging to the Roman Catholic priest at that place, and that he had been traced to Delhi. He was said to be travelling by Gungaram's dawk. Inquiries were instituted, and it was found that a person answering the description given arrived at Delhi on the 9th, and had proceeded in a dhylee towards Rewarree. A party of mounted police were immediately despatched with orders to give information at all police stations in their route; notice was also sent by the civil authorities of Delhi to the police at Goorgoan and Rewarree; the result was that the thief was apprehended with all the money in his possession. The whole thing reflects great credit upon all concerned in the capture.—Englishman.

GENERAL SERVICE REGIMENTS.—As the six new Royal Regiments from Bengal, three of cavalry and three of infantry, have found a sufficient number of officers for general service to complete their complement, this branch of military employment for the Company's officers may be looked upon as closed against any further volunteers, the Government having notified from the commencement, that only a sufficient number of officers for the new line corps would be accepted for general service. On the other hand, as the number of officers to be admitted into the Staff Corps will also be limited to the requirements of the service, it turns out that, in spite of themselves, a large number of the Company's officers must remain for the miseries of local service, which will be a sad trial and disappointment for men of spirit and ambition, who will be virtually obliged to prowl about the country doing military jobs, and ticca work, or lie concealed in some obscure station, unemployed and discontented.

HONORARY MAGISTRATES.—The following gentlemen have been appointed honorary magistrates.—Messrs. R. W. Stevens, agent to the Punjab Railway, and T. Bailey, manager Lahore Branch Agra Bank at Lahore, Major-general Innes, and Major Goad at Simla, Mr. H. A. Atherton, late C. S., Dhurmsala, and Mr. H. Berkeley, at Kotghur. The necessary steps for appointing these gentlemen justices of the peace are being taken by the solicitor to Government, Calcutta.

ELECTRIC TELEGRAPH IN INDIA.—The Englishman, in the course of some remarks on the inefficiency of the Electric Telegraph officials at Calcutta, makes the following statement, which lets us know where the old telegrams go:—

"A few days since a lady bought from a toy-seller in the Botanical Gardens, for one pice, a child's hand punkah, ornamented on one side with red flowers in paper, and on the other with the inscription which we copy below:—

PRIVATE MESSAGE.

By Electric Telegraph.

From Calcutta To Kurrachee.
From John Borrodalle To Ashburner Bell.

Bentlnck will clear about 25th inst. one hd. tons Benares Sugar, three hd. tons No. 2 gunny bags. Repeat 17-18 Sept. 0.57.

"The original curiosity is hanging in our office. It is composed of an undefaced office copy of the message, and has part of another of the same date, 18th September last, twisted round the handle. We have also seen another and similar specimen, discovered in the hands of a child, which had been manufactured into a windmill, but which, as it would tend to compromise private character, we cannot use."

SALE OF WASTE LANDS.—We (Friend of India) understand the Government of India has at last seriously taken up this question, and that a Notification will shortly appear conceding almost all that the public have asked for as to the tenure of the waste lands throughout India. The somewhat liberal minute of the Lieutenant-governor of Bengal on the subject has been before the Governor-general for the last eight months. So rapid has been the change of official opinion that there is not a Governor, Lieutenant-governor, or Chief Commissioner in India, who is not anxious to sell outright the waste lands of the territory under his jurisdiction. Colonel Phayre recently asked permission thus to dispose of the extensive jungle tracts of Pegu at ten rupees an acre. This sum is too high. The finest coffee lands of Ceylon were sold at half that rate. As the number of settlers thus attracted to the colony increased, the price rose with the demand, and during the seventeen years ending 1860, 163,414 acres were sold in fee simple, realising the sum of £200,772, exclusive of survey fees. Since 1833 nearly half a million of acres have thus been sold in a colony which has the comparatively small area of 24,700 square miles, or less than that of Assam and Cachar, the area of Assam alone being 21,805 square miles. The result is that while the revenue of Ceylon is every year benefited by the purchase price of land, its trade has more than doubled since the first acre was sold, and its population increases at the rate of 30 per cent. every 20 years. We believe the Government of India are inclined to sell the fee simple of waste land at a much lower upset price than ten rupees. The Redemption of the Land tax is a wider question, which the present Government is afraid to enter upon, and which will not be taken up till there is a more enlightened Indian administration both in England and on the spot. How capitalists and political economists in England looked at the question may be seen from the following remarks of the Money Market Review:—"The capital represented by the land amounts, at twenty-five years' purchase, to the enormous sum of £402,000,000. Whereas, the aggregate of the India debt and railways together does not amount to more than £143,000,000. It is fair to presume that if sufficient land were sold to pay off this debt, and for the promotion of works of reproduction, the land that would be left would be so improved by railways and works of irrigation that it would be worth as much as the whole now is. The whole trade of India would at the same time be vastly extended, and would bear a much larger amount of taxation." Twenty-five years' purchase, however, is too high a rate.

CIVIL SERVANTS IN ENGLAND.—A despatch from Sir C. Wood is published in the Calcutta Gazette of the 4th of May, complaining that a previous despatch, requiring civil servants on arrival in England to furnish a certificate showing particulars of leave, allowances, &c., had not been attended to. Sir Charles transmitted a form of certificate, and stated that any civil servant, covenanted or uncovenanted, who shall omit to transmit such a certificate to the India Office, will receive no absentee allowance while in England. The certificate is to contain the name, service, and designation of the person claiming leave, nature and period of the leave, date of intended departure, amount of salary passed in advance, rate of allowance to be drawn in England, and date from which first payment is to commence.

CASH BALANCES.—The following statement of cash balances in the Government Treasuries up to the end of March last is published in the Calcutta Gazette of May 8:—

MR. G. C. BARNES, for a short time Foreign Secretary to the Government of India, is dead.

DEATH OF MR. SAMUEL SMITH.—On the 6th of May, at Darjeeling, after a lingering illness, died Mr. Samuel Smith, who, coming to India as a private soldier, and having procured his discharge, formed a connection with the press, and worked his way up to the proprietorship of the Hurkaru, which for many years flourished and acquired a high reputation under his management. There were few men on the Calcutta side of India who were more widely known than Samuel Smith, who experienced more vicissitudes of fortune, or met them with greater equanimity.

QUARTERMASTER-GENERAL OF H.M.'S FORCES IN INDIA.—It is stated in the Calcutta Gazette of the 4th May "that the appointment of Quartermaster-General of Her Majesty's Forces in India having become vacant by the death of Major-General Congreve, C.B., that office is, under instructions from Her Majesty's Government, abolished with effect from the 1st instant. The duties hitherto performed by the Quartermaster-General Her Majesty's Forces in India will devolve upon the Quartermaster-General of the Bengal Army, who will also transmit to the Horse Guards the returns heretofore sent by the former officer. His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief is requested to issue such subsidiary orders as may be necessary to carry this arrangement into effect."

THE SONTHALS.—The following is an extract from a private letter from Doonku, in the Sonthal Pergunnahs, dated 6th May:—"The Shikawatee battalion and the Commissioner have arrived, and the Sonthals have ceased to show their teeth, and have fled into the dense jungle. They openly declare that 'the hungry tiger does not fear the snare.' The object of their committing their depredations in the neighbouring villages was to satisfy their hunger. The son of Sedoo Majee, who was offered by some of the Sonthals their leadership, refused to have anything to say to it."

EXPORTS (Calcutta, May 23).—More business has been doing during the past few days, and shippers show more disposition to operate. This is mainly attributed, no doubt, to the favourable news from Europe per last mail. Altogether more activity is noticeable.

IMPORTS (Calcutta, May 23).—Transactions during the past fortnight have been on the most restricted scale, as, in addition to the want of speedy means of transit for goods up-country owing to the season of the year, there has been great want of confidence among dealers in the bazaar, in consequence of large losses in opium sustained by several of the leading men, who have been obliged to suspend payments, and the uncertainty as to how many dealers may suffer in consequence. During the last few days sales and deliveries have been in a measure suspended. We trust, however, to see henceforward a more healthy state of things prevailing in the bazaar, as dealers in piece goods have been doing a quiet business, very different from the gambling that has taken place in opium, which will probably now receive a check, at least for a time. We have little change to notice in prices of goods generally, and cannot look for improvement until the rains have rendered the rivers navigable. Stocks are reported to be very light up-country.

APPOINTMENT. (Foreign-office, June 24).—The Queen has been pleased to approve of Mr. Thomas Lidbetter as Consul at Kurrachee for his Majesty the King of Prussia.

MISCELLANEOUS.

SMALL CAUSE COURTS.—The Government of Fort St. George lately informed the Supreme Government that, finding the Act for the Establishment of Courts of Small Causes is intended to extend beyond the local limits of the jurisdiction of the supreme courts established by the Royal Charter, the judges of the Madras Sudder Court were requested by that Government to advise as to the arrangements which they would propose for giving effect to the enactment in the Madras Presidency. The judges in reply have recommended that for the present such courts be created only at the following stations:—Calicut, Combaconum, Honore, Mangalore, Salem, Tellicherry, and Tranquebar. They proposed that the jurisdiction of each court should extend over a circle with a radius of about twenty miles from the head station. They considered that the salary of the judges of these courts should not be less than Rs. 600 a month—i.e., Rs. 100 more than the pay of a principal sudder ameen, and that they should have establishments of Rs. 165 per mensem. On this footing the proposed seven Small Cause Courts would cost Rs. 5,355 per mensem, or Rs. 64,262 per annum. The Sudder Judges did not suggest any reduction in the existing courts to compensate for the increase of charge until the new system shall have been for some months in operation, and the Civil Judges shall have reported upon its working. And the Madras Government, in forwarding the above to the Supreme Government, stated that they were not prepared in the present condition of the Indian finances to recommend, even temporarily, such an outlay as would be involved in the scheme of the Sudder Court for the introduction of the Small Cause Court Act into the Madras Presidency.—Englishman.

THE LATE CASTE RIOT AT MADURA.—The following despatch from Sir C. Wood to the Madras Government is dated the 23rd March:—

"Your letter dated 21st December (No. 36), 1860, reporting the occurrence of a riot at Aroopocottah in Zillah Madura, and transmitting a memorial from certain inhabitants of that village, has been before me in council. The memorialists complain that the Shanars have been permitted, contrary to previous custom, to resort to the use of palanquins, flags, and other insignia, in their marriage ceremonies and processions through the public streets, and they express their apprehension that if such things are not prevented, even the precincts of the temples themselves may not be safe against the free ingress of all classes, without distinction. The apprehensions of the memorialists in regard to their temples may be at once allayed. The Penal Code passed by the Legislative Council on the 6th October last protects from unauthorised trespass all places of worship in India, and the officers of Government will not hesitate to give effect to that law in every proved case of a violation of its provisions. With regard to the case now reported, I have to convey my concurrence in the views to which expression is given in the 11th paragraph of your letter, and as your Government has already laid down broad general principles which are sufficient to guide the local magistracy, I concur with the Inspector-general of Police that matters of this kind may safely be left in the hands of local officers. You will inform the memorialists that for the reasons above stated I am precluded from entertaining the prayer of their memorial. The magistrate states that had the police Ameen done his duty instead of wilfully neglecting it, the disturbances and plunder of the Shanars' bazaar would not have occurred. I am of opinion that as the Ameen has been convicted and sentenced by the subordinate judge to imprisonment and fine, he should not be again employed in the service of Government, except with your special sanction."

Sir C. Wood concludes his despatch by observing that the following suggestion of the magistrate is deserving of consideration, and by requesting that it might be brought to the notice of the Government of India:—"That all loss accruing to any person from a riot or pillage of this nature, committed in open daylight at the instigation and by the assistance of the majority of the townspeople, should be made good by levy of an adequate fine on the town, district, or division in which the plunderers reside." The Government of India has accordingly been written to on the subject.

DEATH OF MISS DENISON.—It will be a subject of general and deep regret that the return of His Excellency the Governor of Madras has been clouded by a severe domestic affliction, the death of his eldest daughter, Miss Denison, having taken place at Coonoor on the 12th May. The deceased young lady had been for some time past in a precarious state of health, the knowledge of which fact, it is to be hoped, in some measure prepared her family for the blow which has fallen upon them, and which commands the sympathy of the public.

HINDOO SPORTS.—On the 19th April Mr. Levinge, the magistrate of Madura, addressed the following letter to Mr. Chief Secretary Pycroft:—"With reference to the Proceedings of the Madras Government, No. 431, dated the 28th March, 1861, I have the honour to report that the Sessions Judge has not quite accurately described the sport called in Tamil 'Jalikat.' From personal observation and from inquiries made by me, I have ascertained that it consists in loosing either from a large pen or from a number of stakes to which they are tied, a lot of cattle with cloths or handkerchiefs tied to their horns, money being sometimes knotted in the cloths. Nothing is done to infuriate the cattle before being released; when let go the spectators shout and cheer, and a tremendous tom-tom-ing is set up; this so far excites the animals that most of them go off at a gallop; then such of the spectators as wish to distinguish themselves in the eyes of their countrymen as swift runners and brave men go after the cattle and strive to pull the cloths off the beasts' horns, the cloth and any valuable attached to it being the reward of the captor. This kind of sport may be considered the national amusement of the people of this part of the country; it is practised in this district, Trichinopoly Poodocotta, I think in parts of Tanjore, and is as much their passion as horse racing is that of the people of England, or bull baiting that of the people of Spain. Mr. Clarke, when joint magistrate, prohibited it in Dindigal Division, while the magistrate of Madura allowed it in the Madura Division, but subsequently in 1855 it was also prohibited in Madura. Numbers of people asked me to allow it again. I believe there was much discontent at the prohibition, and therefore permitted it—and notwithstanding the prohibition against it, so devoted were these people to it that it was still practised at all risks. Out of curiosity I went myself to see it. It was performed as I have stated above; no one was hurt, and I know of several other instances in none of which any accident occurred; but one accident, I believe, occurred which called forth the remarks of the Session Judge. Directly I heard of it I directed the Joint Magistrate to inquire into the case and to commit the owner of the beast to Court if culpable homicide could be proved against him. At the risk of causing much discontent amongst the people, I did not consider I was called upon to put a stop to their amusements because there was some risk attaching, no more than I should put a stop to some of the feats performed by tumblers, because the performer sometimes falls from a great height, and is killed, and in the case of this 'Jalikat,' no one can possibly be hurt excepting those who voluntarily go after the cattle. Rich ryots, zemindars, and head men are the great promoters of this kind of sport, by running their own cattle, &c.; directly they find that its practice is attended with danger of being tried for an accident, it is probable that they will voluntarily withdraw from actively continuing it, when it will greatly lose its interest and excitement among the people, and they will then probably voluntarily give it up and take to or invent some more harmless amusement." A copy of the above letter was forwarded to the judges of the Sudder Court on the 10th May, and they were informed that, under the circumstances represented by Mr. Levinge, Government did not think their interference was called for.

BURMAH.—By the s.s. Burmah the customary Rangoon and Moulmein papers have been received. The latest dates are Rangoon May 15, Moulmein May 11, and Akyab May 18. The papers before us contain nothing which could, under any circumstances, be called news. Local squabbles of old standing, advertisements and extracts from other papers appear to make up the sum total of the contents of Moulmein and Rangoon journals. Discontent at the existing police system continues, and in all probability will continue, until a thorough revision of the system is made. Colonel Phayre had convened a public meeting of the inhabitants of Rangoon to be held on the 15th May, for the purpose of considering the "Municipality" question. Captain Brookie, Superintendent of the Irrawaddy Flotilla, has been appointed to take charge of the Government dockyard at Calcutta.

CHINA.

HONG KONG, May 11.—The London mail of March 26th arrived here on the 7th instant.

There is little in the way of political news to record for the past fortnight. The Prince of Kung acts for China in matters political, and everything he has hitherto said or done in relation to ourselves shows him desirous to take circumstances as they were arrested at the end of the late campaign, and make the very best of them that he can. It is somewhat to be feared that the Emperor and his anti-foreign advisers are sadly dispirited, and cannot muster courage to return to the capital. There is, indeed, every reason to believe that the presence of a foreign army under the walls of Peking was never contemplated by the Emperor of China even as a remote possibility, and the blow we have inflicted upon his pride, in thus cruelly and clearly exposing his long-cherished self-delusion, has proved so sickening, that his reappearance in Peking is being delayed, and delayed indefinitely. It is not supposing too much to imagine that the destruction of his summer palace, of which he is doubtless aware, forms only one item of the anguish that has vexed the Emperor's heart. In the meantime the condition of the country is far from satisfactory. Unlike the civil broils of modern Europe, the domestic wars of China go on from year to year, until war loses even the weak justification of being a means to an end. The past fortnight's news painfully illustrates this. Can anything be more provokingly indecisive than this fragment, said to be from the Peking Gazette: "A few battles have taken place between the Imperialists and the rebel banditti in Shantung and Honan; in some the former, and in others the latter, having been victorious." This is nothing more than a specimen of the general tone in which the civil wars of China have been reported during the last fortnight. Perhaps the balance has been on the Imperial side; but the rule is, that the next two weeks must restore it.

Reports state vaguely that a rebellion has broken out in Mongolia. The non-activity of the Emperor is causing much anxiety to his friends, among whom we are supposed in a manner to be reckoned. If the Manchu dynasty should now prove wanting to itself, matters will become hopelessly embarrassed, as no respectable aspirant to the supreme rule has as yet come forward.

From Peking we have little news in addition to what appeared in our last overland summary. The members of the various foreign embassies are meeting with all desirable civility. The residence of the British Legation is an enormous place, with detached buildings, covering about four and a half acres of ground. Workmen of various kinds are busily engaged putting it in good repair.

At Tien-tsin trade is beginning to prosper. Many of the leading houses in Hong Kong are preparing to erect structures suitable for business, and very strong prospects exist of future prosperity for this port. The troops are disappointed at their stay being prolonged, and that without any definite period being hinted at.

At Chefoo (called in the treaty Tang-Chow) trade was not so brisk—the market having received a temporary glut.

The principal news from Shanghai relates to the fluctuating success of rebels and Imperialists. Two naval expeditions had gone up the Yang-tze in search of deserters from English ships; the first visit was to Nanking, where a number of English sailors were captured in the service of the rebels; the next was to an Imperial camp, with corresponding results. On the 30th ult. the American expedition sailed up the Yang-tze. It consists of three vessels—the Harford, Dacotah, and Saginaw. Mr. Meadows goes to New-Chwang as her Majesty's Consul. Mercantile agents are proceeding thither numerous. Hankow has fallen to the rebels. From Canton we have no news of importance.—Overland China Mail.

CEYLON.

COLOMBO, May 30.—Much rain has not fallen during the fortnight, but the weather—though hot—has been squally and the sea occasionally high. Still there has been no slackening in the operations of preparing and shipping our staple. Five ships have sailed, all for London, taking away 23,452 cwts. of plantation coffee, 1,990 native; total 25,442.

This brings our total exports of plantation for the expired portion of the season up to 338,000 cwts., which is 6,000 over the figure for the same period of last season, and considerably above the figures for the two previous seasons. Native, on the other hand, shows only 90,000 cwts., against 138,000, 165,000 and 129,000 in the three previous seasons. Our total exports, therefore, are only 429,000, against 470,000, 476,000 and 474,000.

The genial rains which have lately fallen have, it is reported, brought out a fine blossom in the low, hot districts—Kornegalle, Kaduganava, and Doombura, and prospects of crop are better than they were; but we fear there can be no doubt that over the country generally the outturn of 1861-62 will be deplorably short. Short as it may be, however, hands will be wanted to gather it; and the Immigration Commissioners are doing their best to secure a free influx of Tamils. Our readers are already aware that the Pearl, free of cost and working expenses, is to be placed by Government on the Tuticoreen line. The Commissioners are arranging for placing a couple of suitable vessels on the Channel between Paumben and Manaar, to carry coolies free of cost. They are also on the look out for agents, to be stationed at Tuticoreen and Paumben, whose special duty it shall be to encourage immigration, by seeing that the coolies are protected from imposition or ill-treatment of any kind. By observing the utmost economy in all their arrangements the Commissioners hope to spare the planters the payment of a tax next year.

The Governor is still at Kandy, where he has just had a series of meetings of the Executive Council, preparatory no doubt to the approaching session of the Legislature. The latter body will have to decide on three offers for the construction of the Railway—from Messrs. Brassey, Messrs. Watson and Overend, and Mr. Molesworth, in addition to which Mr. Harrison is in the field with his scheme for a tramway.

A reform of our laws for the registration of births, marriages, and deaths,—a reform urgently needed, will also, we trust, be carried through.

At present—in the matter of marriages by license, an invidious distinction is made in favour of one particular sect—while in the case of all Christians the registration insisted on is not that of births but of baptisms; so that if a child of Christian parents is not baptized, that child has no legal existence in Ceylon! These and other matters will no doubt be put to rights now that the Government has the assistance of a competent Queen's Advocate.

The Volunteer movement is at length making real progress in Ceylon. Government have consented to lend rifles to the Primal Corps at Matella. At Kandy a most respectable committee has been formed, and here in Colombo a meeting is to be held on the 1st proximo for the purpose of making the necessary arrangements for forming a corps.

The weather is now thoroughly monsoonic, and we are glad to believe that the health of the country is better than it has been for some time back, although here in Colombo fever and measles have been recently prevalent, and in a few cases fatal amongst the young.—Colombo Overland Observer.

SARAWAK.—By the Sarawak steamer Rainbow, which arrived at Singapore on the 11th May, we have news to the 8th. Sir James Brooke had returned from his visit to Brunai, where his reception was of the most friendly nature. The good understanding between Brunai and Sarawak was completely re-established. The Sultan and his great officers issued a firman or chop, addressed to Pangerans Dipa and Kahar and all the people of Muka, announcing that Sir James Brooke was appointed their representative in Muka, with plenary powers to settle the affairs of the country, and ordering Dipa and Kahar to throw down their defences and receive Sir James as the Sultan's representative. By the same document it is stated that Sir James Brooke has been requested to open trade and establish a good government in order that the Sultan may obtain some revenue. The murderer and plotter, Mashahore, is ordered to leave the country, and finally Mr. St. John, the British Consul-general, is requested to carry the Sultan's chop or firman to Muka, in a British man-of-war, so that it may be clearly explained to the people at large, and ascertained whether the Sultan's mandate will be obeyed or not. All and each refusing obedience are declared to be in rebellion against the Sultan's Government, and submission alone will save them from destruction. On his return from Brunai Sir James Brooke conveyed a suruhan, or messenger of the Sultan to Oya, who was charged with a copy of the firman, or chop, and also with a private letter from the Sultan to Pangeran Dipa. These were read to the principal people of Oya, and it was intimated that Sir James would grant fair terms to Dipa and spare the life of Seriff Mashahore on condition of his leaving the country.—Singapore Free Press.

CENTRAL ASIA.

April 5.—The durbar was held as usual in the garden of Ghoolam Heider Khan. As the Ameer had not felt well since last night they did not remain long in the durbar. Some Khans and Sirdars sitting together, the following gossip was discussed amongst them. Some said that since the Ameer had commenced his visits to Jellalabad, he never spent the Eed there, he always left for Cabool either on the 15th or 20th Ramzan. Others said, "It is very right, but this time there must be something." The Jellalabad Khans said, "Either the Ameer is going to make over Jellalabad to the British, or he is going to get from them something." In short, they are all quite puzzled about the Ameer's staying longer than usual.—April 7.—Shah Murd Khan was ordered by the Ameer to send his men to the different places, from Jellalabad to Cabool, to collect grass, provisions, and all sorts of supplies for the use of the Ameer's camp, which would march for Cabool the day after the Eed. After the durbar was over the Ameer went to Ghoolam Mohamed's house, took dinner, and remained there till late at night.—April 8.—This morning a rumour was afloat in the camp that the Ameer had been taken dangerously ill and was not expected to live. All the sirdars and khans went to see the Ameer, and on making inquiries it was ascertained that on his return from Ghoolam Mohamed's house the Ameer had felt heavy in his stomach, and by degrees the pain had increased so much, that he had become senseless for a time. The son of Hakeem Ubdoolwasai Khan was sent for at night, and medicine administered. About 12 o'clock in the day the Ameer felt a little better, and the khans and sirdars returned to their camps. The Hakeem was heard saying that the cause from which the Ameer had suffered this pain was his eating too much at Ghoolam Mohamed's.—April 9.—The following are the contents of a letter received by the Ameer from Sirdar Sooltan Ahmed Jan, from Heerat:—"I need not mention here the disgrace I was put to, when I was turned out of Cabool by the Ameer, but as God is great, I was soon appointed a ruler of Heerat, which is ten times better than Cabool. Since then I all along had a regard for the Ameer, although he on several occasions wanted to injure me, but lately I have found out that the Ameer and his sons are not only against me, but they are determined to see me ruined. In such case I think it my duty, first to inform the Ameer about his sons' conduct, and then to take other measures. Mohamed Ameen Khan and Mohamed Shureef Khan have given out at Kandahar, that they would march on Heerat and conquer it. They are welcome to think so, and moreover I give the Ameer sufficient time to collect the troops at Kandahar, and then I will see whether I can make myself master of Cabool or the Ameer of Heerat." This is not all that Sooltan Ahmed Jan has written in his letter to the Ameer, but he has used very harsh language towards the Ameer, as the Paishkhidmut from whom it was ascertained, said, that the moment the Ameer had perused the letter he got so mad that he ordered the following answer to be written and sent to Sooltan Ahmed Jan:—"You are at liberty to do whatever you like (and even every thing is hurram, forbidden, to you), after you receive this, to do anything but to come and try your luck. I am soon leaving for Cabool, and the first thing which will require my attention on reaching there, will be to settle about Heerat."—April 10.—The Ameer held his durbar in the garden of Ghoolam Heider Khan. Khiluts were granted to the mullicks and chiefs of Soofaid Koh and other places, and they were told that in future if any one of their tribe or of Sungoo Khyle went and disturbed the Pishboo lakes as they formerly did, they would be severely punished. Shah Murd Khan was then desired to keep a sharp look out on these Mullicks, and not to give them ground to complain of ill treatment. I would have left some troops here to look after these Mullicks, said the Ameer, but as I have to send the troops to Kandahar, I cannot spare any.—April 11.—The following news was received through an urzee from Sirdar Wully Mahomed Khan, from Cabool. It is ascertained from the letters received by the merchants of Cabool, that at first the Russians were planning to build a cantonment at Pahlwan Hutta, a place this side of Agha Musjid, but on second consideration they had sent their vakeel to the Khan of Tashkund, and having obtained his permission they had commenced to build their cantonment three koss from the city of Tashkund. They had strengthened the fort of Pahlwan Hutta, and were thinking of taking Kohan. Sirdar Wully Mahomed Khan also informed the Ameer, that nearly all the troops of Sirdar Shumshooddeen Khan had marched for Toorkistan, but the sirdar himself was waiting for the Ameer. A letter was ordered to be written to Wully Mahomed Khan, requesting him to tell Shumshooddeen Khan not to wait for the Ameer's return to Cabool, but to leave at once for Toorkistan. "Please God we will see one another when he, the sirdar, returns to Cabool," added the Ameer. Shah Murd Khan was directed to collect as many Mulkea mercenary people as he could, and to send them to Cabool, as he wanted to send a strong army to Kandahar.—April 12.—This day being Friday, and the festival of Eed, all the sirdars, khans, and the officers of the troops, waited on the Ameer and paid their respects, respectively. They were all in the durbar when it began to rain, and continued to pour down for about an hour. After it had ceased to rain the Ameer Sahib, accompanied with all the sirdars and chiefs, went to say his prayers, while Sirdar Shere Allee Khan, in his military uniform, ordered out all the regiments of infantry and cavalry and the artillery, and got them drawn up on both sides from the gate of Jellalabad to the Eedgah. Having thus drawn up the troops he rode and inspected the whole in person. On the Ameer's returning from the Eedgah salutes were fired from the artillery, and as the procession was passing through the line, arms were presented by the troops. After this the Ameer went to the garden of Heider Khan, and having received the sirdars for a while, ordered his tents to be sent on the Cabul road.—April 13.—This morning the Ameer's camp marched from Jellalabad for Baghbanee, a place near Balabaugh on the Cabool road. All the sirdars and khans accompanied the Ameer.—Sirdar Mohamed Oosman Khan, the chief of this place, presented a grand zaafut to the Ameer, and having heard the Ameer praising his garden, named Baghbanee, he offered it to the Ameer as a present. The Ameer was quite glad to accept of it, and ordered the walls, &c., of the garden to be repaired. The Ameer also ordered a good and decent building to be erected in the garden.—April 14.—The Ameer's camp changed ground from Baghbanee to Nuinla. Sirdar Oosman Khan obtained three days' leave, promising that he would join the camp either at Gundoomuk or Sourkh Aub, and ordered his troop to accompany the camp.—April 15.—This day the Ameer's camp left Nuinla for Gundoomuk. An urzee was received here from Sirdar Mohamed Ufzul Khan from Toorkistan to the following effect. Some time ago, when the late King of Bookhara was alive, a few Bookhara merchants had been plundered somewhere near Indkhoe, and on their (the merchants) complaining to the King that their property, valued at about twelve thousand tila (a gold coin), had been plundered in Toorkistan, the King had written to Sirdar Ufzul Khan to have the amount recovered from the people in whose district the robbery had been committed. In reply to the late King's letter the Sirdar had promised that he would shortly inquire into the case and send the amount to the King. Having been again reminded by the merchants, the present King of Bookhara had sent a friendly letter to Sirdar Ufzul Khan and requested him to send the twelve thousand tila, as promised by him, to the late King. On this Sirdar Ufzul Khan was obliged to fine all the Indkhoe people at five tunka, or two-and-a-half Cabool rupees, per house; and having thus collected a large sum of money, the Sirdar had only sent two thousand tila to the King, and had kept the balance himself. At the conclusion of the letter the Sirdar asked the Ameer's pleasure about sending the large gun to the King of Bookhara, as promised by the Ameer to the late King. A short answer was ordered to be written, and sent to Sirdar Ufzul Khan, directing him to wait until he (the Ameer) had arrived at Cabool. The Gundoomakee and Mama Khyle people offered their usual presents, consisting of sheep, fowls, rice, ghee, &c., to the Ameer.—April 16.—The Ameer's camp arrived to-day at Sourkh Aub. Sirdar Mohamed Ameen Khan's letter from Kandahar was received by the Ameer at this place. He informed the Ameer that he (Mohamed Ameen) had sent the Ameer and Sooltan Mohamed Khan's letters in original enclosed in his own letter to Meer Ufzul Khan, and had written to him that if he would come to Kandahar he should get a good jageer and rewards from the Ameer, who as yet had a regard for him as his own son. The moment Meer Ufzul Khan had received his

(Mohamed Ameen's) letter with the enclosures, he had sent them to Sirdar Sooltan Ahmed Jan to Heerat, and it was ascertained from the news letter received from Heerat that Sirdar Sooltan Ahmed Jan had written the following answer to Meer Ufzul Khan:—"Do not believe in what the Ameer and Sooltan Mohamed Khan say in their letters, they are selfish men and want to catch you by some deceit or another, and after they had gained their object they would treat you with their usual contempt and hatred. I will send you as many troops as required, and you should not let this opportunity pass without taking the country of Kandahar, which will give you a great name and fame in the world." Having been so far encouraged, Meer Ufzul Khan thus replied to Mohamed Ameen's letter. "Do not waste your time in writing communications, but prepare yourself for the war. As the Ameer has turned me out of Cabool and Kandahar, please God, now I will turn you out from Kandahar." Sirdar Mohamed Ameen Khan also stated in his urzee that the person who had brought the news from Heerat says, that while he was returning from Heerat he had seen Meer Ufzul Khan, with two suwars, going from Dahmunde to Heerat to settle about the troops required for Kandahar. Having perused the letter, the Ameer held a council with Sirdars Peer Mohamed Khan, Shere Allee Khan, and Ghoolam Mohamed Khan, and asked their opinion about the subject. Sirdar Peer Mohamed Khan said that it was Sooltan Ahmed Jan who had been doing all this mischief; otherwise Ufzul dare not use this language towards Sirdar Mohamed Ameen Khan. Some Khandaree Khans are said to have gone over to Meer Ufzul Khan, and this has caused more uneasiness in the Ameer's mind.—April 17.—To-day the camp left Soorkh Aub for Jugdhaluck. The Ghilzie chiefs of this place presented to the Ameer, as customary, sheep, fowls, rice, ghee, &c. As some of the merchants who had accompanied the camp when marching to Jellalabad had been robbed at this place, and no trace as yet had been made by the thanadar, the Ameer ordered the thanadar to be discharged and a new one to be appointed in his place. The Ameer also desired the mullicks of Jugdhaluk to get a serai built, and ordered twenty Jazailchees to remain here to watch it. Having a pain in the foot, the Ameer did not feel well to day.—April 18.—To-day the camp arrived at Kuttah Sung. Sirdar Peer Mohamed Khan informed the Ameer that at Gundoomuck he had received a letter from Sirdar Sooltan Mohamed Khan, in which he said that the day he had arrived at Cabool he was taken ill, and was still suffering from the sickness. On Peer Mohamed's applying for three days' leave to go and see Sooltan Mohamed, the Ameer replied that he need not be afraid, as in two or three days he would be in Cabool. It is ascertained from the news letters received to-day by the Ameer from Toorkistan that the Meer of Mamana had gone to Sirdar Sooltan Ahmed Jan to Heerat, and begged of him to call back the troops from Mamana, and to give him the charge of the place. After a great deal of discussion it had been settled that the Meer was to pay eight thousand tila (gold coin) besides the expenses of the troops, to which he had willingly agreed. The above sum and money for the troops having been paid by the Ameer, Sirdar Sooltan Ahmed Jan had written to his brother at Mamana to march with the troops to Heerat, and to make over the place to the Meer. The Meer of Mamana, having thus made himself the master of the place, had marched with four thousand sowars to Hazara Jumshadee, and having persuaded those people, had been successful in bringing about three thousand families of that tribe to Momana. As the Jumshadees are famous for their bravery, the Meer had given them a place to reside in just close to the boundaries of Khanabad, and Indkhoe. Having looked over the Toorkistan news letter, the Ameer turned towards Ghoolam Mohamed Khan, and Peer Mohamed Khan, and said, "What do you think of this policy of Sooltan Ahmed Jan? what is his object in calling back his brother and the troops from Mamana?" "All these arrangements that Sooltan

Jan is making are for no other purpose than for Kandahar," replied Ghoolam Mohamed. "While we were at Jellalabad," continued the sirdar, "I heard a merchant saying that the King of Persia had written to Sooltan Ahmed Jan to call all the troops from Mamana and to send them to Furrak, as more troops would be sent from Teheran for Mamana and other places. As I did not place confidence in the merchant's story, I did not inform the Ameer of it, but now it seems that the merchant was quite right." "I am really very uneasy about the Kandahar affair," said the Ameer, as Mohamed Ameer Khan and Mohamed Shurreef Khan, both my sons, are very stubborn, and I do not know how they will manage the affairs.—April 19.—The Ameer's camp marched from Kuttah Sung and arrived at Tazeen. Aulejah Dost Mohamed Shah Khan Ghilzie, the brother of Mohamed Shah Khan, gave a grand zeafut (feast) to the Ameer and to all the khans and sirdars in the camp.—Delhi Gazette.

THE INDIA HOUSE.—It appears that the purchasers of the India House for £155,000 were Mr. Tite, M.P., Mr. Heywood, Mr. Kennard, and one or two other capitalists. The intention is to apply the site in supplying the great want in the city of large accommodation for public companies, rooms for public meetings, &c. A hope is expressed that it may be possible to spare the portico, which, although not a first-rate specimen of taste, is looked upon as a creditable work of the period, while the sculpture in the pediment possesses considerable interest.

THE AMALGAMATION IN BOMBAY.—The success of the Almagamation order has been very decided. Distrust has everywhere given place to confidence; the arrangements for the union of the two armies are acknowledged on all sides to be generally equitable, and, in some cases, even generous to the officers and men of the local regiments; and it is hoped that the spirit which has dictated so just a settlement of the conflicting claims of two glorious armies now made one will animate whoever may be charged with the future administration of military affairs. Volunteering for general service has in consequence rapidly progressed during the past week. The 1st Bombay European Regiment (fusilier), which will bear in future the honourable designation of "Royal," has volunteered en masse, officers and men; and in the other local European regiments on this side of India the volunteering has been almost equally satisfactory. In Bengal it would seem that less desire has been shown to accept at once the final conditions offered to the local army; but the comparative slowness with which the swearing in of volunteers for general service has gone on is said to be due to some mismanagement of details, and not to any want of inclination on the part of the "locals." On the whole, the change has been accomplished without violation, not only of the rights and privileges, but even of the prejudices of the Indian army. Still, there can be little doubt that the officers would still have opposed amalgamation, were it not that the masterly stroke of granting a bounty to the soldiers has been found by them irresistible, and that, deserted by the men, the officers were forced either to follow their lead, or to be left forsaken and alone, chiefs without an army.—Bombay Saturday Review.

MILITARY EXPEDITION INTO SIKKIM, &c.

From Lieut.-col. W. Mayhew, Adj.-gen. of the Army, to the Sec. to the Gov. of India, Military Department, No. 365A., dated April 15th, 1861.

Sir,—In forwarding, for submission to Government the final report of the operations of the Sikkim field force, I am instructed by the Commander-in-Chief to take the opportunity of drawing the special attention of the Gov.-gen. in Council to the admirable tact and judgment with which the operations in question have been uniformly conducted by Lieut.-Col. J. C. Gawler, 73rd reg., who commanded the expedition.

2. Although the force under Col. Gawler met with little opposition, too much praise cannot be given to his opinion be accorded to him for having so skilfully carried out his instructions, and brought the undertaking to a successful issue.

3. I am further to request you will solicit the attention of Govt. to the services of the officers of the expedition who were more particularly useful to Lieut.-col. Gawler.

4. The annexed extract of a letter to the Quarter-master Gen. of the army from Lieut.-col. Gawler, is also forwarded for the favourable consideration of Govt.

From Lieut.-col. J. C. Gawler, Com. Sikkim field force, to the Quarter-master Gen. of the Army, No. 157, dated Darjeeling, April 19th, 1861.

Sir,—I have the honour to report, for the information of H. E. the C.-in-C., that the durbar and signature of the treaty took place at Tumloong on the 29th ultimo. By moving forward troops from the Teesta, and supplying their place from post in rear, I was enabled, after leaving sufficient guard from each detachment in camp, to have present at the durbar, at the request of the special commissioner, force as per margin.*

On the following day I broke up camp, and with Mr. Eden's acquiescence proceeded—with 50 rank and file, H. M.'s 6th Reg. and fifty rank and file Baker's Sikhs, towards the Teesta, by the Linsing Ghaut road, sending Major Platt, H. M.'s 6th Royal Reg., back by our old road with the remainder of the force and supplies, of which we had a fortnight on hand. The rain fell in torrents during the nights of the 31st ultimo and 1st instant.

The country through which we passed had more cultivation than that we had hitherto seen. The road was bad, and I consider it a bad line for communication with Tumloong. It crosses numerous spurs, with very steep ascents and descents; it is intricate; and the villages at this season, and even earlier, are hot and unhealthy. For military purposes both its flanks are exposed, and it would require either numerous posts or large escorts for the protection of convoys.

The old road, by which he had marched to Tumloong, after ascending from the Teesta, keeps nearly the same level, with one flank always on the Teesta and Ryott, until towards the end of the last march, when you descend to cross the Ryott and from the neighbourhood of a post near Yantong, above the junction of the Teesta and Ryott, the whole line of road from the Teesta Bridge to Yantong, and the whole general line from Yantong to Kabee or Tumloong, is under the eye.

I arrived at the Teesta on the 2nd inst., and found that Major Platt and a great part of the stores had crossed the Teesta. Mr. Eden had proceeded to Darjeeling, and had intimated to me by letter that it would have a good effect if some troops were to march round by Rinchingpoong. I therefore halted at the Teesta during the 3rd inst., to make arrangements and leave final instructions with Major Platt, and proceeded, on the 4th inst., with fifty rank and file, H. M.'s 6th, and fifty rank and file, Baker's Sikhs, past the Yongong (or Neongong) Monastery, to the head of the Rungpo, at the foot of the pass on the Teesta side of the range. On the next day I crossed the range, and pushed on across the Runjeet, as the heavy rains that had fallen nearly every night rendered every delay a risk. On the 6th inst. I put the camp in motion, and as the road was now clear, and the remaining rivers securely bridged, I handed over command to Capt. Kendall, H. M.'s 6th regt., with the necessary instructions, and, accompanied by Capt. Murray, proceeded on through Rinchingpoong, Zung, and Goke, to Darjeeling, where I arrived at half-past nine o'clock P.M.

The road, commenced by my orders, from Goke now nearly joins that cut by Dr. Campbell from Rinchingpoong.

At Rinchingpoong I stayed about two hours, and examined the position in which Dr. Campbell was attacked. It was an open hillock, commanded on two sides by high ground covered with jungle, within easy musket-shot; and on the other sides approach could be made to within half-musket shot under cover of a steep bank also covered with jungle. The water was out of sight of, though at no great distance from the stockade, and was commanded by the high ground, and consequently in possession of the attacking force. I saw fifty or sixty boards in the neighbourhood of the stockade; each was about 5 feet 8 inches by 2 feet 8 inches, and from 2½ inches to 3 inches in thickness; they had been used as shields by the enemy in approaching the stockade. Several that I saw retained the sticks secured with cane that formed the handles; several had bullet-holes in them; in one I counted four, two of which only had gone through. I saw several places where human bodies had been burned, it being the custom of the enemy to burn the bones of their dead.

There was a very good position within 800 yards of the stockade which secured the water and all ground around it; open ground on two sides for long musket-shot, precipitous on a third side, and approachable only by a narrow ridge on the fourth. I understand, however, that they were unable to move their stores to that distance in time, and, in any case, their ammunition not being sufficient to last out another night, the posting of strong pickets of the enemy on their lines of communication with Darjeeling, and the information that that place was attacked, would have decided their retreat.

The road from the Runjeet to the Teesta, commenced by my orders when I entered Sikkim, has been finished; and I should recommend that every effort should now be made to finish the cart road between Punkaburri and Darjeeling, which will render the Government and private individuals less at the mercy of coolies than they are now.

The whole of the European troops are within our territory to-day; and in two or three days more the remainder of the stores and rear guard will have been withdrawn from Sikkim.

As the expedition is now at an end, and I have received his Excellency's instructions for the breaking up of the force, I feel it my duty to express my best thanks to Dr. Campbell, superintendent of Darjeeling, on whom rested the responsibility of the transport. In January, previous to the departure of the expedition, when doubts were entertained as to whether the coolies were to be depended on, Dr. Campbell expressed to Mr. Eden, Assistant Commissary Fitzgerald, and myself, his readiness to go himself into Sikkim with the coolies, sooner than that any failure should be risked. The management of the Hill coolies, I have learned by experience, is of a difficult and delicate nature; they are, I have before remarked, at once timid and independent. The coolie corps was unpopular, and coolies disliked the idea of accompanying the column, consequently its numbers were never materially increased, and frequent desertions took place. At the Teesta, at the end of February, Lieut. Becher, commanding coolie corps, had considerable difficulty in inducing the coolies to cross; and although a month's pay was due, sixteen deserted. Dr. Campbell's exertions, notwithstanding, procured coolies and bullocks to keep up the supplies in rear. When the force reached the Teesta, he procured "ticea" coolies to go to Namchi; and when I advanced to Tumloong he induced them to go to the Teesta, thus keeping supplies always within my reach, so that when I broke up camp at Kabee, on the 30th March, I had a fortnight's supplies on hand. There were upwards of three weeks' supplies at the Teesta, and five weeks' more at Namchi.

Besides this, Dr. Campbell had the entire feeding of the coolie corps, including the original hill-men, and latterly 250 Dhangar coolies. The supplies for them had to be procured from the plains, and forwarded to the column, and had these failed for a single day the consequences would have been serious.

I have frequently brought to H.E.'s notice the services rendered me by Major Maitland, commanding Convalescent depot, whose judicious arrangements in my rear relieved me of much anxiety.

I beg also to express my thanks to Major Platt, commanding wing, H.M.'s 6th Regt., for the activity he displayed when in command at the Teesta-bridge, in carrying out my instructions, and also, employed as he now is, in superintending the withdrawal of the remaining troops and stores from Sikkim.

To Lieut. Roberts, Royal Artillery, who is an active and intelligent officer, and thoroughly acquainted with his profession.

To Capt. Baker, commanding military police, who was ever ready, and to whose qualifications for command the smartness at all times and good behaviour of his men testified.

To Capt. Impey, B.E., field engr., whose services on various occasions I have brought to the notice of H. E.

To Capt. Murray, Com. Sebundy sappers, Asst. Superint., whose numerous vocations, civil and military, rendered his position extremely difficult, but who, nevertheless, carried out with energy and spirit all I required of him.

The assistance I have always received from my personal staff has already elicited H. E.'s approbation.

Extract from a letter from Lieut.-col. Gawler, Com. Sikkim field force, to the Qr.-mr. Gen. of the Army, No. 123, dated March 12th, 1861.

For the safe and prosperous condition in which I now find myself, with regard to supplies and important arrangements in rear, I am much indebted to Major Maitland, 79th Highlanders, in whose charge I left them, with command and general supervision, as far as Namchi, giving him as well as I could foresee an outline of my intentions. He has been most unremitting in his exertions to carry out my wishes, and has enabled me to move forward with a confidence which I could not otherwise have possessed.

"I have received every assistance from the staff and regimental officers of the force, but would specially recommend to the notice of H.E. the C. in C., Lieut. Fryer, 2nd Rifle brigade, officiating brigade major. This officer has shown great ability, and by his assiduous attention has afforded me the greatest assistance; also Lieut. Delafosse,* with whose previous career, H.E. must be already acquainted, and who has proved himself an energetic, enterprising, and intelligent officer."

From Lieut. col. J. C. Gawler, H.M.'s 73rd Regt., comdg. at Darjeeling to the Q. M. gen. of the Army.—Dated April 24, 1861.

Sir,—I have the honour herewith to forward for the information of H.E. the C. in C., the report of Capt. Impey, field engineer to the Sikkim field force on the various works executed by his department during the expedition, many of which have already been brought by myself to H.E.'s notice.

I fully concur in the opinions Capt. Impey has expressed regarding Lieuts. Pierson and Carter, Bengal engineers, and the works and surveys executed by them, as also in the mention he has made of Sub-Lieut. Hydayut Ali, 1st Batt. military police. This officer has frequently attracted my notice by his intelligence, zeal, and personal exertions, whether on the march or with working parties, affording the best example to those under him and the greatest support to his commanding officer.

The map alluded to by Capt. Impey I shall shortly have the honor of presenting to H.E. in Calcutta.

From Capt. Archibald Impey, Chief Engineer, Sikkim Field Force, to Lieut. col. Gawler, brigdr., comdg. Sikkim Field Force, dated Darjeeling, April 10, 1861.

Sir,—The field force under your command having returned from Sikkim, the object for which it was assembled having been accomplished, I have now the honour of reporting to you the several duties that were performed by my contingent of your force.

2. The operations devolving on the engineer department involved the bridging of three considerable hill streams,—the Great Runjeet, the Teesta, and the Rumaon, the opening out of roads for the force, and in one instance the erection of buildings for the storage and protection of stores.

3. On my arrival at Darjeeling I found that no sapper sergeant to assist me in taking charge of the engineer park had arrived, in fact, that the engineer park itself was at Punkaburee, from whence, owing to the scarcity of coolies and the existing necessity of employing them in conveyance of commissariat stores, its speedy removal was problematical.

4. Collecting, therefore, on the spot such tools as the executive engineer and the Bazar could supply me with, I directed Lieut. Pierson to proceed to Goke to make a road from that post to the point selected on the Rumaon by myself and Lieut. Pierson, at which to cross and to collect all materials and construct a timber bridge at the spot.

5. How Lieut. Pierson performed the task committed to his sole charge will be hereafter referred to.

6. You are aware that I was obliged to abandon the first intention of crossing the Great Runjeet by a bridge of casks owing to the paucity of such of a favourable size, and because those of smaller dimensions had been rendered unavailable by their being drilled with holes perforated by a worm.

7. It was necessary to prepare rafts on shore to allow of short exposure to the fire of the enemy, when the bridge should be required. On the 29th of January I proceeded to the Great Runjeet, tested, with the assistance of Captain Baker and Lieutenant Beavan with Sikhs and Sappers, a raft peculiarly made of bamboos, and found that such thus constructed would support sixteen men. It merely remained therefore to adapt this material so as to ensure its bearing a greater weight. Orders were issued to Lieutenant Beavan, of the Sebundy sappers, to collect bamboos at the Runjeet, and coolies were despatched for cane, with which the rafts were to be tied and guided. A small field work to be made of gabions was also ordered by me to protect the guard for defence of working party employed in throwing the bridge across. On the 31st January the engineer park composed of seventy coolies and five sirdars moved down to the Great Runjeet, and I found that the field-work had been completed by Lieut. Beavan. The sappers and miners sergeants not having arrived, Sergeant Dunne, of the Sebundy sappers, was placed in charge of these men as park sergeant.

8. On the 1st I commenced making the rafts, being sheltered by a high bank from the fire of the enemy; towards the afternoon, at 3 P.M., the rafts being completed, I selected a place, down which to slide them to the river bank. The enemy's fire becoming heavy, two rafts only remaining to be taken down, and it being your order that I was not to expose the working parties too much, I desisted from sending down these two.

On the 2nd, early in the morning, the two remaining rafts were placed alongside the others. A demonstration on our part by the fire of artillery and musketry being made, I commenced moving the rafts near to the site selected for the bridge, and lacing the first two rafts together floated them into their proper positions; the other rafts, three in number, were then gradually lowered down to the causeway then made and were hauled into position. The bridge was sufficiently completed by about 1 o'clock to allow of troops being crossed.

9. As regards these operations, I particularly bring to your notice for favourable consideration Capt. Baker, from whom I received the greatest assistance, and Lieuts. Wauchope and Hawes, who also rendered willing aid. Of Lieut. Beavan, who was in command of the Sebundy sappers at the Runjeet, who for a month previously had been erecting a bridge over the Runghoo, making roads, and collecting material for these rafts, I cannot write too highly; and Lieut. Hydayut Ali, of Baker's Sikhs, rendered his personal assistance, and so encouraged and showed his men how to work, as to draw upon himself the applause of all present.

10. The bridge of rafts was 120 feet in length and ten feet in width; it was strengthened, and strong guy cables were attached. The appearance was that of strength and lightness.

11. Lieut. Beavan with a working party of the Sebundy sappers, and of the engineers park, was employed on the road between the Runjeet and Mikk, not in making a good road, but in removing any obstacles and widening it in such places as to allow of the safe passage of cattle. Arriving at Mikk some of the men of the sappers and of the park, were employed in cutting a new path up the steep hill towards Namchi, as the existing path was exceedingly bad, being simply a track. Parties of the Sebundy sappers, and of the Engineer park, were left by me to complete a traversable path between Mikk and Namchi, and I proceeded with force to Namchi, on 9th February.

12. From that date up to the 15th the engineer park, and a portion of the Sebundy sappers, with the aid of the Sikhs, were employed in making a road from Namchi to Sumdoupchi (up an exceedingly steep ascent) in preparing a store shed for the Commissariat, and in collecting material, &c., for a block-house. I may here mention that the absence of proper tools in the engineer park was almost a stumbling-block to this work, as I had only one saw and one chisel in it. At Namchi Sergeants Dickson and O'Hara, of the Bengal Sappers and Miners, arrived. Sergeant Dickson was appointed to the charge of the park, vice Serg. Dunne, and Serg. O'Hara was sent off to join Lieut. Pierson at Goke. It being considered expedient that the road in our rear, viz., from the Runjeet to Namchi, where a commissariat depot was formed, should be made sufficiently good so as to allow of cattle being employed in the conveyance of stores, Lieut. Beavan was appointed by you asst. field engr., and was deputed to carry out this work and to superintend the completion of the store there and block-house; thirty-seven of the Sebundy sappers and miners were attached to him.

13. On the 14th I marched up to Sumdoupchi, having sent on the park coolies to Buckcheem, and proceeding through Buckcheem, on the 15th picked up to thirty-six Sebundy sappers, and reached Temi in the evening. I was obliged to leave my park behind, as there was not sufficient coolies with the column under my command to convey the requisite commissariat stores and the bedding of the men. Slendering down Mount Tendong, the summit of which, with snow lying there, we crossed, the Sebundy sappers were employed cutting a passage for the mules; this delayed our march exceedingly.

14. Whilst halting at Temi, I employed the park coolies and sebundies in preparing the road down to the Teesta for the mules, and in making a road to the spring of water at Temi.

15. When I reached Rodong Ghaut, on the 24th February, a place at which you determined on crossing the Teesta, I examined the river and selected the most suitable site at which to construct the bridge. Half of the 25th was comparatively lost, unfortunately. Parties of the Sebundy Sappers were sent with Park coolies to cut timbers and bamboos, the cane for tying having been previously collected by Park coolies, whilst we halted on the 22nd, 23rd, and 24th at Linzing Ghaut. On the 26th and 27th, up to 4 P.M. of the afternoon of the 28th, parties of H.M.'s 6th, of the Sikh, Sebundy Sappers, and Park coolies were employed in conveying, cutting timber and bamboos, in forming and in completing the bridge. The number of workmen employed the three and a-half days was five hundred and twenty. The total number of working hours was twenty-eight; the bridge in length was 220 feet, in width average of 8; there were six piers and one abutment (excluding from the calculation two rocks which served as piers); the height of made piers of stone averaged 6 feet, the two largest spans from rock to rock, and from the latter to shore were 41 and 35 feet, the timbers thrown across, these were 53 and 45 feet in length; there was no tackle to assist in moving such large timber; some of them were cut a quarter of a mile up the stream, and floated down, and the stream was running at the rate of at least fourteen miles per hour between the rocks. I have not heard of nor have I read of any bridge of this size having been constructed within so short a space of time, bearing in mind that no material lay at the spot, and that all had to be cut, and nearly all had to be brought on shoulders.

16. Most conspicuous was Lieutenant Hydayut Ali, of Baker's Sikhs, in the assistance he afforded me, not only by encouraging his men to emulate himself, but also by his ability in devising fresh, and improving on many, devices which I had suggested. I should be wanting in my duty to you if I did not bring him conspicuously to your notice, to enable you to do justice to him. All the parties of troops employed at this bridge most cordially endeavoured to promote a speedy completion of this work, otherwise it could not have been accomplished in so remarkably, and, I may truly add, marvellously short time.

17. At the Teesta I left a portion of my park establishment, some Sebundy sappers, and some tools, under Sergt. Dunne. Sergt. Dickson erected a small guard at the bridge head, and Sergt. Dunne, at the request of Maj. Platt, of H.M.'s 6th foot (who commanded the post at the Teesta on our departure), threw up on the plateau above the bridge a stone-work with an embrasure in it.

18. On our journey to Tumloong the sappers and the few of the engineer establishments remaining with me were constantly employed in preparing portions of the way before us, so that we have left behind us, between Rhadoon Ghaut and Kabec, a road easily to be traversed, excepting at the Munundee, and even that portion has been much improved by the sappers.

19. Whilst awaiting our departure from Tumloong I sent orders to Sergeant Dunne, at your request, to make a road from Buckcheem round Mount Tendong, down to Linsing ghaut, in order that the whole route from the Great Runjeet, down to the Teesta river at that point, might become a good hill road. When I passed by the old road from our first encamping ground at the Teesta, I found Sergeant Dunne's party at work at a very fair road down to Linsing ghaut, but a small portion had to be completed; the road up to Temi was a very good one, from thence up to Buckcheem the road, excepting round Mount Tendong, is not so good; this is, however, accounted for by the nature of the soil, and the constant moisture arising from the thickness of the jungle, the sun hardly ever penetrating it.

20. Buckcheem to Sumdoupchi the road is much better. From Sumdoupchi to Namchi the road is very good, considering the want of width of ridge and the steepness.

21. At Namchi I found an exceedingly good store shed, one hundred feet in length and twenty-five wide. The Block House was completed excepting the thatching of the roof. I do not consider that the latter work has been carried on with the energy with which it should have been.

22. The road from Namchi to the Great Runjeet is an exceedingly good road, and with slight annual repairs will continue so for many years.

23. In the beginning of this paper I mentioned that I would further allude to Lieut. Pierson's services. Lieut. Pierson had not been three months in this country when he was ordered to join your force—was, therefore, unversed in the language—in truth, was "au bout de son Latin." He set to work with a determination to conquer all difficulties, and has most admirably succeeded. Unaided at first, until Sergt. O'Hara joined him, with only the refuse of the sappers at his disposal, these men scarcely comprehending him, he conquered the tenacity of those who had been solely accustomed to construct bridges of a local standard, and succeeded in throwing over the Rumaon one which reflects great credit on himself, and shows what ability combined with energy can effect. Whilst carrying out this work, though short absences therefrom resulted in absurd mistakes being committed by these men, still he succeeded in constructing, with about fifty-three of the 73rd Native Infantry, about eleven miles of excellent road to the river Rumaon and thence toward Rinchinpoong; ordered to join your force and accompanying the same from the Teesta to Darjeeling, he has secured a survey of the ground traversed by you, and thus has materially added to the knowledge and information desired; and this, together with the excellent survey and sketches of Lieut. Carter, of the engineers, taken of the country through which we marched on Tumloong will be valuable, being a correct and as clear a map of those portions of the country as could be produced by any one with the means, opportunities, and time at their command.

24. In conclusion, I would bring to your favourable notice the services of Sergeants Dickson and O'Hara, of the Bengal sappers and miners; Sergt. Dickson in my presence, and Sergt. O'Hara in that of Lieut. Pierson, having performed their duties to our satisfaction.

25. I herewith forward the map above referred to.

THE ORDER OF THE BATH.—(War-office, June 25).—The Queen has been graciously pleased to give orders for the appointment of Major-general George Hall Macgregor, C.B., some time employed as Military Commissioner attached to the camp of Jung Bahadoor during the late mutiny in India, to be an Ordinary Member of the Civil Division of the Second Class, or Knights Commanders, of the Most Honourable Order of the Bath.

EXECUTION OF A WOMAN AT BOMBAY.—The woman Gunga, who was condemned to death at the Supreme Court of Bombay, for the murder of a child, for the sake of its ornaments, suffered the extreme penalty of the law in uniformity with the sentence passed upon her. A few days before the execution, perceiving that her situation had occasioned the loss of caste, and that she would not receive the rite of burial from them, she embraced the Mahomedan religion. When led to the gallows, she at first showed firmness, but trembled violently when she mounted the steps. On seeing the multitude below she burst into a paroxysm of tears which lasted till the drop fell. In three minutes life was extinct. The body after remaining suspended for the usual time, was cut down, and delivered over to her friends for interment in the Mahomedan burial ground.

RAILWAYS IN INDIA.

THERE can be no doubt that the future prosperity of our Indian possessions will depend, in a great measure, upon facility of communication between the interior of the country and the seaboard. For bulky goods, such as cotton, it is probable that navigable rivers and canals will furnish the best and cheapest means of transport, and with such traffic time is a matter of secondary consideration. But for all other purposes, for the conveyance of articles of manufacture, grain, mineral products, and passengers, the early completion of arterial lines of railway is of the most urgent importance. Since the suppression of the mutiny very creditable progress has been made in that direction, and it is satisfactory to know that the Home and the Indian Governments are equally sensible of the necessity of pushing forward the works now in hand with the least possible delay. The present condition of these great engineering undertakings is clearly set forth in Mr. Juland Danvers' annual report for the year 1860-61, an abridgment of which may not be unacceptable to our readers.

On the 1st January, 1860, there were 634 miles of railway open for traffic, and in the following twelve months 208 additional miles were completed; of these 842 miles only 100 are constructed with double lines of rail. Since the commencement of the present year, however, 211 miles have been opened, and considerable progress made in sectional works. By the completion of the line from Calcutta to Rajmahal it becomes possible to avoid 250 miles of a difficult and dangerous navigation, though it is very doubtful how far the natives will avail themselves of an advantage which is counterbalanced by the necessity of transferring their goods from one kind of carriage to another.

No new lines have lately been sanctioned, and the following have been postponed for a time:—From Allahabad to Jubbulpore, 227 miles; from Delhi to Lahore, 240 miles; from Sholapore to Bellary, 183 miles; the extension of the Great Southern of India and the Eastern Bengal Railways; and the line proposed by the Oude Railway Company. The total length of the different lines actually in course of construction is 2,932½ miles, of which it is expected that 1,353½ miles will be opened before the close of the current year. The great trunk line from Calcutta to Delhi will be, it is said, in working order some time in 1862. The magnitude of these works may in some degree be imagined from the quantity of materials sent out from this country. During the past year no less than 234,710 tons were shipped for India, amounting in value to £2,140,703. Among other benefits conferred by railways is the employment they afford to large numbers of individuals. For instance, on 686 miles of opened railway on the 1st of October, 1860, there were employed 1,137 Europeans and 17,552 natives; the latter being found eligible for many posts for which at first they appeared unsuitable. As stationmasters they earn from £5 to £15 a month, and as guards from £7. 10s. to £15, while skilled native labour is worth from tenpence to a shilling a day, and ordinary labour from 2½d. to 4d. Great pains have been taken by the Madras Railway Company to train natives for the various departments of works, and fair success has attended these efforts. The natives, however, do not answer as engine-drivers, being deficient in judgment, self-reliance, and presence of mind; but as engine-fitters and erectors, boiler-smiths, carriage-fitters, &c., &c., they give promise of future excellence, though not equal to the Eurasians. Engine-drivers sent from England earn as much as £20 a month, but those trained in the country are content to receive from £12 to £16. As it is obvious that railways without "feeders" are like rivers without tributaries, the Home Government has directed the attention of the local authorities to the necessity of making roads to bring traffic to the different lines. The Madras Government has in consequence given its sanction to the construction of forty-three roads of the aggregate length of 1,083 miles. These roads, it is true, will be little better than cross-country tracks, but even that is an improvement on the existing state of things. The speed of passenger trains would be thought slow in this country, being little more than twenty miles an hour, but that is a wonderful advance upon the old rate of travelling.

The financial position of the Indian Railway Companies is far from satisfactory, though quite in keeping with the experience of English lines. In all cases the estimated cost falls far below the actual expenditure, while the difficulty of procuring the requisite funds increases with the necessity of possessing them. It is now stated that the total capital acquired for the completion of the various lines that have been sanctioned is £55,680,000, of which £45,949,300 have the benefit of the Government guarantee—namely, £35,192,540 raised by share capital, and £10,756,760 by debentures. But the total amount actually raised is only £34,396,445, of which £34,042,128 have already been advanced to the companies. The share capital represents the sum of £26,890,723, and debentures £6,835,770, while the total amount raised in India is no more than £669,952. There remains, therefore, an unprovided balance of £21,283,555, which must sooner or later be raised by the different companies, with or without the aid of Government. A third portion of this large deficit, indeed, will be allowed to stand over for the present, but still at least fourteen millions must be obtained and expended in the course of the next three years, and it is admitted that "before the arrival of the year 1864 it will have to be considered whether the postponed works, as well as the extensions of the Great Southern and the Eastern Bengal Railway should not be commenced. If this question is decided in the affirmative the expenditure would be raised to, and maintained at, from two-and-a-half to three millions a year for that and the three following years."

The sums paid by the Government of India on account of guaranteed interest amount to £5,299,709, minus £880,331, the net profits up to the 30th of June last. The annual amount at present due from the Government is about £1,450,000, which will be increased at the end of the current year by £350,000 to £400,000; but, on the other hand, the annual earnings of the railways are already estimated at £400,000, which must be set off against the Government guarantee. The total number of proprietors is 17,118, of whom only 679 are registered in India, and even of these no more than 336 are natives of that country, for whose benefit these lines are, in the first instance, designed. The total number of passengers conveyed in 1860 over the 723 miles open of the East India, the Great Indian Peninsula, and the Madras lines was 3,924,695, of whom 33,792 were first-class, 254,614 second-class, and 3,636,289 third-class. The total receipts were £600,837—namely, £224,326 from passenger traffic, £313,686 from merchandise, and £62,825 from carriage of railway materials. As the working expenses were £283,148, the net profits realised amounted to £317,691. The working expenses, it is stated, will be gradually reduced by the employment of native labour and the consumption of native fuel, and it is well that such should be the case, for it appears that the cost of construction, instead of being £12,000 a mile, as originally estimated, is upwards of £16,000, so that to produce a profit of five per cent. there must be a revenue of £1,100,000, instead of £802,950, as formerly computed. This great increase of cost is not surprising when we contemplate the vastness of the works in progress, some of which are without parallel in respect to magnitude and engineering difficulties. In India, as elsewhere, engineers appear to have been more studious of their own fame than of the profits of the shareholders. In order to save the trifling distance of three miles, the sum of £600,000 will have been expended in boring through the 900 feet of the Monghyr Tunnel. This arduous operation was commenced in March, 1856, and is not yet finished, as one-third of the entire length is through an extremely hard quartz rock. The Soane Bridge, again, will consist of twenty-seven iron lattice spans of 150 feet each—the piers standing each on three wells of eighteen feet diameter, sunk through thirty feet of sand to the substratum of clay. But these works sink into comparative insignificance in presence of the Bhore Ghât and Tull Ghât Inclines, which cannot, however, be clearly described without the aid of diagrams. They are truly stupendous undertakings, and will doubtless reflect great credit on all employed in their construction; but how far they may prove profitable to the shareholders is a question upon which we are, fortunately, not called upon to express an opinion.

CORRESPONDENCE.

THE NEW INDIAN STAFF CORPS.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—Knowing the interest you have always taken in the Indian army, I would call your attention to the late Amalgamation Scheme, lately published in your columns, of the Indian army with the English army, and the formation of a staff corps for service in India at each of the three Presidencies; with the hope that it may be the means of eliciting some information as to the intent and meaning of several of its provisions.

The Royal Warrant, authorising the formation of a staff corps, gives a distinct pledge that the rights and claims of the officers of her Majesty's Indian forces shall be scrupulously adhered to; the Governor-general of India reiterates the same in the General Orders promulgated to the army; and the officers are invited to make their election to join the staff corps or the line, or to remain in their present position in the old local army.

Now, in making so momentous a change, seriously affecting the interests of a large body of deserving officers and their future prospects, the terms and conditions of joining a newly-organised service cannot be too clearly stated, free from every ambiguity and doubt; and I believe such to be the intention of the Government; yet as there seems to be some uncertainty in para. 98, which has caused a good deal of anxiety amongst the officers, I will quote it entire.

98. "Officers of the staff corps under the rank of major-general, whom the Government of India may not see fit to employ in any capacity, will not be allowed to draw pay for more than four years, of which one may be on the Indian scale, and three years on the scale fixed for officers out of India, after which period they will be placed on half-pay or pension, according to the scale of their rank, if entitled thereto."

Para. 99 exhibits the scale of pay for unemployed officers whilst required to remain in India; also out of India. The former only to be engaged for one year unless he is of the rank of major-general, when Indian pay is to be extended to three years. [See para. 97.]

Now, the young officer reasons thus: I have passed the necessary examinations, am found qualified, and willing to join the staff corps, with the prospect held out to me of fixed promotion and pensions after a specified number of years. [See para. 84.] Yet para. 98 would seem to imply that without any fault of my own, either from my appointment being done away with and for want of interest to get another, I am liable to be put upon English pay (even in India) after one year, and in three years more put upon half-pay or pensioned off; whereas by remaining in my present position, nothing short of loss of health, incapacity, or want of character, would cut off my future prospects of employment and advancement to the higher ranks of office and emolument.

That the Government can never intend to act unjustly towards the officers who join the staff corps, or to break faith with them is very evident; still the paragraph in question, worded as it is, admits of a doubtful interpretation, and would open the door to much injustice and favouritism in the distribution of the patronage to the staff appointments by the local governors; and, as some explanation would seem to be necessary to allay the fears of the officers, and make it more easy for them how to elect under the Amalgamation Scheme, perhaps you will insert this in an early number of your paper, and oblige

AN OLD INDIAN OFFICER.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

DEAR SIR,—In your last issue, with reference to applications for the staff corps by Indian officers on furlough or on medical certificate in this country, you state that application should be made to the "former commanding officer in India." Now does that mean regimental commanding officer, or head of the department in which an officer may have served on the staff? By answering this question, you will oblige, yours truly,

M. A.

IMPERIAL PARLIAMENT.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—JUNE 18.

EAST INDIA COUNCILS AND HIGH COURTS OF JUDICATURE (SALARIES, &c.).

On the question that the House go into Committee on this subject,

Sir H. WILLOUGHBY complained that in one of the Bills now before Parliament two new members of Council were to be appointed at salaries of £8,000 a-year each; and also that great additional patronage was given to the Governor-general and the Secretary for India in the appointment of judges.

The House went into Committee, when a resolution was agreed to on which to found a Bill.

INDIAN PRIZE MONEY.

Sir H. VERNEY asked the Secretary of State for India whether interest was paid by the Calcutta Treasury on the prize money paid into it; whether any interest was paid on jewels and other booty before it was realised; and whether, in future, when booty was taken in India, which it was anticipated would be prize, officers in command of corps were to send in at once the nominal roll, without waiting for the Royal Warrant declaring such booty to be prize?

Sir C. WOOD said that interest was paid on prize money in the Treasury at Calcutta at the rate of 5 per cent. No interest was paid on jewels or property not in the state of money. He could not say when the payment of interest on the money would cease, or whether interest would be paid on jewels, &c., when realised. No notice had been given of those questions, and it was impossible for him to answer in detail questions of this kind without the opportunity of informing himself. With regard to the preparation of prize rolls, officers in India had been desired as regarded the present prize to prepare them some time ago, and directions had been given that for the future prize rolls should be made out without waiting for the declaration of prize.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—JUNE 19.

INDIA BILLS.

The report of the Committee on the East India Council and High Court of Judicature (Salaries, &c.) was brought up and agreed to.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—JUNE 20.

EAST INDIA COUNCIL, &c., BILL.

In the House of Commons, on the order for the House to go into Committee on the East India Council, &c., Bill, a short discussion took place, and Mr. SCULLY moved that the Bill be referred to a Select Committee; but the motion was not seconded, and the House went into Committee on the Bill.

On the second clause, repealing certain Acts and parts of Acts,

Mr. AYRTON, insisting upon the advantages that would result from additional local Governments in India, and in particular a local Legislative Council and fixed Governor in Bengal, moved to amend the clause by repealing the 5th and 6th William IV., cap. 52, and portions of the 10th and 17th Victoria, cap. 95, in order to revive the 3rd and 4th William IV., cap. 85, establishing separate Governments at Calcutta and Agra.

Sir C. WOOD said the Bill provided for the establishment of local Governments. There would be a separate Administration for Bengal; but, though concurring generally in the views of Mr. Ayrton, he was not prepared at present to impose unnecessary charges upon the revenues of India, which would be the consequence of establishing separate Governments for Agra and other provinces, with Governors sent from England, for which the time was not ripe. He could not consent to the repeal of the Suspending Acts.

The amendment was ultimately withdrawn, and the clause agreed to.

On the 3rd clause, enacting what shall be the composition of the Council of the Governor-general of India, various amendments were moved, but, after discussion, were withdrawn.

On the 10th clause, which empowered the Governor-general to summon additional members to the Council for the purpose of making laws and regulations, provided that not less than one-half of the persons so nominated shall be non-official persons,

Mr. LAYARD moved to add, "and provided that not less than one-fourth of such additional Members of Council shall be natives of India."

Sir C. WOOD repeated what he had said upon introducing the Bill, that he believed it to be essential that the natives of India should be more largely admitted into the Government; but, as there was no distinction by law between any classes of the subjects of her Majesty in India, he objected to mentioning any class by name in the Bill, which said nothing either of exclusion or non-exclusion.

Lord STANLEY recommended that this matter should be left to the Secretary of State and the Governor-general of India, since it would be difficult to find a sufficient number of natives who would be recognized by a large portion of the natives of India as their representatives.

Mr. LAYARD ultimately withdrew his amendment upon the understanding that Sir C. Wood would send out a despatch to India directing the admission of natives to the Council.

The question whether the additional members should be appointed for one year, as proposed by the 11th clause, or for a longer term, was much discussed, Mr. Vansittart having moved that the term be five years, Mr. Bright suggesting three or two years; eventually, the latter term was substituted.

Upon the 19th clause, which empowered the Governor-general in Council to make rules and regulations for the conduct of business at the meetings of the Legislative Council, and to prescribe the mode of their promulgation and authentication, the expediency of admitting the public to the meetings and publishing reports of the proceedings was debated at some length.

The term of nomination of the additional members of Council for Madras and Bombay, limited by the Bill to one year, was extended to two years, an attempt to prolong it to three years being defeated on a division.

The remaining clauses and a new clause were agreed to.

On the next order, for the committal of the East India (High Courts of Judicature) Bill, some time was consumed in discussing whether, at that hour, it should or should not be postponed. In the end the committee was deferred, temporarily, till the following day.

HOUSE OF LORDS.—JUNE 21.

INDIAN NAVY.

Lord ELLENBOROUGH asked the Duke of Somerset what arrangements had been made for placing a sufficient force of her Majesty's ships at the disposal of the Indian Government to supply the place of the Indian navy since its reduction by Mr. Laing, and whether the expense would fall upon the Indian or English Treasury.

The Duke of Somerset believed that the Indian Government had taken sufficient funds for this year to provide such a naval service as it required. The whole matter, however, was still under the consideration of her Majesty's Government.

INDIAN LOAN.

Lord DE GREY and RIPON, in moving the second reading of the East Indian Loan Bill, explained that the necessity for the loan did not arise from any deficiency of income in India, but from the state of the cash balances in the home Treasury.

The Bill was read a second time.

APPOINTMENT OF NATIVES TO THE MEDICAL SERVICE.

Lord MONTEAGLE, in presenting a petition from certain British subjects, natives of India, complaining of their exclusion from the competitive examinations for appointments to office, called the attention of the House to various Acts of Parliament and to the Royal proclamation to the natives of India, admitting the eligibility of the natives to hold offices the duties of which they were qualified to perform. In spite of these enactments, he said certain Parsee gentlemen who had studied medicine in this country had not been admitted to the competition for the appointments of the Army Medical Department. He only claimed for them what he believed to be their right, and contended that the law ought not to be perverted by official prerogative.

Lord HERBERT explained that the words of the Royal proclamation guaranteed appointments to natives in India only, but not in the general service of the Crown. In the case of these Parsee gentlemen, he considered them not physically qualified for the situations to which they aspired, and he had been confirmed in that opinion by Dr. Gibson, Director-General of the Army Medical Department; Sir John Liddell, Director-General of the Naval Medical Department; and Sir R. Martin, a gentleman of great experience in India.

Lord ELLENBOROUGH bore the highest testimony to the qualifications of the native doctors, preferring them, if in India, to those of Europeans. He did not see any reason why native medical officers should not be employed under the general direction of Europeans, as they would fairly meet the wants of the service.

Lord CLANRICARDE and Lord DE GREY and RUPON having said a few words, the petition was ordered to lie on the table.

INDIAN OFFICERS.

Colonel SYKES asked in what manner the provisions of the Acts the 21st and 22nd of Victoria, cap. 106, and the 22nd and 23rd of Victoria, cap. 27, are to be carried out in respect to the officers of the local armies of India who will be thrown out of employment by the reduction of the former fixed establishment, as directed by the recent Amalgamation Order. He explained the position of these officers, and their claims, founded upon guarantees contained in the Acts referred to.

Sir C. Wood, in answer to Colonel Sykes, said the question raised by him had nothing to do with the guarantee; that the conversion of the Bengal local army from regulars to irregulars had taken place before the Amalgamation Order; and that with regard to the armies of Madras and Bombay they were not yet converted, and when done it would be done gradually.

MISCELLANEOUS.

INDIAN DEPUTATION.—On Wednesday a deputation waited upon Sir Charles Wood, the Secretary of State for India, on the subject of the Civil Service (India) Bill, consisting of the following members of Parliament and gentlemen, members of the Indian Civil Service. The deputation was introduced by Mr. Vansittart, M.P.:—Sir James Elphinstone, M.P., Sir Edward Colebrooke, M.P., Sir Harry Verney, M.P., Mr. Adam, M.P., Sir F. Heygate, M.P., Mr. Layard, M.P., Mr. Torrens, M.P., Mr. Marjoribanks, M.P., Mr. Kennard, M.P., Mr. Danby Seymour, M.P., Mr. Ayrton, M.P., Mr. Longfield, M.P., Mr. Perry Watlington, M.P., Mr. W. BISHOPRIC OF MADRAS.—His Grace the Archbishop of Canterbury has, we learn, appointed Saturday next, being St. Peter's-day, for the consecration of the Rev. Frederick Gell, D.D., to be Bishop of Madras, in the room of the Rev. Thomas Dealtry, D.D., deceased. The ceremony is to take place in the chapel at Lambeth Palace, and to commence at 11 o'clock. The Archbishop will be assisted in the consecration by the Bishops of London, Durham, Chester, and Carlisle. The Bishop (Designate) has requested the Rev. J. Y. Nicholson, M.A., rector of Aller, in the county of Somerset, and late Fellow of Emmanuel College, Cambridge, to preach on the occasion. The letters patent appointing Dr. Gell were to have received the Great Seal on Tuesday morning, but since the Lord Chancellor's sudden death the Lord President of the Council has, we observe, surrendered the Great Seal of England into the hands of her Majesty. It is confidently expected that special arrangements will be made for the sealing, so as to avoid a postponement of the consecration.

THE BOMBAY, BARODA, AND CENTRAL INDIA RAILWAY COMPANY.—The eleventh report of this company states that up to the beginning of April last the mileage open had reached 110 miles, and that by the 10th inst., that distance would be further increased to 173 miles, including the Nerbudda Viaduct, 3,700 feet in length, the most difficult work on our line, erected, as in the case of the Taptee, over a great tidal river. The directors have no reason to doubt that these anticipations will have been verified. This will give a continuous line of 139 miles, from the Mhye river to Omulsaree southward, with a detached portion of thirty-four miles, on the north of that river to Meemoodabad, open for traffic. Advices from India further show that the Mhye river is expected to be bridged, and the line completed from Omulsaree to Ahmedabad, making 191 continuous miles finished by the 1st of January next. Efforts are being made, by means of arrangements with existing steamship companies, to forward passengers and goods from Omulsaree to Bombay, pending the completion of the southern portion of the line, to secure which vigorous measures are in progress. The total quantity of materials shipped from March, 1856, when the shipping of materials commenced, to 12th inst. is 107,000 tons weight and measurement. The directors have the satisfaction of stating that his Highness the Guicowar of Baroda has undertaken the construction of a tramway of twenty miles in length, from this company's station at Meagaum to Dhubhoe, which is intended to be completed by the next cotton season, and will form a very important feeder to our line. The proprietors will learn with regret that a serious accident had occurred at the Wishwamuntree Iron-bridge, near Baroda, caused by the malicious placing of an iron rail across the permanent way, close to the standards, at the end of the bridge. It is, however, a source of congratulation that no life was lost, whilst the occurrence took place in a manner to afford a most satisfactory and valuable test of the strength of the iron bridges, which form so important a feature in the construction of this line. The reports received from India continue to confirm the anticipation of a large traffic. They state that the contracts made for coast transmission of cotton by the country boats are at a rate equivalent to three halfpence per ton per mile, and that merchants profess their willingness to pay twice that amount of rate for railway transport, owing to the saving of time and security from peculation, and damage by the sea water, which would be gained, and which they estimate would more than compensate for such extra charge. Application having been made to the Government for an extension of capital, authority has been obtained to raise a further sum of £700,000 by the issue of 35,000 additional shares of £20 each, on which the Right Hon. the Secretary of State for India in Council guarantees interest at the rate of 5 per cent. per annum. The directors are prepared to receive applications from proprietors for this share capital; meanwhile the Secretary of State for India is making advances thereon for the purpose of carrying on the works without delay.

COOLIE EMIGRATION.—During the season 1859-60, 8,050 emigrants to the West Indies were despatched from Calcutta and 1,839 from Madras; the mortality in the Madras ships was only 1.19 per cent., but in the Calcutta ships it unhappily reached 12.11 per cent., owing to cholera making its appearance in several soon after their departure. 9,692 coolies were embarked from India for the same quarter in the season 1860-61, and 3,300 Chinese were "ordered," as the phrase is, for British Guiana. During the last four seasons the Indian emigration to the West Indies has amounted to 25,943, nearly half being females; indeed, the requisite proportion of females was to be raised in 1860 to exactly 50 per cent., but, as the convention with the French Government permitting emigration from British India to Reunion fixed the proportion at only 25 per cent., it was necessary to apply no severer rule in the instance of the British colonies, but the emigration agents were instructed to make the proportion of women as large as they could.

With regard to Chinese emigration to British Guiana the agent, Mr. Austin, reports that the six ships he despatched in the season 1859-60 with 1,973 emigrants lost only 23 by death on the voyage—1.16 per cent. Females, whom it had been declared impossible to procure, constituted a sixth (330) of the whole number. Mr. Austin's operations were brought to a complete stand by the interference of the Mandarins in the movements of the people before the Convention of Peking, but that Treaty removed the impediments, and in the season 1860-61 he had up to the 26th of March despatched nine ships with 3,136 emigrants on board—2,645 men, 446 women, and the rest children. A small number of liberated Africans (708) were sent to the West Indies last year, besides 400 rescued from a wrecked slaver sent to the Bahamas. The migration from India to the Mauritius in 1860 (13,286) fell far short of the demand, owing to the difficulty of procuring the required proportion of women, now, however, as just stated, reduced to 25 per cent.; 741 of these emigrants had been in the colony before. In this migration there was an increased mortality last year among infants; and one vessel, the Shah Alum, with 391 coolies on board, was never heard of after her departure from Calcutta in April. The estimated Indian population in the Mauritius at the close of 1860 was 151,760 males and 61,153 females; the number returning thence to India fell from 5,118 in 1859 to 2,833 in 1860. An Indian emigration to Natal has been commenced, and 1,593 embarked during the season 1860-61, and arrangements are being made for an emigration from India to Queensland.

CEYLON.—The land sales in Ceylon have progressively increased in the last five years, but until 1859 the Survey Department was not fully adequate to the work required to be done. In that year it was put on an improved footing, and the following facts, given in the report of the Surveyor-General, show that the measure has been successful. In 1859, the first year of the new system, plans were sent to the Government agents of 55,000 acres of land, of which 23,305 acres were sold, realising £30,463, while the total cost of the establishment in its new form was £23,956, leaving a net surplus of £15,507. More than 1,000 sets of plans in triplicate were issued, about 900 of which were to natives. This number exceeds the total number of plans issued by the department in the previous six years. The cost of survey per acre was reduced from 18s. 2½d. in 1855, and 7s. 6d. in 1858, to 6s. 6½d. per acre in 1859.

THE SALE OF THE EAST INDIA HOUSE took place on Thursday, the tender accepted being for £155,000. This is a higher sum, reckoning proportionate extent of site, than was obtained for the Excise-office. It is understood to have been purchased with the view of constructing extensive offices and chambers.

PUBLIC WORKS IN INDIA.—The competitive examination for appointments in 1861 in the civil engineer establishment of the Public Works Department in India took place on the 3rd of June and four following days at the India-office. The examiners were Professor Cape, M.A., F.R.S.; Lieut.-col. Auchterlony, Madras Engineers; and Mr. George Preston White, C.E. Thirty-two candidates presented themselves for examination, of which, we understand, eleven have been selected for appointments.

9, Grosvenor-street, Grosvenor-square, London; 14, Gay-street, Bath; and 10, Eldon-square, Newcastle-on-Tyne. From the "Court Journal." "EXTRAORDINARY INVENTION IN DENTAL SURGERY.—To Mr. Ephraim Mosely, of 9, Grosvenor-street, London, may be attributed one of the most remarkable and useful discoveries of the day, that of a substance for the construction of artificial teeth, gums, and palates, so thoroughly adhesive as to fix securely, without the use of those troublesome adjuncts, spiral springs. It is, in fact, the most perfect substitute for the natural teeth that can possibly be desired, and may be said truly to attain the ne plus ultra of art. The substance, for which a patent has been obtained, is purified India-rubber, which can be moulded to every irregularity of the gums and teeth in the most perfect manner, forming, as it were, an artificial periosteum to the teeth, keeping them from becoming painful on the absorption of the gum, and enabling the patient to use any force in masticating or striking the teeth together, without the percussion or rattling that attends the action in general cases."

—BILIOUS DISORDERS.—In no organ of the body does disease present itself so frequently and in such varied forms as in the liver, and in no affections is it more important to apply immediate and safe treatment. Holloway's remedies happily place the means of cure within the reach of all. His Pills, aided by energetic friction with his Ointment on the right side, will soon relieve the troublesome dyspeptic symptoms, and perseverance with these preparations will insure perfect recovery without any great restrictions in habit or diet. This treatment safely reduces the enlarged liver, so often indicative of too great indulgence in the pleasures of the table, nor is it less efficient in promoting perfect digestion.

PRICHARD'S DANDELION, CAMOMILE, RHUBARB, and GINGER PILLS.—This peculiar preparation of dandelion acts particularly on the liver, thus avoiding the use of mercurials, and will be found invaluable to parties suffering from a sluggish state of that organ, or who have resided in India or other hot climates; whilst the well-known stomachic efficacy of camomile, rhubarb, and ginger, renders these pills the most happy combination possible; and as many are at a loss for a safe remedy for occasional ailments they will find this medicine a great convenience, which may be resorted to by all persons at any age, under any circumstances, and without the least inconvenience.

AUTOBIOGRAPHY OF MISS CORNELIA KNIGHT,

LADY COMPANION TO THE PRINCESS CHARLOTTE OF WALES.

With Extracts from her Journals and Anecdote Books.

CRITICAL REMARKS.

"We can heartily recommend the entire work to our readers as one of the most curious and authentic disclosures of State affairs in this country, and one of the most interesting and graphic journals of travel which the literary world has for a long time been called upon to notice."—Press, June 22, 1861.

"Before concluding a notice of a very pleasant book which, while it is full of what may be called private history, contains no prurient, scandalous, or positively frivolous gossip, it should be stated that the materials from which it has been compiled were placed by the family into whose possession they passed on Miss Knight's death into the hands of Mr. J. W. Kaye, who undertook the office of editing the work. Mr. Kaye, however, states that his time was so much engrossed by other occupations, that he knows not when these volumes might have been prepared for the press if it had not been for the assistance very cordially rendered by his friend Mr. James Hutton, of whose intimate acquaintance with the social history of the Georgian Era no better proof could be afforded than that which speaks out from his interesting volume on English Life, 'A Hundred Years Ago.' To that gentleman is to be assigned the main part of the credit of editing the work, and there are evident marks of a successful struggle with that most trying of all editorial difficulties—a superabundance of materials. Much intelligence, industry, and care have been bestowed with the production of the book, and such literary conscientiousness will, no doubt, meet with its reward in the public favour."—Illustrated London News, June 22, 1861.

"The matters which will secure popularity for the Autobiography are those which resuscitate the stories that excited the curiosity of our forefathers, and made them invent other scandals, scarcely any one of which, fiction as they were, exhibited half the strangeness of the facts themselves, as they are now recorded."—Bell's Messenger, June 15, 1861.

"The volumes are, indeed, a mine of anecdote."—Critic, June 22, 1861.

"Of the popularity of these volumes, on account of their historical as well as gossiping merits, there can be no doubt whatever."—Athenæum, June 8, 1861.

"The journal of a clever and lady-like woman, who saw many men and many cities, and whose testimony is not heightened by the warmth of too lively an imagination, nor blackened by the tints of malice, must be—what we have found it to be—unusually interesting reading. It is, moreover, put before us in a form which must be considered exceedingly creditable to its publishers, and to those to whom they have entrusted it. Due editorial care, and a proper judgment in selection and annotation, are so extremely uncommon among those who generally prepare books of this class for the public, that we feel bound to express our cordial thanks to Mr. Kaye and his coadjutor, Mr. James Hutton, for the complete, and, at the same time, unobtrusive fashion in which they have performed their task. A short foot-note is applied to all names, with regard to which a reader of the present day is likely to feel curiosity; and where the Autobiographer refers to published books, their full title is given. In these and all similar points nothing is left to be desired by the most lazy or ignorant of readers."—Spectator, January 22, 1861.

"These volumes will be read in every country seat, at every watering place, this autumn. They are fresh; full of most attractive anecdotes and interesting revelations. Miss Knight, whose anecdote books and journals have supplied these two handsome volumes, was Lady Companion to poor Princess Charlotte: she was an observant and shrewd woman of the world, also. Among the great people who were her constant companions, she appears to have been an inveterate collector of lively anecdotes. Her learning and womanly accomplishments secured her the brilliant position she held. In Mr. James Hutton the 'far-famed Cornelia Knight' has found a most discreet and accomplished editor."—Weekly Newspaper, January 16, 1861.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

THE Bombay Mail of the 27th of May brings further accounts of reductions and retrenchment. Four regiments of native infantry belonging to that Presidency are to be immediately disbanded, and it is said that the 29th, 30th, and 31st, with the 2nd regiment of Jacobs' Rifles, are to be selected for that disagreeable distinction. The entire establishment of the Bombay native army will thus be reduced from 30,158—its strength on the 1st August, 1859—to 21,300 men of all ranks. It is stated, however, that the irregular cavalry will not be reduced to the extent contemplated by Mr. Laing. The Madras Army, it appears, is not to be touched for the present, as it has already been brought down to about 40,000 men. The united native forces of the three Presidencies will not for the future be more than 110,400 strong, showing a reduction of 63,800 men since the 1st of October, 1859, and a saving of one million sterling. The Governor-general in Council having reviewed the local budgets of the different subordinate governments has decided that their aggregate naval and military demands are in excess of the expenditure that can be sanctioned consistently with the system of economy that is now being acted upon. Reductions are, therefore, to be made to the extent of £330,000.

To the Public Works Department is allotted the sum of 328½ lakhs, in the following proportions:—Madras, 64; Bombay, 50; Bengal, 51; Punjab, 52; Oude, 19; Nagpoor, 7½; Pegu, 10; Tenasserim, 4; Straits, 3½; Hyderabad, 4½; Coorg, 1; N. W. Provinces, 63. It is also stated that the approximate distribution of the expenditure from guaranteed capital among the companies under the different governments (allowing for the Madras Irrigation Company) will be as follows:—Bengal, 240 lakhs; Madras, 98; Bombay, 185; N. W. Provinces, 75; Punjab, 22; making a grand total of 620 lakhs.

Considerable dissatisfaction is expressed in certain circles at Sir Charles Wood's despatch, prohibiting the enactment of Mr. Cecil Beadon's Breach of Contract Bill. Our own opinion on this subject has been so frequently expressed that it is unnecessary to make any further comments upon it.

Among other measures of economy we may mention that the Surat and Broach Collectors are to be fused into one; the thirteen pergunnahs of the former being reduced to seven, and the six pergunnahs of the latter to four.

Indian questions occupied last night an unusual share of the time, if not of the attention, of the House of Commons. The East India Council Bill was read a third time, after a desultory discussion as to what constituted professional experience in a barrister. Mr. Layard, Mr. Vansittart, Mr. J. Smith, Colonel Sykes, and Sir M. Farquhar were of opinion that the legal member of the Governor's Council ought to have the benefit of at least ten years' standing. Mr. Malins also took this view, as did Mr. H. Seymour and Mr. Scully, while Mr. White, Mr. Puller, Sir E. Colebrooke, and Mr. Disraeli were disposed to leave the Governor-general unfettered, except by responsibility, as to the selection of his legal adviser. Sir George Lewis leaned towards a certain degree of limitation, though he regarded five years' standing as a sufficient guarantee against flagrant favouritism, shrewdly remarking that, after all, experience did not come from years alone, but from practice, and that a greater number of individuals who had failed in their profession might be found among barristers of ten than among those of only five years' standing.

The next topic of discussion was the East India Civil Service Bill, which was finally passed through Committee, notwithstanding the strenuous opposition of Mr. H. Baillie, Mr. Astell, Colonel Sykes, Sir H. Willoughby, Mr. Adams, Sir M. Farquhar, Sir H. Verney, Mr. W. E. Forster, Sir J. Fergusson, Sir E. Colebrooke, and Mr. H. Seymour. Sir Charles Wood, however, was firm and immovable, and the House was quite willing to escape any further boredom by throwing the responsibility of the change upon his shoulders.

The East India High Courts of Judicature Bill was also considered in Committee, and ultimately agreed to, after several objections were made and overruled.

BENGAL.

REDUCTION OF THE NATIVE ARMY.

With the exception of twelve battalions the whole of the old Bengal Army as it stood before the mutinies on the 1st of January, 1856, is swept away, and in future the Bengal Native Infantry will consist of only forty-eight regiments, each of the strength of six hundred bayonets. A great number of irregular corps and local levies have also been either altogether got rid of in Bengal, the North-West Provinces, Oude, and the Punjab, or they will be absorbed into the general police of the country, as may be found best by the local governments. Three of the regular regiments of Bengal Native Infantry, which were allowed to be retained in the Army List since the mutinies, are now ordered to be broken up, namely, the 4th, 58th, and 73rd Regiments. The last named, it will be recollected, has for some time past been suspected of disaffection, and recently when employed against the enemy in Sikkim, some of the men refused on several occasions to obey the lawful commands of their officers.

In the Madras army the reductions already effected by the Government of that Presidency leaves little to be done. The effective strength on the 1st November last of the native army of Madras was under 40,000 men, against 62,775 men in August 1859; so that an actual reduction has already been effected to the extent of at least 22,775 men. No further reductions in the Madras army have been ordered.

There have also been considerable reductions made in the Bombay native army, the Infantry regiments having been already reduced from ten to eight companies, and the number of privates to six hundred per regiment. The three extra battalions and the 8rd Belooch battalion raised in 1857-58 have been broken up, and the veteran battalion abolished; but the number of regiments being still one in excess of what it was before the year 1857, owing to the organisation of the regiments of Jacob's Rifles, and of two regiments (the 30th and 31st N.I.) organised in June, 1858, in place of the 21st and 27th N.I. which were disbanded for mutiny.

The Governor-general has accordingly directed that four regiments of the Bombay Native Infantry, such as his Excellency the Governor in Council may select, shall now be broken up, the officers and men composing them being disposed of with the least possible prejudice to their individual interests as the local Government and the Commander-in-Chief may think best for the public service. The establishment of native infantry of the Bombay army will thus be reduced to 21,300 of all ranks, against 30,158 on the 1st August, 1859, making a total reduction of upwards of 8,000 men of all ranks.

The establishment of native infantry in the whole Indian army will henceforward be as follows:—

	Battalions.
Under the Government of India	12
Bengal army (including all Sikh and Punjab regiments)...	60
Madras army	52
Pegu sapper battalion (temporary)	1
Bombay army	30
Total	155

Making a total strength of about 110,400 men of all ranks, native officers included, against a total of 174,237 of all ranks on the 1st October, 1859, showing a reduction of more than 63,800 men of all ranks, and a saving fully equal to one crore of rupees, or one million sterling.—Bombay Gazette.

INDIAN CHAPLAINS.

The Government of the North-Western Provinces has published in the official supplement to the Allahabad Gazette the annual report of the Bishop of Calcutta on the affairs of his diocese, and on his proceedings during his recent visitation tour. It is well that even bishops should write annual reports, and that the ecclesiastical servants of the State should be as much subject to public opinion as those of all other departments. There is not a clergyman in India, paid by the State and therefore independent of public opinion to that extent, who would not be benefited by knowing that his bishop's opinion of him would be published to the world, that he would in a sense be gazetted for either praise or blame.

The prevailing opinion in India has hitherto been that, as a class, chaplains are deficient in the zeal which is the first requisite of their office, in the scholarship which ought to be its ornament, in the graces of spirit which clergymen of all men ought to manifest. Rightly or wrongly the popular belief is that one-half the time of the Bishop is wasted in settling unseemly squabbles between chaplains and their flocks or the civil authorities. The stranger who visits the stations from Calcutta to Delhi, and is told in the former that the ecclesiastical authorities are wise enough to keep all the best clergymen in the Presidency towns, hears at every stage of his journey reflections on the various chaplains not always complimentary. Where there are colleagues he is told one spends the evening in demolishing the arguments and controverting the opinions to which his brother gave utterance in the morning. At one station the chaplain is notorious for his High Church asceticism, and instead of labouring among the European soldiers who are as sheep without a shepherd, throws every obstacle in the way of the Methodist whose meeting-place petty persecution helps to fill. At another the incumbent is known as the companion of the wildest officers of the regiment, or as the contributor of the wittiest articles to the local journal, or as the best shot in the district, or as the centre of all its gossip and three fourths of its scandal. In a third there is a large European hospital, where men, women, and children are perishing of cholera, but which the chaplain is afraid to enter. In a fourth the clergyman is so superannuated, yet so determined to wait on for his pension, that his only audience is his own family. Not half of this may be true, nor are the instances cited applicable to the mass. Yet such remarks as these are common in society. Hence we value Bishop Cotton's report as likely to dispel some of this popular depreciation of Indian chaplains. He says, "It has been a great pleasure to me to find that in several stations the chaplains are working most efficiently, and are very much valued by the residents." When next he visits his diocese we trust he will be able to say all. He mentions in the highest terms Mr. Nicolson of Ghazepore, Mr. Waterhouse of Lucknow, Mr. Moore of Benares, Mr. Kingsford of Allahabad, Mr. Tuson, of Ferozepore, Mr. Sloggett, of Lahore, Mr. Norman, of Dum-Dum, and Mr. Sharkey, of Peshawur. These he names as specially worthy of commendation. "But there was more than one station where I was pleased with the chaplain's work, but where I thought that, as he had been so short a time at the place, however well he promised, his services did not yet deserve a particular mention. Of course some, and especially one, struck me as much less efficient, but it would be unfair at present to mention them to your Excellency."

The full strength of the establishment of chaplains in all the presidencies is 162. Of the 90 assigned to the diocese of Calcutta only 73 are on service. Ten are on sick leave, three have been appointed who have not yet arrived in India, and there are four vacancies which have not been filled up. A few stations are supplied by the Additional Clergy Society, and in several others missionaries belonging to various sects hold a service in English at least once every Sunday. But how insufficient the whole number is for dioceses so extensive as those of India. How many stations there are visited only at distant intervals by a chaplain, and shut out from the enjoyment of those services and the influence of those associations which are the salt of society. Dr. Cotton reminds the Governor-general of Lord Stanley's promise to create a new see at Agra or Allahabad for the North-west. But until Government are able to supply their own servants with spiritual instruction by giving each station a chaplain and a church, the creation of the bishopric may be postponed. And so long as one station is thus destitute no single church, as in the Presidency towns, should have two ministers. Calcutta alone excluding the fort, has ten chaplains, of whom eight, including the Archdeacon and Bishop's chaplain, fill three collegiate charges.

There are three spheres of duty to which the Indian chaplain ought more to direct his attention. Stationed for years in the same Presidency he will not find it too hard to learn one of the vernacular languages of the country, that he may help the neighbouring missionary or take his place where there is none. We believe the order of the Court of Directors forbidding their ecclesiastical servants to recommend the truths of Christianity to the natives, and so forcing them to violate the first law of their office "to preach the Gospel to every creature," has never been formally withdrawn. We know that its effect has been to prevent more than one conscientious clergyman from entering the service. While we have no doubt that it is practically inoperative, it is disgraceful that it has not long since been abrogated. Then the presence of an army of 70,000 Englishmen in the country, and all of them who are not either Roman Catholics or Presbyterians destitute of spiritual supervision, involves every chaplain in a serious responsibility, which not a few, we are happy to believe, deeply feel. Generally living near the lines of a European regiment, it should be, as in more than one place it is, the chaplain's delight to organise such means of usefulness for his neglected fellow-countrymen as libraries, reading-rooms, and all that is involved in the term "Institute," while he sanctifies the whole by his spiritual ministrations. And in almost every European station, as well as in the Presidency towns, the chaplain will find neglected Christians who ought to be the object of City Mission agency. When this work is done, those who have the ability may find the time to make themselves—like the Archdeacon of Calcutta—and to make their Service, as distinguished in the walks of science and literature as at least the other Indian Services.—Friend of India.

THE BISHOP OF CALCUTTA intends to enter on the completion of the visitation of his immense diocese in July next. He will then proceed to Dacca and the Eastern districts, Assam, Sylhet, and Cachar. On his return he will pay a visit to Penang, Malacca, and Singapore, the last probably before they become a Crown colony. Then, we believe, Bishop Macdougall of Labuan will have the head-quarters of the extended diocese transferred to Singapore.

FLOATING WHARF IN THE HOOGHLY.—The Engineer's Journal contains a prospectus for the formation of a company to construct a floating pier or wharf in the Hooghly at Calcutta. The want of such accommodation has long been felt, and the floating pier is the cheapest and most feasible plan for supplying it. The prospectus is issued by Messrs. W. Anderson, W. F. Ferguson, and Charles Hemfrey. They propose to raise capital by means of a Joint Stock Company, and they ask no aid from Government beyond the use of the plot of ground between the north end of the new Custom House sheds and Jackson's ghaut, with permission to lay down moorings and the privilege of receiving their materials duty free. They object to wet docks because they would be constantly silting up, and to fixed projecting piers, because the channel of the river might change and the deep water be driven towards the opposite shore. They propose to construct a large floating landing stage, at first capable of accommodating four first-class or five second-rate merchantmen. This stage would be connected with the shore by means of four wrought iron girder bridges, rising and falling with the tide. The stage is to consist of 58 iron pontoons, making a total length of 900 feet. At the lowest calculation 12 first-class ships per month could discharge cargo here. This undertaking, if encouraged by Government, will be the beginning of the appliance to Calcutta of those commercial facilities in which the port is so disgracefully deficient.

GENERAL HAVELOCK'S MONUMENT.—The monument erected by Lady Havelock and family over the grave of Sir Henry Havelock in the Alum Bagh has been completed, under the supervision of Major Crommelin. The marble slab on which the inscription is cut was sent from England, and has reached Lucknow uninjured. As Havelock's fame is national property, we quote the too lengthy inscription :—

HENRY HAVELOCK,

Major-general in the British Army, and Knight Commander of the Bath, who died at Dilkhoosha, Lucknow, of dysentery produced by the hardships of a campaign in which he achieved immortal fame, on the 24th of November, 1857. He was born on the 5th April, 1795, at Bishop's Wearmouth, County Durham, England, entered the army in 1815, came to India in 1823, and served there with little interruption till his death. He bore an honourable part in the wars of Burmah, Afghanistan, the Mahratta campaign of 1843, and the Sutlej of 1845-46. Retained by adverse circumstances during many years in a subordinate position, it was the aim of his life to prove that the profession of a Christian is consistent with the fullest discharge of the duties of a soldier. He commanded a division in the Persian Expedition of 1857. In the terrible convulsion of that year his genius and character were at length fully developed and known to the world. Saved from shipwreck on the Ceylon coast, by that Providence which designed him for yet greater things, he was nominated to the command of the column destined to relieve the brave garrison of Lucknow; this object, after almost superhuman exertions, he, by the blessing of God, accomplished. But he was not spared to receive on earth the reward so dearly earned. The Divine Master whom he served saw fit to remove him from the sphere of his labours, in the moment of his greatest triumphs. He departed to his rest in humble but confident expectation of far greater rewards and honours than those which a grateful country was anxious to bestow. In him the skill of a commander, the courage and devotion of a soldier, the learning of a scholar, the grace of a highly-bred gentleman, and all the social and domestic virtues of a husband, father, and friend, were blended together, and strengthened, harmonised, and adorned by the spirit of a true Christian, the result of the influence of the Holy Spirit on his heart, and of a humble reliance on the merits of a crucified Saviour. "I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith. Henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous Judge, shall give me on that day; and not to me only, but to all those that love His appearing."—2 Tim. 4 Chap. 7 and 8 Ver.

"His ashes in a peaceful urn shall rest;
His name a great example stands to show
How strangely high endeavours may be blessed
When Piety and Valour jointly go."

This monument is erected by his sorrowing widow and family.

DESTRUCTION OF USELESS RECORDS.—A committee has been appointed by the Governor-general in Council for the purpose of superintending, in Calcutta, the scheme for the destruction of all useless records in the public offices, after carefully selecting for preservation such as may be statistically or historically valuable. Mr. C. J. Erskine, of the Legislative Council, is president; Mr. Scott Smith, of the Civil Engineering College, secretary, and Mr. R. Temple and the Rev. J. Long are members. The head of each office will act as a member of the committee while his own papers are under examination. Some of the most important historical documents will probably be published, and all deemed worthy of preservation will be kept in one muniment-room, or record office, as we have before recommended. At present the investigations of the committee will not extend to papers of later date than 1853. We trust Government will not fall into the error of dispersing the records that may be preserved, by giving those which are ecclesiastical to the Cathedral, those which are agricultural to the Agricultural Society, and so on. The grand old library of Fort William College was thus dispersed. All should be stored in one library under State supervision, and open, like the Rolls Office, to the public. The Committee have been as yet unable to secure the services of one competent scholar who will devote his whole time to the duty of calendaring the papers. Mr. Cust is carrying out the work in the Punjab. The North-West and Bombay Governments should direct their attention to it.

NEW NATIVE UNIFORM.—The Bengal Hurkaru is informed that there is to be a new uniform for the whole Native Army, which is to consist of a tunic without any collar, leaving the neck bare; a pair of loose pijama-like trousers, a newly-invented turban, to surpass anything of the sort yet contrived, and gaiters. While marching the latter will be put on over the trousers, thus converting them into knickerbockers. At the end of the march the soldier will merely have to cast them off to get rid of all the mud or dust contracted on the march, and will immediately find himself in a pair of cool loose pijamas. The dress is to be of one colour for the whole army, the facings merely being different in different regiments. We do not see why the new uniform should not be adapted for the European troops quite as well as for the Natives. It is a great desideratum that they should always be coolly and comfortably clad in the hot weather, more particularly when in the field or on a march; and the kind of dress here described would appear to be admirably suited for European soldiers in a warm climate.

INDIAN MEDICAL SERVICE.—A letter in the Englishman contains a tabular statement of the medical officers in the Indian Army. There were in the three Presidencies on the 1st of January, 1861, 3 principal inspectors general, 4 inspectors general, 20 deputy inspectors general, 123 surgeons major, 113 surgeons, and 573 assistant surgeons, making a total of 845 officers. Of these 76 are on military staff employ, 103 on civil employ, and 28 on other employ, leaving 548 for regimental duty. The writer makes out that with 12 European regiments, 210 native regiments, 14 artillery brigades, the staff, and those absent on other duty, there will remain 154 medical officers without employment.

THE FAMINE.—71,913 persons were relieved by the Meerut Famine Fund during March, at a cost of Rs. 5,664. This is a daily average of 2,319. There were 47 orphans in the poor-house, most of whom were sent to Agra. Out of 162 deaths during February in the poor-house 28 died on the day of admission, 28 on the second day, 27 on the third, and 19 on the fourth; 60 survived over the fourth day, but subsequently sunk under chronic diarrhoea, dysentery, and lepra. Mr. H. C. Cutcliffe, the civil assistant surgeon, thus describes a sample case of exhaustion. "Body atrophied, a mere bony skeleton with fleshy ribbons suspended to its well-marked prominences enveloped in loose envelope of fatless skin, maintaining existence with a heart whose pulse seems tired of beating, feebly propelling blood, not only impoverished by inanition but diseased by bad food, and an imperfectly excited nervous system. Exhausted by atrophy, and further depressed by despair. We have here a man gradually sinking from inanition, one whose heart is losing the power to propel its contents, becoming more and more feeble, till it will be unable to contract, it will fail and the man will be dead—dead from failure of the heart's action." The general results of the three months were—in January, 29 out of 254 admitted into hospital, died; in February, 161 out of 902; in March 439 out of 1,312.

THE STATIONERY OFFICE OF CALCUTTA is to be swept out by the besom of the Civil Finance Commission. The expenditure for the whole Bengal Presidency from Calcutta to Peshawar has steadily risen from Rs. 245,717 in 1849-50 to Rs. 4,38,632 in 1859-60. Of this last sum upwards of one-third was for stores sent from England, and the rest for stores bought at irregular periods in India at nearly 200 per cent. above the English price. Up to 1858 the issues of stationery were always much less than the purchases, so that an immense reserve stock has accumulated. On the 1st May, 1860, its value was Rs. 429,457. The Government of India, acting on the Commission's suggestion, directs contracts to be made with English manufacturers, and with firms in India, for the supply of cheaper articles than hitherto; a revision of the scale of stationery fixed in 1861, the proper scrutiny of the consumption from England, and the keeping of the reserve stock chiefly against the supply from England. The local Governments are to be consulted as to the propriety of being allowed to make their own contracts, instead of drawing their supplies through a central office in Calcutta. The reform has been partly anticipated in the Punjab. Were all the recommendations of the Commission carried out, a saving of two and one-third lakhs would be effected in the Bengal Presidency alone. The report is creditable to the Commission.—Friend of India.

COLONEL H. W. STATED, C.B., of her Majesty's 93rd Highlanders (late of the 78th Highlanders), has just been appointed Commandant of the Darjeeling Convalescent Depot, vice Major K. R. Maitland, of the 79th Highlanders, whose services are required with his regiment.

MAJOR J. H. ST. JOHN, of the 92nd Highlanders, will perform the duties of Military Secretary to his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief in India during the absence on leave of Captain G. E. Rose, or until further orders.

MAHARAJAH DULLEP SINGH, shortly before leaving India, parted with some of the old officers and servants of Runjeet Singh, who have all along remained attached and faithful to him. He settled pensions on some and gave pecuniary rewards to others. He regretted he would probably never see them again, as he intends to settle in Britain, where he has bought an estate in the county of Forfarshire.

MADRAS.

BRITISH BURMAH.

The Punjab, Pegu, and Oude have been successively the favourite provinces of the Marquis of Dalhousie and of his successor. They were conquered under peculiar circumstances, and transferred to our Government directly from the hands of their native rulers. British officials had much to destroy, while they had to introduce all the elements and safeguards of a new administration. Chiefly from this circumstance, but also partly because their conquerors looked on the latest offspring of our power with a natural affection, the surplus of Bengal which went to extinguish the deficits of Madras and Bombay was poured out freely for the civilisation of the Punjab, Pegu, and Oude. With all its wealth Bengal would have sighed in vain for one tithe of the million and a quarter sterling spent on the Lahore and Peshawar Road. For eight years Pegu, with its enormous military expenditure, caused us an annual loss of £600,000. The deficit in Oude a year ago was nearly a million sterling. No true statesman would grudge such expenditure at first starting, just as no wise father would seriously grumble at the expense of his son's education. Apart from all political considerations, which were in reality paramount at the time of annexation, these three provinces contained in themselves the germs of future wealth and stability as well as of present glory and prestige. The money spent upon them for the first few years was meant to render life and property secure; to turn the energies of warlike people to the arts of peace; to quicken the growth of population where it was slow, and induce the immigration of labourers where they were scanty; to open a road for the products of the soil to reach the markets of the world; to develop trade, and to raise the social and ultimately the moral position of the people. No one expects Oude, the latest of our acquisitions, to do more than pay its own expenses for the next year or two. But the Punjab has been a British province for twelve, and Pegu for eight years. Both are the most remarkable instances of the elevating power of the British Government. Yet both ought to be able to show by this time that they are no longer a burden, that they will soon be a support to the empire. No one can over-estimate the value of the service rendered by the Punjab in 1857-58. Placed as the advanced post of the empire, in charge of the only dangerous part of our frontier, its military expenditure must always be comparatively high. The recent reduction of native troops, the reform of civil establishments, the introduction of the new police, and the general cheapness of the civil administration, show that the Punjab is not lacking in the zeal for financial reduction. Pegu and the provinces on either side of it alone remained, offering a tempting opportunity to the economist. Under the able administration of Colonel Phayre its progress has been more rapid than that of any other British settlement in Southern Asia. The result of eight years' British rule in Pegu is a population of 1,000,000, a revenue of £500,000, and a trade of £3,000,000. With a far better geographical position the result of 60 years' rule in Ceylon is a population of 1,786,038, a revenue of £747,036 and a trade of £5,999,238, including specie. If we turn to Scinde, the topography of which very much corresponds with that of Pegu, we find the result of 17 years' rule up to 1859-60 is a population of about 1,700,000, a revenue of some £400,000, and a trade of £2,680,086. And Pegu shows this comparative superiority, although the upper portion of its great river is held by a scanty race under a barbarous government. But still, with all this Pegu has caused a loss to the State of some £600,000 a year, chiefly because its military expenditure has been enormous. The Empire must have the benefit of Pegu's prosperity, and so Mr. R. Temple and Lieutenant-Colonel Bruce were deputed to assist Colonel Phayre in reorganising his establishments and reducing his expenditure. This task they have accomplished with unusual wisdom and success, and like Captain Rennie and the Bengal Marine, Colonel Phayre has been the foremost in lopping off this abuse and contracting that extravagance. When all the reforms suggested by their report have been carried out, the scheme for amalgamating Arracan, Pegu, and Tenasserim into the one province of British Burmah under one chief commissioner, will be matured.

The new province will start with at least a financial equilibrium, with establishments which will have at once the work and the pay of those of the Punjab, and with an organised constabulary similar to that of Madras. Their future income and expenditure are thus estimated, if due economy is observed:—

	Income.	Expenditure.
Tenasserim,	165,000	128,800
	£810,000	£764,250

Of the latter sum only £299,500 is for military charges, instead of about £650,000 as before. While the old and useless police of the three provinces cost £154,986, the new constabulary now being organised by Captain Duncan will cost only £102,649, notwithstanding the reduction of the military force. Nothing could be more satisfactory than these results, or prove more conclusively how much useless expenditure might be lopped off in every province by honest and intelligent resolution on the part of its authorities and of the Supreme Government. In British Burmah the salaries of the most important officials, native and European, are raised while their number is lessened; the administration works more smoothly; life and property are rendered more secure; and obstructions are removed from the path of justice by leaving executive duties to the police. And after all this an annual saving of half a million sterling is effected.

British Burmah has now a bright future before it. It has almost a monopoly of the export of rice and teak timber. For the former it will find a new market in China. The latter, conserved by the scientific care and devotion of Dr. Brandis, will now be more freely opened to merchants than hitherto. When the purchase of waste lands in fee simple has been conceded by the Supreme Government British Burmah will profit by the boon. At present it is difficult to induce the peasants to take longer leases of their holdings than for one year. But in the towns of Akyab, Rangoon, and Maulmain, where there is an increasing English population, the right will be taken advantage of. These residents are so numerous, and the cases connected with shipping and commerce are so many, that the establishment of courts presided over by English lawyers is urged as absolutely necessary. Increased efforts should be made to induce the Burmese Emperor to form such a commercial treaty as will increase our inland trade and ultimately allow us to dispense with our frontier customs' line. A treaty of this kind is the more important because our only mode of communication with Western China is that up the Irrawaddy and through the Burmese territory to Bamo. We are glad to learn that Colonel Phayre has taken steps to make a route survey of the line to Esmok, of which so much has been recently written. We have no faith in the project for direct communication between Esmok and Rangoon, for we suspect that the natural route from that place is down the Camboja river to Saigon, where the French now are. Geographical science, however, will benefit by the survey. But man is the great want of British Burmah. We see thousands of coolies annually shipped to French and English colonies, where the Chinese would prove better labourers, while provinces with such capabilities as Assam and British Burmah are covered with jungle and possessed by wild beasts. Recently one Shan tribe has settled in our territory, and others should be induced to follow their example. While we would deprecate extensive Government interference, there is no reason why the chief commissioner of British Burmah should not have his recruiting agents at Calcutta and Madras as well as the Colonial and French Governments.—Friend of India.

A LONG VOYAGE.—The barque Emeu, of Sunderland, Captain T. Jones, with a cargo of coals for the P. and O. Company for Suez, anchored in Cochin Roads on the 28th of April, having left England so far back as May, 1860. The vessel is represented as having experienced a series of misfortunes since leaving home, but of what nature those misfortunes are we are not informed. The last port the Emeu touched at previous to her arrival on the Malabar Coast appears to have been St. Helena, where the captain had to dispose of one-half of his cargo of coals, to enable him to prosecute his voyage, the vessel being then destitute of everything necessary. The Emeu has now reached Cochin in the same helpless condition, and a Committee of Survey has pronounced her to be unfit to proceed to sea unless she undergoes certain repairs, and her commander is now compelled to sell the other half of her cargo, having failed to raise funds by other means to meet his present wants. We should imagine his best course would be to come up to Bombay as quickly as he could, where he would find no difficulty in obtaining all the assistance he required, and where he would no doubt obtain a good freight either to England or Cochin. At present there is something rather mysterious about the whole affair, and no reason is shown why the vessel has taken a period of twelve months to accomplish the voyage from Sunderland to Cochin, or why she has never succeeded in making the port of her original destination. Even when Vasco de Gama achieved the glory of being the first navigator that doubled the Capo del bon Esperança, he only occupied nine months in the voyage from Lisbon to Goa. Captain Jones has now rendered himself even more famous, and seems to have taken his lessons in navigation from Noah in the Ark.—Bombay Gazette.

MANANTODDY, May 11.—A melancholy occurrence took place in the Wynaad Jungles the other day. Lieutenant Hughes, of the 66th, was killed by an elephant. He had succeeded in killing one, but on going in for another his cap missed fire, and he was immediately trodden into the mire, from which he found difficulty in extricating his feet. One tusk was driven through his thigh, his neck, arm, and leg were broken, and his chest flattened. Much praise is due to one Richard Hadin, who, on hearing of the accident, went to the spot at night with torches, and found the body, amidst the noise of tom-toms, as the place was alive with the monsters.

DEATH OF CAPTAIN C. T. BODDAM.—We learn from a letter from Jubbulpoor with the deepest regret, the death of Captain Castle Tudor Boddam, Superintending Engineer Saugor and Nerbudda Territory, which melancholy event took place at that station on the 2nd May. It appears that the deceased had remained too long in the districts, and arrived at Jubbulpoor more dead than alive. For six days he had neither slept nor tasted food, and died from sheer exhaustion, caused by the dreadful heat in the districts. The deceased not very long ago officiated for Captain G. Close, Executive Engineer Poona and Kirkee, and was a most popular man, and always considered a very talented officer.

THE SCINDE RAILWAY IS NOW AN ACCOMPLISHED FACT. After the lapse of three years, during which time the agent and engineering staff have displayed unremitting energy and talent, we are now enabled to proclaim the opening of the line this morning. Had it not been for official Red-tapeism, the railway would have been opened for public traffic a month ago, but unfortunately the financial difficulties of the Government caused the Deputy Consulting Engineer to postpone the working of the line until funds were forthcoming to liquidate the contractor's expenses. On Thursday last, Major Malcolm, accompanied by the chief and district engineers, proceeded to Kotree on a special inspection of the permanent way, bridges, culverts, viaducts, and fence walling, and returned to Kurrachee the same afternoon. The result has been that the line has been declared fit for traffic, and is to be opened to the public on Monday next. To inaugurate this important event, a special train starts this morning at 8 o'clock for Jungshaie, where a party from Kotree will meet them. A déjeuner à la fourchette is to be provided for the entertainment of all invited. After partaking of the good things furnished for the occasion, by the hospitality of the shareholders of the Scinde Railway, the whole party will return to Kurrachee, where a most sumptuous dinner will be given at the railway workshops to all the employés and their friends. We understand that covers are to be laid for three hundred, and the enterprising proprietors of the Castle Hotel have spared no expense to ensure the success of this opening party. The agent and chief engineer have in the most liberal manner come forward, and issued cards for an evening party to celebrate the opening, on Monday night, at the Artillery mess-room.—Kurrachee Herald, May 11.

AURUNGABAD STATION BROKEN UP.—It is only some six or eight months since Aurungabad was erected into a second-class brigade of the Bombay army, and Colonel Liddell, C.B., was appointed to the command. In general orders by his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief, we learn that consequent on the arrangements for disbanding the 29th, 30th, and 31st Regiments of N.I., and the 2nd Regiment of Jacob's Rifles, and the withdrawal of the Bombay troops from the station of Aurungabad under orders from the Supreme Government, the following movements will take place, regarding which detailed instructions will be issued in the Quartermaster-general's department:—Mountain Train, from Aurungabad to Ahmednuggur. 3rd Regiment Light Cavalry, from Aurungabad to Seroor, as a temporary arrangement. 8th Regiment N.I., from Aurungabad to Sholapore. 26th Regiment N.I., from Aurungabad to Poona. 28th Regiment N.I., from Sholapore to Baroda, on being relieved by the 8th Regiment N.I. 22nd Regiment at Ahmednuggur will relieve the detachment of the 6th N.I. at Asseerghur, the latter joining Head Quarters at Malligaum. 6th Regiment N.I. will relieve the left wing 20th Regi-

EXPORTS (Bombay, May 27).—Cotton.—The favourable accounts from Liverpool have induced no business of importance in the market, and the prices consequently have not risen more than two rupees. Wool.—A large business has been done by native shippers at a further advance in prices. Stocks are very small. Oilseeds.—Owing to the stocks being small, the prices of Linseed have obtained a further rise; the natives are the only shippers, the European houses keeping away from the market. Rapeseed is firmly held at high prices. Sesame out of stock; prices nominal. The other seeds are also out of stock. Coffee.—Quiet, and firmly held for high prices. Pepper.—Nothing doing, and prices have further receded. Saltpetre can be had at slightly cheaper rates, in consequence of the inquiry having slackened. Madder Root.—Muscat only is at present available for purchase at our quotations.

CENTRAL ASIA.

April 20.—To-day the Ameer's camp arrived at Koord Cabool. Sirdar Shere Allee Khan was ordered to inform all the Khans, Sirdars, and the troops of the camp that the Ameer would be very much displeased if he heard of anyone going to Cabool before the camp had reached that place. The Sirdar not only sent round the notice, but placed guards of his own battalion round the camp, with orders not to allow any one to go to Cabool. April 21.—The camp left Khoord Cabool for Boot Khak. At this place Sirdar Wully Mohamed Khan, accompanied by some Khans, waited on the Ameer to pay his respects. The Ameer, after talking about some public business, expressed his satisfaction, and gave him leave to go to Cabool, saying that the camp would reach Cabool the following day. April 22.—This morning the camp marched for Cabool. Last night, about twelve o'clock, Sirdar Shere Allee Khan, with all his troops, had left Boot Khak for Cabool, to make arrangements to receive the Ameer. Shere Allee Khan's troops, consisting of artillery, cavalry, and infantry, were drawn up on both sides from Kotul Yak Lureka, to Seah Sung, and those of Sirdar Wully Mohamed Khan, from Seah Sung to Bala Hissar. When the Ameer, accompanied by the Khans and Sirdars, passed through the line of troops, salutes were fired from the different batteries, arms were presented by the cavalry and infantry, and respects were paid by the spectators. On the Ameer's arrival at Balla Hissar, Sirdar Wully Mohamed Khan ordered some sheep and other animals to be killed, and distributed to the poor, as customary in Afghanistan. The Ameer did not receive any chief to-day. It is ascertained from a confidential merchant, who has just arrived from Bokhara, that amongst the Kafilas or body of travellers with whom he had left Bokhara, there were two Russians—one a merchant, and the other a doctor. On his (the merchant's) making inquiries as to where they were going, they said that they had a letter from the King of Bokhara for Sirdar Mohamed Ufzul Khan, requesting him to show Tushkurgan and other places, and to let them pass safely to Murve Shah Jehan, from which place they intended to travel to Oorgunge, via Mushed and Heerat. When the Kafilas arrived at Tushkurgan they handed over the letter to Sirdar Ufzul Khan, who received them very kindly and ordered his men to show them what they wanted. As long as the Kafilas remained at Tushkurgan, they, the Russians, were all day busy in going about, and taking sketches of the city, fort, &c. The above account is authenticated by a letter received from Sirdar Mohamed Ufzul Khan by the Ameer. April 23.—The Ameer held a public durbar in the garden, and received there all the Khans, Sirdars, and respectable merchants of the city. They all, after paying their due respects, stated before the Ameer, that during his (the Ameer's) absence from Cabul, Sirdar Wully Mohamed Khan had treated the people so kindly and honourably that almost all the inhabitants of Cabool were praying for the Ameer and the Sirdar's welfare. Meer Hajee Sahib, the son of Hafizjee, Meer Waiz, then attended the durbar. The moment the Ameer saw the Hajee Sahib coming he got up from his seat, received him, embraced him, and made him sit down by him. Hajee Sahib, after asking about the Ameer's health, said in public that Sirdar Wully Mohamed Khan had managed the Government very nobly, and that every one had been pleased with his rulership. Mirza Abd Khan was directed to provide some camels and mules, and to get himself ready for Toorkistan, as he (the Ameer) wanted to send some ammunition to Sirdar Mohamed Ufzul Khan. April 24.—The durbar was held as usual. An urzee was received from Sirdar Mohamed Ameer Khan from Gurrishk, near Kandahar, containing the following account from Heerat:—Sirdar Sooltan Ahmed Jan of Heerat had sent his urzee to the King of Persia regarding the Kandahar affair, and had begged of his Majesty to confer the title of Sirdar on Meer Ufzul Khan. In reply to the above request the King of Persia had been pleased to send a firman, or royal letter, to Sirdar Sooltan Ahmed Jan to the following effect:—"You are at liberty to grant any title or Jageer to any one on the King's part, and whatever you could do or propose it would be gladly accepted by his Majesty; any number of troops required by you will leave Teheran at a moment's notice." Having been favoured with the above firman, Sirdar Sooltan Ahmed Jan had sent for Meer Ufzul Khan, and an oath was taken on the Koran, that whatever country should be taken by Ufzul Khan it would be his permanent Jageer, and Sirdar Sooltan Ahmed Jan would assist him with as many troops as required by him. Further that Furrak, which was lately taken, was to be given to Ufzul Khan. The troops were ordered to be assembled at Heerat, and Meer Ufzul Khan was on the eve of marching for Kandahar. The Ameer looked very anxious when he perused the urzee, and held a private council with Sirdar Shere Allee Khan and others. April 25.—Ubdoolrazak Khan, Moostoufee, was desired to distribute the uniforms which were lately received from Peshawar to the troops of Sirdar Shere Allee Khan and Wully Mohamed Khan, and to make a statement of the pay-list of the troops ready. He was also ordered to draw orders on Ghaznee and Huzarah in favour of those troops who had been receiving their pay from those places, and to pay the remaining troops from the amount to be realised from Sirdar Shere Allee and Wully Mohamed Khan, who were directed to prepare their accounts as soon as possible. April 26.—The Ameer, accompanied by Sirdars Sooltan Mohamed Khan, Wulle Mohamed Khan and Ghoolam Mahomed Khan, went to see the garden, while the Moostoufee remained in the office, examining the accounts of Sirdar Shere Allee Khan and Wully Mohamed Khan, and drawing the orders on different places. Sirdar Wully Mohamed Khan is still the Governor of Cabool, and it is ascertained from the Sirdar's men that the Ameer is going to keep Wully Mohamed Khan as Governor of Cabool for a long time. April 27.—The Ameer and Ghoolam Mohamed Khan, went to Sirdar Sooltan Mohamed Khan, and as they were talking about different subjects, the Ameer happened to say something about Sooltan Ahmed Jan. On this Sooltan Mohamed Khan made the following remarks:—"When Sooltan Ahmed Jan was going away from Cabool, I advised the Ameer not to let him go, not to mind if he was a disobedient boy, for he was his own nephew, but the Ameer did not listen to my advice; again, when Sirdar Sooltan Ahmed Jan had got the Hookoomut of Heerat, and Meer Ufzul Khan had fallen out with him, I advised the Ameer to watch after Ufzul Khan, and to keep friendship with Sooltan Jan. The Ameer did not care about them, and now having got a strong power to assist them, they are getting troublesome to the Ameer. Sooltan Mohamed Khan also said, that if the Ameer wished to settle with Ufzul Khan, he could send for him here in no time. "I will see what Sooltan Ahmed Jan and Ufzul Khan are," was the Ameer's answer. Rumour is afloat in Cabool that the Ameer himself intends to go to Kandahar." April 28.—Sirdar Mohamed Ufzul Khan's urzee was received from Toorkistan to the following effect:—"The Ambassador of the King of Bokhara has arrived in Toorkistan, and wishes him, Ufzul Khan, to let the King with a small number of troops visit the tomb of Shah Murdan Shurreef, situated in Toorkistan, as the King had been desired to do so by the late King of Bokhara while on his death-bed. The King intends to remain at Shah Murdan for three days and nights, during which time he would distribute food, &c., in charity to the poor."—Delhi Gazette.

Transfer of the Control of the Departmental Staff to Local Governments.

Notification.—Public Works Dept., Gen. Establs., Fort William, May 13.—H.E. the Viceroy and Gov. gen. in Council has determined now to carry out the measure proposed by the Govt. of India, and approved by H.M.'s Govt., of transferring the patronage and control of the staff of the Public Works Dept., under the three Lieut. governorships of Bengal, the N.W. Provinces, and the Punjab, with certain exceptions, from the hands of the Gov. gen. in Council to those of the Hon. the Lieut. govts. of those territories respectively.

2. It is therefore hereby notified that, from the 1st June next, all promotions and appointments in the engineer and other establishments of the Public Works Dept., with the exceptions specified below, will be made by the Lieut. governors without the intervention of the Govt. of India, further than it may deem advisable in the exercise of its general power of control and supervision.

3. The exceptions are as follows:—

First.—The first appointment of officers to the engineer branch of the dept. will continue to be made by the Govt. of India, but on the recommendation of the Local Govts. The distribution of young officers of engns., of civil engr. probationers sent out from England under covenant, and of passed students of the engineering colleges, must also still rest absolutely with the Govt. of India, though due weight will always be given to the applications of the Local Govts.

The same rule will apply to the distribution of military candidates for the subordinate branch, who have passed out of the Thomason College.

Secondly.—It has been usual to reappoint to the department, in their former grades, when deserving of this privilege, when there were vacancies, and when their services could be spared from military duty, military officers returning to India who have served previously in the department, but who have forfeited their appointments under the furlough rules. Such reappointments will henceforward be usually made on application from the Local Governments; but the Gov. gen. in Council reserves the power of nominating any such officer to the department under any Local Government in his former grade, or in a lower grade in which there is a vacancy, should three months pass after the return of such officer to India without an application for his services.

Officers of engineers, in such circumstances, will be considered as having a prior claim to reappointment.

Thirdly.—The appointment of chief engineers, of superintending engineers, and of officers in the railway and account branches of the department, will continue vested in the Government of India; but, on the occurrence of a vacancy in any of these offices, the local governments will recommend an officer to the Gov. gen. in council for nomination.

4. It is to be understood that in all cases the Lieut. governors shall be at liberty to look beyond the limits of their own provinces for officers to fill vacancies; but the services of any officers so selected must be obtained through the Government of India in the ordinary way.

5. The Hon. Lieut. governors are also vested with power to deal with cases of misconduct in officers or subordinates of the public works department. But in the case of members of the engineer establishment, though the local government may order their suspension, final removal from the department will continue to rest with the government of India.

6. The powers now conferred on the Lieut. governors will, of course, be exercised in subjection to existing general rules, and within the existing scales of establishment.

7. General promotions in the gradational list will continue to be made only half-yearly, and on review of recommendation rolls received by the chief engineer and secretary from the superintending engineers. Promotions of qualified officers and subordinates from the probationary rank and promotions or nominations to fill actual vacancies in executive divisions, may be made at any time. But the mere transfer of an officer from one charge to another in order to fill such a vacancy, will not be accompanied by advancement in grade, such advancement being given only in the half-yearly promotion.

8. The total authorised expense for engineer Upper Subordinate and Lower Subordinate Establishments respectively, together with the authorised numerical limit in each grade of the two former, will bound the action of the Local Governments. No reference to the Govt. of India in the Public Works or Financial Department will be required within those limits. When multiplication of works, or other causes, may render it impracticable to provide within those limits for actual requirements, a proposal, accompanied by a tabular statement, embracing the establishment in question, as a whole, should be sent up for submission to the Financial Department.

9. Transfers of officers and upper subordinates from one local government to another will be made by the government of India, when the exigencies of the public service render it necessary; and will also be allowed at the request of individuals, when the convenience of the public service admits.

10. No change is made by this notification in regard to officers and upper subordinates serving in the public works department of the minor administrations, whose appointments and promotions will be made, as heretofore, by the Gov. gen. in council.

PASSAGE MONEY.

May 3.—No. 387.—The foll. paras. of a military letter from the Right Hon. the Sec. of State for India, No. 432, Nov. 17, 1860, are published for general information :—

Your letter of the 2nd August last, No. 202, reports that, as passage money has hitherto been calculated according to rank, it appears to your Govt. that the medical officers, whose relative rank has been raised under the provisions of the late Royal Warrant, are entitled to receive passage money according to their increased rank; and that you have issued instructions to that effect. You further state that the rates of passage allowance fixed by the late Court of Directors might now be revised with advantage as suggested by the officiating military auditor gen. and you request the instructions of H. M.'s Govt. on the subject.

The decision at which you have arrived with respect to the rates of passage allowance of H. M.'s British and Indian medical officers appears to be in conformity with the intention of the Royal Warrants applicable to them. Under this decision a staff or regimental asst. surgeon after six years' full-pay service when entitled by the regulations to passage money will receive the rate fixed for a captain, and so on in the higher grades of relative rank.

With respect to your observation regarding the expediency of revising the present rates of passage money, I have to inform you that I have been for some time in correspondence with the Secretary of State for War with the view of assimilating the rates of passage allowance applicable to India and the rules under which they are drawn with those authorised by the War Office regulations. The result will be hereafter reported to you.

THE BOMBAY TRACT AND BOOK SOCIETY have published 230 books and tracts in the various languages of the Presidency during the past year. They issued from their depository 39,610 publications, exclusive of those imported, and 8,400 copies of the Bamdad and 4,800 copies of the Prabhodaya. Of the above number 29,711 publications were in Marathi; 7,203 in Gujarati; 1,624 in Hindustani; 394 in Portuguese; and 2,078 in English. The number of publications imported was 45,357, which makes the total number issued 96,167.

INCOME-TAX.—Of sixty thousand notices that have been served on the Income-tax payers of the town and island of Bombay, fifty-eight thousand have been duly returned. Of these only eight thousand have been as yet examined by the commissioners. The sum of three lakhs of rupees—or £30,000—have been recovered from the taxpayers up to the present time, without any zoolum that we have heard of being resorted to by the collecting officers.

THE CHOBARS.—The Phoenix has received letters from Sumbulphore to the 12th May, mentioning a descent of the Chobars on the village of Gourchunnah, resulting in the massacre by them of nine of the inhabitants, and wounding of eight others. The village has been burnt to the ground. On the 10th there was another descent of the savages on a place called Burpully, which, however, did not terminate in so many casualties. Considerable panic prevails in the district.

RYOTS AND RENTS.

THE disputes between the planters and the ryots in Lower Bengal have assumed a very dangerous phase, and one that cannot be permitted to continue without subverting all feelings of respect for legal and moral engagements. Encouraged by the partial success that attended their refusal to fulfil their indigo contracts, the peasants now withhold their rents, and set at nought alike the counsels and the decrees of the magistrates. "It is," reports Mr. Wigram, the officiating magistrate and collector of Jessore, "it is only by posting deputy collectors at each factory that rents to any considerable amount have been got in at all." The reasons assigned for this transparently dishonest conduct are twofold. The ryots pretend, in the first place, that it is not that they are unwilling to pay, but that the planters will not receive their money and give proper acknowledgments for it. There is the merest shadow of truth in this excuse. It is true that the planters have declined to accept instalments, and this from what Mr. Wigram admits to be "a not unreasonable fear that a ryot having got one dakhila for a few rupees would fraudulently alter it, or forge as many more as his purpose demanded." What is to be done with such a people as this, who have laid themselves open to be thus characterised in an official report? What hope is there of healthy and pleasant dealings with a nation so essentially dishonest? The magistrate further proceeds to demolish the ryots' excuse by stating that when receipts are offered in Court by the factory Tehsildars, the others still hold back, and he goes on to illustrate this statement as follows:—

"On the last occasion when a petition of this kind was presented in my office by a ryot vociferously crying for assistance and imploring me to receive in deposit his rent, which the planter had refused, I agreed, contrary to custom, to do so, and desired him to hand over the money; upon which, after some hesitation, he requested two days' time to consider, and left my Court. And similar incidents have been of frequent occurrence in the offices of my subordinates. On one occasion the planter, happening to enter the office of a deputy collector, I think at Magoorah, where a number of ryots were complaining that their rents were refused, took the bag of money from the nearest man, and then and there gave him a receipt; but by the time the receipt was written not another ryot remained in the Cutcherry."

The second excuse pleaded by the ryots is said to be more tangible. They allege that their rents have been arbitrarily enhanced, contrary to law and usage, and that the accounts-current between themselves and the factories have been so loosely kept that it is difficult to strike a fair balance. It seems to be admitted that the planters, finding it almost impossible to obtain the execution of their indigo contracts, have turned their attention more closely to the improvement of their zemindaries and to the collection of the full jumma due by the peasants. So long as their tenants went on furnishing the plant, they were not pressed to settle their rents with much strictness, and a sort of understanding existed that the cultivators of indigo should be gently dealt with in this respect. But now that the plant is not forthcoming, the planter in self-defence is driven to exact the full amount of rent due to him, and the ryot, unaccustomed to such exactness, regards the demand as unjust and oppressive. It is clear that in this instance the planters are entitled to prompt protection, for otherwise M. Proudhon's doctrine will come to be established in Bengal, that la propriété c'est le vol. And it is also worthy of notice that the planters appear disposed to treat their ryots with every possible indulgence. They are compelled, indeed, to take out decrees, but in very few instances have they applied for execution, and those principally for ejectment of inveterate defaulters. The system hitherto pursued has evidently been loose, confused, and unbusiness-like, and some sort of compromise should, therefore, be made with all ryots who will undertake to pay with regularity for the future the amount of jumma agreed upon. There is probably something to be forgiven on both sides, but that is no reason why the European zemindar should be deprived of what is justly his due. A large proportion of old arrears will have to be written off to loss, but as those were never expected to be realised the loss will be rather nominal than real. Unfortunately, the natives have taken up the idea that the Government favours their cause as against the independent settler, and this impression will not be easily removed unless local magistrates are both empowered, and instructed, to act with decision in support of the just claims of the zemindars. A combination is known to exist among the natives for the purpose of resisting the indigo cultivation, and this is now extended to opposing the payment of rent. All such combinations are undoubtedly illegal, and would make even a good cause utterly bad. We shall hope, therefore, to hear that the Lieutenant-Governor has taken prompt and vigorous action in this matter, and that the ryots have been brought to a proper understanding of their relations to the planter-zemindar.

THE INDIAN NAVY.

"THE Indian Navy," said Mr. Laing in his speech on the Indian Budget, "cost nearly one million a year, and what was there to show for it? It is no disparagement to the well-known courage of our gallant Indian Navy to say that the whole fleet could not stand a broadside from a man-of-war of modern construction and armament. In the event of a naval war, we must trust to Britannia to rule the seas, and, really, in these hard times India cannot afford to go on paying a million a year for the honour and glory of having a navy of her own, which is no real protection." In this flippant and vulgar style Mr. Laing thought it becoming in him to announce the contemplated abolition of an honourable and distinguished Service. The tone of his whole speech, indeed, would have been more suitable to a familiar address to the electors and unenfranchised politicians of a third-rate borough than it was to a financial statement delivered in the presence of a small number of intelligent, experienced, and highly-educated gentlemen. His metaphors were drawn from the hunting-field and the prize-ring, and he was certainly justified in not expecting to attain an oratorical triumph. Our present object, however, is not to expose his shortcomings as a public speaker, but to point out the most prominent fallacies in the paragraph with which this article commences.

In the first place, Mr. Laing assumes that the abolition of the Indian Navy must necessarily relieve the revenues of India to the full extent of its present cost. He takes it for granted that the Government of that country will not be called upon to defray any portion of the additional charges incurred by the Admiralty in undertaking the duties now performed by the local service. But it is obvious from the remarks that have been made upon this subject in the British Parliament that India will be required to bear her share of the imperial burdens. It is only just that this should be the case, nor is there any reason why the naval relations of the two countries should be regulated on a different principle from their military relations. There is little probability, however, that Mr. Laing will be permitted to carry out his measures of annihilation, merely because "in these hard times India cannot afford to go on paying a million a year for the honour and glory of having a navy of her own." It is really childish to talk in this manner of a navy that was never intended to suffice for the protection of British interests in the Indian seas, but which has on all occasions rendered excellent service in proportion to its numerical force. In both the Burmese Wars, in the China War of 1842, and in the Persian Expedition of 1856 it greatly distinguished itself, and received the thanks of both Houses of Parliament. Not less conspicuous were the zeal and gallantry displayed by its men and officers at the siege of Moultan in 1848, and on numerous occasions during the late rebellion. That the same services might have been rendered with equal efficiency by a squadron of the British Navy no man in his senses will deny; but the work certainly could not have been better done. There is also this advantage in favour of a local marine, that it is sure to be always at hand to meet a sudden and unexpected emergency. Something, too, must be allowed for acclimatization, and much more for local knowledge and acquaintance with the habits and language of the native population, especially as regards staff employment. Sir Charles Wood, indeed, only speaks of diminishing the force, as the suppression of the slave trade along the coast of Africa may be supposed to set free a certain number of vessels. But, as a fact, that inhuman traffic still exists, and is only kept under by the presence of the very ships which Sir Charles proposes to withdraw. He admits, however, that a portion of the force would still be required as a transport service and for surveying purposes, as well as for the protection of commercial interests in the Persian Gulf. It will also be found that fast steamers with a moderate draught are indispensable for the suppression of piracy along the vast seaboard of the Indian Peninsula, and among the many groups of islands which stud the Southern Seas. All this can unquestionably be done by the British Navy; but it will probably prove desirable to keep a considerable force permanently in those waters, as everything depends upon an intimate knowledge of every rock, islet, and shoal. It cannot, then, be a wise proceeding to lay upon the shelf a body of officers regularly trained to the efficient discharge of those difficult and delicate duties. We do not allude to the question of compensation, because there is evidently no wish on the part of the Government to act illiberally towards the Indian Services. Every consideration will, no doubt, be shown to those who are obliged to retire, and no one will have any reasonable ground of complaint on that score. Still, it may be questioned if either sound policy or temporary expediency will be promoted by any considerable reduction of the present local force, in which case Mr. Laing's Budget will be found no more reliable than his predecessor's. One word in parting, which we would whisper in the ear of the officers of the Indian Navy. They complain that they have no interest, no powerful friends, no sympathy from the public. Are they surprised at this when they remember the incivility and overbearing demeanour they have been in the habit of displaying towards the unfortunate passengers compelled to go in their ships to and from Aden and Bombay? Their sin has found them out, and of course they are displeased.

MAPS OF INDIA & CHINA.

MAP of INDIA; showing the British Territories subdivided into Collectorates, and the position and boundary of each Native State; chiefly compiled from Trigonometrical Surveys, executed by order of the Honourable Court of Directors of the East India Company. On six sheets—Size, 5 ft. 6 in. high; 5 ft. 8 in. wide. £2; or, on cloth, in a case, £2. 13s. 6d.; or, with rollers and varnished, £3. 3s.

The object kept in view in compiling this map has been to render it available to the greatest possible extent for popular use. For this purpose the names of all stations, civil and military, are inserted, as well as those of all towns and places of note likely to be looked for. To make clear the subdivisions of the whole of the country, both British and native, the limits of the various districts and collectorates, with their names, are distinctly indicated. The railways and telegraphs are laid down, and the trunk roads conspicuously coloured. The newly-acquired district in Burmah is included. To avoid, however, the confusion consequent upon over-crowding, and make the map clear and easy for reference, the names of many small villages, and places of no present importance, have been omitted, and thus a very wide measure of comprehensiveness has been attained, while needless diffusiveness has been avoided.

A GENERAL MAP of INDIA; compiled chiefly from Surveys executed by order of the Honourable East India Company, with the railways and telegraphs. On six sheets—Size, 5 ft. 3 in. wide; 5 ft. 4 in. high. £2; or, on cloth, in a case, £2. 12s. 6d.; or, with rollers and varnished, £3. 3s.

MAP of the ROUTES in INDIA; with Tables of Distances between the principal Towns and Military Stations. On one sheet—Size 2 ft. 3 in. wide; 2 ft. 9 in. high. 9s.; or, on cloth, in a case, 12s.

In this map are given the whole of the military and civil stations, together with the principal towns, the villages being omitted, so as to make the stations more prominent. The colouring defines the boundaries of the three Presidencies, and shows also the railways and telegraphs.

MAP of the PUNJAB and SIKH TERRITORY. On one sheet, 5s.; or, on cloth, in a case, 6s.

MAP of AFGHANISTAN, and the ADJACENT COUNTRIES. On one sheet—Size 2 ft. 3 in. wide; 2 ft. 9 in. high. 9s.; or, on cloth, in a case, 12s.

MAP of CHINA, from the most Authentic Sources of Information. One large sheet—Size, 2 ft. 7 in. wide; 2 ft. 2 in. high. 8s.; or, on cloth, in a case, 11s.

MAP of the BURMAN EMPIRE, showing the Annexed District of Pegu. One sheet, 3s. 6d.; or, on cloth, in a case, 5s.

A MAP of the WESTERN PROVINCES of HINDOOSTAN, the PUNJAB, CABOOL, SINDE, BHAWULPORE, &c., including all the States between Candahar and Allahabad. On four sheets—Size, 4 ft. 4 in. wide; 4 ft. 2 in. high. 30s.; or, on cloth, in a case, £2; rollers, and varnished, £2. 10s.

MAP of ARABIA, from all the most recent Authorities, by order of the Court of Directors of the East India Company. Size, 3 ft. 3 in. high; 4 ft. 3 in. wide. On cloth, in a case, £1. 5s.

HAND-BOOK to the MAPS of INDIA, giving the Latitude and Longitude of all places of note. By Major H. V. STEPHEN, late of Bengal Army Revenue Survey Department. In 18mo. bound, price 6s.

MAP of INDIA; from the most recent Authorities, showing the railways and telegraphs. On two sheets—Size, 2 ft. 10 in. wide; 3 ft. 3 in. high. 16s.; or, on cloth, in a case, £1s. 1s.
